CLACKMANNAN.

CLACKMANNAN, the capital of its county and likewise of the shire, though not entitled to rank as the latter from either its size, commercial importance, or population, is 32 miles N.W. from Edinburgh, and two from Alloa, pleasantly situated on an eminence, gently rising out of a plain from east to west to the height of nearly two hundred feet above the level of the Forth. At one period this was a town of some consequence; but since the improvement of Alloa, and the superior commercial facilities possessed by that place, Clackmannan has sunk into comparative insignificance; the surrounding scenery, however, is of a very delightful description, and is viewed to great advantage from Clackmannan Tower, which occupies a commanding site a little west of the town. Tradition states that this tower was built by King Robert Bruce, close to which he had his palace, not a vestige of which latter now remains. The tower is eighty feet high and contains a variety of apartments, reached by means of a spiral staircase.

The principal trade is that derived from the coal mines, which supply employment and humble competence to many of the industrious classes; there is also an extensive fire-brick works close to the railway station, and two chemical manure manufactories, within a short distance of the town. The soil of the parish is considered the richest arable in the shire, and is under the best state of cultivation. It has a shipping port of its own; thousands of tons of coal are yearly shipped at this port. The places of worship are the Parish church, a Free church, and one for United Presbyterians. The first mentioned, erected in 1814, at an expense of £4,500, is a spacious and handsome structure, equal to the accommodation of two thousand persons. The other public institutions are the parochial school, a ladies' school, two other subscription schools, and a society for general religious purposes.

POST OFFICE, CLACKMANNAN, Adam Bayne, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Alloa) at half-past six and at ten morning, and are despatched thereto at a quarter before seven morning, and at forty minutes past five evening. The nearest Money Order Office is at Alloa.

DOLLAR, ALVA, AND TILLICOULTRY.

DOLLAR is a parish and village, having a population of nearly 2000. It is situate at the base of the Ochil Hills, near their eastern extremity, on the road from Stirling to Kinross—9 miles from Clackmannan, 7 from Alloa, 12 from Stirling, and 12 from Kinross. A great proportion of the consequence this village now enjoys is to be ascribed to its Academy, which was erected and endowed by the munificent bequest of John Macnab, a native of the parish, who, though originally a herd boy, acquired, by industry and perseverance, a large fortune. By his last will he directed that one-half of that fortune should be vested in the public funds, or some such security, in order that it might yield an annual income "for the endowment of a Charity or School for the Poor of the Parish of Dollar." The bequest was made to the minister and elders of the parish, for the time being, as trustees. A very handsome edifice was erected in 1819, and masters appointed to teach the Hebrew, Greek, and Latin languages, together with English, French, and other modern tongues; mathematics, natural philosophy, geography, botany, drawing, writing, and arithmetic. Three female teachers are also connected with the institution. In the centre of the building is a large hall, containing "The Library," with about 5,000 volumes. These books are lent to pupils and heads of families having children at the academy, free of charge. Adjoining the academy is a well-kept garden of about five acres, to which pupils and the public have access. The children of poor parents belonging to the parish, or who have gained a settlement in it, are entitled to free instruction and books. Other special advantages are enjoyed by those who distinguish themselves in the classes. Many of these, after completing their studies, have risen to eminent positions in life. The number of pupils at the present time (1866) is upwards of 500; a considerable portion being boarders from various parts of the United Kingdom and the continent. The scheme of education is regulated so as to prepare either for the universities, for commercial pursuits, or for civil engineering. The engineering course is recognised by the Secretary of State for India, as adequate for the preparation of candidates for civil engineering in that country. The entire staff of the institution embraces the principal and sixteen teachers. Boarders are received by the principal, some of the masters, and other respectable residents. In 1847, an act of parliament was obtained, constituting a new and extended board of trustees, some of whom are not necessarily members of the Established Church. Dollar now boasts a goodly number of genteel houses and elegant villas, a respectable hotel, and numerous well-furnished shops. It has also two handsome churches, Established and Free; a commodious Mission hall, a branch of the Clydesdale bank, and extensive bleach works, the property of Wm. J. Haig, Esq. About a mile from the village is the venerable ruin of Castle Campbell, once the occasional residence of the Argyll family, and which was taken in 1644 by the Marquis of Montrose. The remains occupy the summit of a high and almost insulated rock; and in the hill itself is a remarkable chasm, called 'Kemp's Score,' which still bears some marks of a stair. The situation of these relics of former strength and grandeur is highly romantic and interesting, and will amply repay the tourist for turning aside to contemplate both the ruins and the scenery. The name of John Knox, the Scottish reformer, is intimately associated with Castle Campbell. In the autumn of 1864 application was made by the people of Dollar to Sir Andrew Orr, the proprietor of the estate, for permission to construct a new footpath, making access to the ruin more easy, and opening up some of the most wild and beautiful scenery imaginable. The desired permission was readily granted. A subscription was commenced, which soon amounted to upwards of £100; and in the month of May, 1865, the path was opened. It is fully a mile and a half in length, and embraces, besides the land scenery, a number of beautiful waterfalls. The attractions of the place have thus been greatly increased. About four miles from Dollar, on the way to Kinross, there is some celebrated scenery, known as the Rumbling Bridge, Devil's Mill, and Caldron Linn. Here, also, is an excellent hotel, under the management of Mr. Duncan McAra. Population of the parish in 1861, 1776.

ALVA is a parish and thriving village, the latter three miles north from Alloa, two west from Tillicoultry, and five west from Dollar, charmingly situated at the foot of the Ochils, whence issues a stream that turns several mills, and forms, in its course through the romantic and interesting glen of Alva, three beautiful cataracts. The largest of the falls issues from an aperture in the rock above, and tumbles from a height of forty feet in one unbroken mass into a naturally-formed basin below. This parish belongs to Stirlingshire, although locally detached from that county, and surrounded on all sides by Clackmannan. It affords excellent pasture, is in some places well cultivated, and the hills abound with valuable ores, such as silver, copper, iron, and lead. Sir John Erskine, of Alva, about the year 1715, assisted by some miners from Leadhills, discovered a very rich vein of silver, in a romantic glen, about midway between Alva House, and the village. The precious metal made its appearance in small threads, which, upon being followed, led to a very rich mass of ore; some of it was so rich, that fourteen ounces of ore yielded twelve ounces of silver. So easily was the deposit of treasure reached, that not more than £50 sterling had been expended on it when the prize was found; and during a space of little more than three months, it is said that ore was obtained, from which Sir John drew from £40 000 to £50,000, besides what the workmen dishonestly appropriated to themselves. After this mass was exhausted, the ore became so scarce as not to repay the expense of working, and hence the enterprize was abandoned. The district also abounds with coal, which is wrought to a great extent, and vast quantities are shipped to distant parts. The manufacture of woollen goods, consisting of fancy plaids, shawls, tartans, &c., is carried on in the village and its neighbourhood very extensively, and numerous hands find busy employment in the different mills—these, with their tall red chimneys, exhibit an interesting contrast with the lofty Ochils and the surrounding plain. Alva far surpasses some of the Scottish burghs for its mercantile activity and importance. In the village is a branch of the Union Bank of Scotland. The 'House of Alva,' the residence of James Johnstone, Esq., stands on an eminence, projecting from the base of Wood-hill, about two hundred and twenty feet above the bed of the Devon, which flows westward to join the Forth in the valley below, and fourteen hundred below the apex of the mountain. From the summit, which rises to an elevation of 1,770 feet above sea level, the eye sweeps over an immense range of picturesque and interesting scenery, stretching all the way from the German ocean on the east, to the Campsie hills on the west, and includes, among other attractive objects, the Lammermuir chain, the Bass Rock, Edinburgh, Arthur's Seat, the Pentland hills, and the lovely and classic windings of the Forth. Perhaps the most interesting object for an antiquarian in the whole parish of Alva would be the Well of St. Leif, or Lewanus—the tutelar saint of the district, which continues to pour out its bright and sweet waters in the minister's glebe at a little distance from the parish church.

TILLICOULTRY, a manufacturing village, two miles east of Alva, and three west of Dollar, is pleasantly situated on the side of the Ochil Hills, and on the road from Stirling to Kinross—nine miles from the former, and fifteen from the latter town. A branch of the North British Railway runs between Alloa and the village, and a parliamentary bill was obtained for the formation of a railway between it and the county town of Kinross. It is well supplied with excellent water from a stream that issues from the hills immediately behind the village. The river Devon, when not far from its source, and when flowing eastward, forms the northern boundary of the parish of Tillicoultry; and, after pursuing a circuitous course of about 14 miles beyond the parish, again enters it running westward, and cuts its arable plain into two nearly equal parts. The village of Tillicoultry is rapidly rising into a place of considerable importance from the woollen manufacture established here, and likewise at DEVONSIDE, chiefly for making shawls, fancy plaids, clan tartans, tweeds, &c., and at the great exhibition of 1851, the Messrs. Paton, of this village, carried off the first prize for the finest woollen shawls manufactured in Great Britain. In these branches the village and its neighbourhood furnish employment to a very large number of the industrious class, some of the mills supporting between nine hundred and a thousand persons. Though recognised only as a village, yet Tillicoultry considerably exceeds in size, and far exceeds in commercial enterprise and importance, very many of the Scottish burghs; and the same remark, with nearly equal propriety, may be applied to its neighbour Alva. Branches of the Clydesdale Banking Company and the Union Bank of Scotland are established in the village, and an institute has been erected by subscription. The parish abounds with coal, which is profitably worked, and there is a good quarry of freestone. The scenery of this neighbourhood is as interesting as that in any other part of this charming little county. Bencleuch, the loftiest of the Ochils, rises directly to north of the village, to the height of two thousand three hundred feet above the level of the sea. The view from the summit of this mountain is very grand and extensive. The hills to the northward are said to contain various kinds of minerals; and about a century ago a copper mine here was wrought by a London company: the metal sold at £50 per ton, but from the thinness of the seams the works were abandoned as unprofitable. The principal antiquities are the ruins of a circular building on a steep and rugged basaltic eminence which rises to the north of the village, and the remains of a druidical circle on the south end of a rising ground lying to the east of it, called Cuninghar. The places of worship are a church of the Establishment, a Free church, a United Presbyterian church, and one belonging to a congregation of the Evangelical Union. There is an excellent parish school in the village, which is well attended, and also several private schools, all well conducted, and attended by a considerable number of pupils.

DUMBARTONSHIRE,

ANCIENTLY designated LENNOX, and subsequently Dun-bartonshire (which latter, though not the most popular, is the proper appellation), is a small county in the west of Scotland, and considered as within the boundary of the Highlands. On the west it is separated from Argyleshire by Loch Long; Perthshire touches its northern extremity; the county of Stirling bounds it on the east, and also on the north; Lanarkshire on the south-east; and the Clyde separates it from the county of Renfrew on the south. The figure of this county is rather singular: it describes almost a perfect crescent or semicircle, protruding on the south and south-west—its concavity being filled, through its whole extent, on the north and north-east, by the county of Stirling. The distance between its eastern and northern extremities is nearly forty miles: while the breadth of the shire is from five to thirteen, and in one part it is only two miles broad. The parishes of Cumbernauld and Kirkintilloch, however, are not included in this measurement, being detached from the main portion on the south-east, and lying between the counties of Lanark and Stirling. This severed portion of the county is twelve miles long, by from two to four and a half miles broad, and was annexed to the district in the reign of Robert I. Altogether the shire comprises two hundred and ninty seven square miles: between fifty and sixty thousand acres are cultivated, and the remainder are mostly pastoral hills, woods, and lakes—of the latter there are about thirty-one square miles.

NAME AND EARLY HISTORY.—In ancient times the appellation of the shire was Levenach, signifying 'the country of the Leven,' which was corrupted in the course of years to Levenax, and more latterly to Lennox. Originally this district was the residence of a British tribe designated the Attacottie, or Eithacocti, a word importing 'dwellers along the extremity of the wood.' The descendants of this people were not enslaved, or expelled from their hunting grounds, by the Romans: they became known as the Britons of Strath-Clyde; and, though almost perpetually at variance with their neighbours, they remained a distinct race till the reign of Malcolm IV. From these people the name of Dumbartonshire is said to be derived, and taken from the appellation of the castle, signifying 'the hill of the Britons.' This region, until the early part of the last century, continued to be the ready prey of certain lawless Highland clans, who lurked in the recesses of its interior; and were finally extirpated, or reduced to quiescence and subordination, only by the most vigorous measures that could be adopted by the civil government of the country. It was at one period the property of a powerful family of Saxon origin, one of whom, called Alwyn, the son of Arkil, was elevated to be Earl of Lennox in the reign of William the Lion, and his descendants for several centuries were at once heritable sheriffs of the county and chief possessors of its lands. The Earldom of Lennox was raised to a Dukedom in 1581; but Charles, the sixth Duke, dying without issue in 1672, the honours of the family, including the Earldom of Darnley, devolved upon Charles II, as nearest male heir, who bestowed them on his natural son, Charles Lennox, after whose demise the estates were sold.

PRODUCE, MANUFACTURES, &c.—In recent times great improvements have been effected in this county, and every year its prolificacy and value are increasing in amount. The soil and climate having been found favourable to the growth of timber, the district now wears a warmer and more cheerful aspect than formerly, while the income accruing from produce has been in a corresponding degree augmented. The cattle of the shire are chiefly of the West Highland breed, some of which are reared in the county; the dairy has become an object of attention and profit on most farms. The roads througout have been greatly extended and improved within the last sixty years, a measure highly conducive to the agricultural and manufacturing interests. A century has elapsed since the manufacturing dawn broke upon this part of Scotland; bleach-fields, about that period, made their appearance on the banks of Loch Lomond and the Leven. About 1768 the first print-works were established on the Leven; soon afterwards others sprung into operation, and at this time there are various manufactures carried on throughout the shire. Ship-building, both iron and wood, is a branch of great importance, and is carried on with spirit at Dumbarton. Until 1831 the glass-works of this county were in high repute, Dumbarton being their chief seat; but they have now ceased to exist. Dumbartonshire does not contain numerous mineral treasures within its bosom; but it has an abundance of freestone and slate, and some ironstone.

MOUNTAINS, LAKES, &c.—These are the most remarkable objects in the county: of the former, the chief are those of Arrochar, Luss, Row, and Roseneath, which are inaccessible to the plough, and abound with moors, mosses, and woods; the hills of Kilpatrick, on the south, are much less elevated: Benvoirlich, adjoining Perthshire, has the highest altitude, rising 3,330 feet above the level of the sea. The precipitous and rugged summits of these mountains, constituting the Highland district, are frequently capped with snow, and in the finest weather hid amidst the clouds: some of these eminences are apparently volcanic, particularly the rock on which Dumbarton Castle stands. There are about ten lakes or lochs; among these are Loch Long and Loch Gare, projecting into the Highland territory from the Firth of Clyde; but the most extensive, and, perhaps, the most beautiful lake in Scotland, is that of Loch Lomond: it lies at the foot of the Grampian mountains, which terminate here, but seem to rise in many islands that appear a continuation of them, or like fragments torn off by some violent convulsion of nature. These islands, thirty-two in number, are lofty and picturesque: on Inch Cailoch (or the Island of Nuns) are the remains of a conventual church; and on Inch Murrins (or the Island of Saint Murrinus), two miles long, and converted into a deer-park, are the ruins of a house once belonging to the Lennox family. This magnificent expanse of water is thirty miles long, in some places, eight broad, and covers a surface of 20,000 acres; the depth varies from twenty to one hundred fathoms: it abounds with delicious trout, and the southern part has salmon: the purity of the stream and the richness of its banks sooth the mind of the traveller; while the bleach-fields, print-works, and cotton mills, the villages, hamlets and gentlemen's seats, scattered over an apparently remote district, must impress him with an exalted idea of the industry and wealth of the inhabitants. The lake discharges its waters into the Clyde by the river Leven, which is the only stream of any note in the district. The North British Railway, possesses stations at Dumbarton, Cardross, Helensburgh, Renton, Alexandria, and Balloch, and the Edinburgh and Glasgow line has stations at Castle Cary and Kirkintilloch.

DIVISION, REPRESENTATION, &c.—Dumbartonshire is divided into twelve parishes, ten of which form the presbytery of Dumbarton; it contains but one royal burgh—Dumbarton, four burghs of barony, and three villages. The only contributory burgh, or that which, in conjunction with others is represented in the senate, belonging to the county is Dumbarton; it unites with Renfrew, Rutherglen, Kilmarnock, and Port Glasgow, in returning one member to the Imperial parliament. The parliamentary constituency in 1865 was 1,567, and the present (1866) member for the county, is Patrick Boyle Smollett, Esq.

BONHILL, ALEXANDRIA, BALLOCH, KILMARONOCK, RENTON, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

BONHILL is a thriving little town, in the parish of its name, 61 miles W. of Edinburgh, 18 N.W. from Glasgow, 3 N. from Dumbarton, and within one mile of the beautiful and celebrated Loch Lomond; situated on the east side of the Leven, and connected with Alexandria by an iron suspension bridge. Very considerable business is done here in calico printing; and it is altogether a prosperous little place. The town consists of one long and tolerably well built street; about the centre of it, on the margin of the Leven, stands the parish church, a fine building, of Gothic architecture, with a square tower, containing a handsome clock; it was finished in 1836, at an expense of nearly £8,000, and contains about twelve hundred sittings. A Free church, erected in 1844, is an elegant building of red freestone, with a tapering spire. It occupies a commanding site, a little to the south of the parish church. On a gentle eminence near the new bridge is an United Presbyterian church, erected in 1830; and about a mile north of the town, at the small village of Jamestown, is the parish school. There is also a subscription school in the town, which was erected in 1790, and a society which provides education for children whose parents are not in a condition to secure such advantage for them. In 1836 a fine suspension bridge of iron was thrown over the Leven: the span is 438 feet, and it cost, with the approaches, £2,200, which was defrayed by Captain Smollett, of Bonhill. It was erected by Mr. C. Atherton, of Glasgow, civil engineer. The land on both sides of the Leven is in a high state of cultivation, which, together with respectable residences, and recent improvements and erections, impart to this place an appearance highly prepossessing. A fair is held on the first Thursday in February for horses.

BALLOCH is situated at the south end of Loch Lomond, and about a mile north-west from Bonhill; it contains a good inn, and is the terminus of the North British, and Forth, and Clyde Railways. In 1842, Sir James Colquhoun, Bart. of Luss, erected an elegant suspension bridge across the Leven water, previous to which passengers were greatly inconvenienced by the ferry then in use. This bridge is twenty miles from Glasgow, by Renton and Dumbarton, but by avoiding the latter place, and passing through Bonhill, the distance is reduced to eighteen miles. A fair is held at Balloch on the Tuesday before the last Wednesday in April for horses, cattle, and hirelings, and on the 15th of September for the sale of horses.

KILMARONOCK is a small parish adjoining that of Bonhill, and is situated a little to the north-east of that village. It contains nothing worthy of note but the parish church and parochial school; a United Presbyterian church and school are likewise in the parish.

ALEXANDRIA is an increasing and considerable village, on the west side of the Leven, opposite to Bonhill. On the banks of the river are several extensive print works. Its site is more commanding than that of Bonhill, and its situation both healthful and pleasant. There are four schools in the village, all well conducted institutions. About a mile from the village stands Tullichewin Castle, a noble edifice, the residence of James Campbell, Esq., from which an extensive view of the river, and of the vale through which it winds, is obtained. Between this seat and Alexandria is the neat mansion of Broomley, which is also the property of the same gentleman; and two miles distant is Cameron House, the tasteful residence of P. B. Smollett, Esq., M.P. of Bonhill. The places of worship here are one of the Establishment, a Free church, and a chapel each for the United Presbyterians, Independents, and Roman Catholics. A handsome public hall has been erected, and is centrally situated, at the bridge end.

RENTON is also a large village, in the parish of Cardross, one mile S.W. from Bonhill, the like distance S. from Alexandria, and 2 N. from Dumbarton, most eligibly situated on the west bank of the Leven, which winds with much beauty below the village, and on its banks are two extensive print works. In the immediate neighbourhood of Renton is the old mansion house of Dalquburn, in which the celebrated historian and novelist, Tobias Smollett, was born. A monumental column, bearing a latin inscription, is here erected to his memory; it is a round pillar of stonework, sixty feet in height, springing from a square base. This memorial was erected by the descendants of that talented individual. In the village is an Established church, two Free churches, and one belonging to the Reformed Presbyterians.

CUMBERNAULD, CONDORRET, & NEIGHBOURHOODS.

CUMBERNAULD is an ancient village in the parish of its name; 33 miles W. from Edinburgh, 29 E. from Dumbarton, 14 N.E. from Glasgow, 13 S. from Stirling, 9 W. from Falkirk, 7 E. from Kirkintilloch, and 7 N. from Airdrie; situate on the main road between Glasgow and Edinburgh through Falkirk, about two miles south of the Forth and Clyde canal, and the line of railway between Edinburgh and Glasgow. The principal business is the weaving of checks, and other striped cotton fabrics, by hand-loom, for the Glasgow manufacturers; and in the neighbourhood are several coal and lime works, and a quarry of good freestone. The parish church is at the west end of the village, occupying a commanding site, and embosomed amongst trees. Cumbernauld possesses a good public library and subscription news room. The country around the village is well wooded, and agreeably varied with gentle eminences and rural dales. The principal mansion in the parish is Cumbernauld House. The annual fair is held on the second Thursday in May for cattle and horses, and first Tuesday in August and November.

CONDORRET is a small village in the parish of, and about three miles west from Cumbernauld. The inhabitants are chiefly employed at the hand loom, in weaving checks and lappet muslins for the manufacturing Glasgow houses.

POST OFFICE, CUMBERNAULD, James Shaw, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Glasgow), Sundays excepted, at half-past nine morning, and evening at half-past five, and are despatched thereto at seven morning, and evening at a quarter past six.

DUMBARTON,

WITH THE VILLAGE OF CARDROSS AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

DUMBARTON is a royal burgh and sea-port, the capital of the county and of the parish to which it gives name; 59 miles W. from Edinburgh, 15 N.W. from Glasgow, 8 S.E. from Helensburgh, and 3 S. from Bonhill, situate on a low piece of ground, encompassed on its western quarter by the Leven, about half a mile from its junction with the Clyde, and almost secluded from the view of persons on the latter river by the intervening castle of Dumbarton, which stands on a huge rocky eminence on the edge of the Frith, about half a mile from the town. The rock of Dumbarton measures a mile in circumference at its base, diminishing in breadth near the top, which is cloven into two summits, one higher than the other, these are almost perpendicular, and rise to the height of more than three hundred feet. The fortress is entered by a gate at the bottom, and within the rampart which defends the entrance is the guardhouse and lodging for the officers; from hence the ascent is by some flights of steps to the part where the rock divides; here is a strong battery, barracks for the garrison, and a reservoir always filled with water; above these are several batteries which command a most extensive range, especially up and down the Clyde; its defences are kept in constant repair, and it is garrisoned by a limited body of military and functionaries. The house of the governor is injudiciously placed in the cleft of the rock, and erected in a style quite out of character with the picturesque outlines of the precipice. Some parts of the rocks are magnetic, and from the crevices there grows a profusion of wild plants, amongst which appropriately predominates the Scotch thistle, now an exceedingly rare production in its natural state. The rock of Dumbarton has been occupied by works of a warlike character throughout the successive dynasties of eighteen hundred years, and consequently is the most ancient stronghold in the country of which any record or tradition is preserved. In Bede's time it was deemed almost impregnable; but it was reduced by famine in 756, and taken by escalade in 1571; at other periods it has sustained sieges and assaults which our space will not permit us to detail.

Dumbarton suffered severely from an inundation of the rivers Clyde and Leven some time prior to 1607, for in that year parliament granted the inhabitants 37,000 merks Scottish for raising bulwarks to prevent a similar calamity, with a cession of all the recovered lands. The burgh has greatly improved since 1855, when the Harbour and Police Acts were adopted; the present town is chiefly composed of one main street, lying in a semicircular form round the head or west end of the peninsula; there are some bye thoroughfare lanes and detached houses, and a suburb on the west side of the Leven, leading to Renton; it is connected with the latter by a good stone bridge of five arches, reaching three hundred feet in length. The waters of the Leven form a commodious harbour, and to promote the facility of trade an excellent quay and capacious dock have been constructed, principally at the expense of the late James Lang, Esq., a considerable proprietor in the vicinity. The streets, shops, and principal houses are lighted with gas, by a company formed in 1832. The town is plentifully supplied with water from the Long Craigs, and the drainage is being rapidly completed. Dumbarton was long famed for the manufacture of crown glass; but that branch was extinguished by the death, in 1831, of all the principal proprietors of the works. The discontinuance of this source of industry proved a serious drawback upon the previous prosperity of the town for when these works were in active operation they furnished labour to three hundred workmen, and annually consumed 15,000 tons of coal, besides employing 10,000 tons of shipping—and paid from £40,000 to £50,000 excise duties per annum; the property lately passed into other hands, and the engineering establishment of Messrs. Denny & Co., now occupies a portion of the premises. The principal trade, and on which the prosperity of the town chiefly depends is that of ship building, which is carried on here extensively and with great spirit, and at which about three thousand men are employed. There are five extensive yards, three being almost exclusively for the construction of iron ships; and perhaps, no other town in Britain can surpass Dumbarton in this line of business. Brewing, tanning, ironfounding, and sail and rope making are also carried on to a limited extent. In the High street there is a branch establishment of the 'Commercial Bank of Scotland,' another of the 'Union Bank of Scotland,' also one of the 'Clydesdale Bank.'

The premises lately occupied by the 'Union Bank of Scotland' proving two small for their increasing business, a new and handsome building has been erected on the same site, giving ample accommodation, and from the architectural taste displayed, adding materially to the improvement of the town. Dumbarton was erected into a royal burgh by Alexander II. in the year 1221: and its privileges (including the right of fishing in the Leven), were confirmed by a charter from James VI. in 1609. The municipal government is vested in a provost, three bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, and nine councillors. The sheriff ordinary court and the commissary court are held every Tuesday and Friday during session, the sheriff small debt court every Tuesday during the session, and on vacation court days. Quarter sessions are held on the first Tuesday of March, May, and August, and last Tuesday in October. The burgh unites with Renfrew, Rutherglen, Kilmarnock, and Port Glasgow in returning one member to parliament. Kilmarnock is the returning burgh. The original County and Burgh buildings were completed in 1825, at an expense exceeding £5,000, the accommodation being found inadequate, in 1863, the interior was entirely reconstructed, and two spacious wings also added, thereby giving ample accommodation at a cost of £5,170. They form a noble structure, and contain convenient court-rooms, with every suitable office; the goal is placed at the rear of the court-house. A combination Poor House was completed in 1865, at a cost of about £7,000, it is situated on the outskirts of the town, in a healthy and pleasant locality.

At the east end of High street stands the parish church, a handsome edifice, with a fine spire and clock: the erection was perfected in 1811, of a cost of £6,000. The other places of worship are a Free Church, two United Presbyterian Chapels, an Episcopal Church, a Wesleyan Methodist Church, and a Roman Catholic Chapel. All that now remains of the ancient Collegiate Church, founded in 1450, by Isabella, Duchess of Albany, and Countess of Lennox, and dedicated to St. Patrick, is one of the tower arches which has been removed and placed at the entrance of the late Burgh School, in Church street, the original site being required for the formation of the Dumbartonshire railway, which passes in the immediate vicinity of this once extensive pile. The principal educational establishment is the Burgh Academy—a truly eminent institution of long standing. The late building proving insufficient for the growing requirements of the town, a much larger and really handsome erection has been provided, through the liberality of the council and inhabitants. The style adopted is French Gothic, of the thirteenth century, the building presents a frontage of 132 feet, and is adorned by a beautifully ornamented central tower, 140 feet high. In the rear of the Academy is a large Public Hall, embracing every convenience, and capable of accommodating an audience of about 750. The expense of erection of both buildings was about £6,000. There are other well conducted instructional foundations in the town, connected with all the religious denominations. There are two weekly newspapers, the 'Dumbarton Herald' and the 'Lennox Herald,' established here, likewise three good inns. A mechanics' institute, situate in Church street, contains a good circulating library. The markets, entitled to be holden on Tuesdays and Fridays, are now but thinly attended. The Agricultural Society, under the presidency of the Duke of Montrose, have a show of live stock at Dumbarton annually in June. The fairs are of some importance: they are held on the third Tuesday of March, the Thursday next before Easter, the third Tuesday in May, the second Tuesday in August, and the second Tuesday in November, besides a very large cattle fair held on Carman Moor on the first Wednesday in June.

CARDROSS is a small but respectable village in the parish of its name, situate four miles from Dumbarton, on the road to Helensburgh, and near the shore of the Clyde. Prior to the reformation, the church of Cardross was a rectory, belonging to the Cathedral of Glasgow, and was seated on a peninsular promontory formed by the Leven and the Clyde; the present church, which stands in the village, is a neat edifice with a square tower. This district is very populous, and the situation of the parish eligible for business, pleasant and salubrious. The vicinage of the village is the residence of many respectable families, whose tasteful mansions embellish the surrounding scenery. The Parochial School is here, likewise a Free Church attached to which is also a school, and the North British Railway have stations in the village.

HELENSBURGH-WITH-ROW,

SHANDON, GARELOCHHEAD, ROSENEATH WITH KILCREGGAN AND COVE, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

HELENSBURGH is a modern town, burgh of barony, and sea-port in the parish of Row; 23 miles W.N.W. from Glasgow, 9 S. from Luss, and 8 N.W. from Dumbarton; lying on the Firth of Clyde, opposite to Greenock, from which it is five miles distant. The town, which is a perpetual feu from Sir Jas. Colquhoun, Bart., of Luss, was commenced in 1777, and since that period it has risen into notice as the most convenient and agreeable watering place on the Clyde: it now consists of a series of handsome houses and streets, laid out on a neat and approved plan. The accommodations for visitors are equal to those of most watering places; numerous private houses are well furnished for the reception of families, or individuals resorting hither in the summer, and there are two superior hotels, to one of which (the Queen's) hot, cold, and shower baths are attached; a public library, circulating libraries, and reading rooms are also in the town. The quay, erected in 1817, and in 1861 greatly enlarged, extends from the centre of the town a considerable distance into the river; but, being low, a great portion of it is covered at high water. About a mile and a half west of the town, at the entrance of the Gare Loch, an excellent and substantial quay has been constructed by Sir Jas. Colquhoun. Helensburgh was elevated to the rank of a burgh of barony in 1802; its municipal government is vested in a provost, two baillies, eight councillors, treasurer, and town-clerk. A justice of the peace court is held on the last Saturday of each month. Helensburgh was erected a quoad sacra Parish in 1862, and the places of worship are the parish church, in Clyde-street; an Episcopal and two Free churches; also chapels for United Presbyterians, Independents, and Baptists. A Parochial, Free church, Episcopal, and Industrial school, with several respectable boarding academies, are amongst the educational establishments in the town. At the distance of two miles, in a westerly direction, is Roseneath Castle, a seat of His Grace the Duke of Argyll; this noble edifice stands on the opposite side of Loch Gare, and is well worth the stranger's notice. Opposite Roseneath, on the north-west bank of the loch, is situate Ardencaple Castle, commanding a fine view of the Clyde and Gare Loch, which flows between these splendid mansions to a distance of seven miles into the main land; and in the vicinage of the town, near the banks of the Clyde, are several handsome seats and residences. In the immediate neighbourhood of Helensburgh, resided for twenty-five years the celebrated and scientific Henry Bell, to whose fertile and persevering genius, Europe is indebted for the first successful application of steam to the propelling of vessels; the first trip ever made by steam-boat in this division of the globe, was from Port Glasgow to Helensburgh, by the Comet, in the year 1812. Mr. Bell was a millwright and engineer; he was born in the parish of Torphichen, county of Linlithgow, April 7th, 1767; died at his house (the Baths Inn), in Helensburgh, November 14th, 1830, and was interred in the parish church-yard of Row, where has been erected a memorial commemorative of the inestimable benefits conferred by him upon his species, by rendering subservient to the use of man that stupendous power which now successfully 'combats the fickle wind and stems the flowing tide.' A market is held on Thursdays, weekly. A fair is held here on the second Tuesday in February, and on the 12th November, for cattle; the fairs formerly held on the 1st of June and 6th of August are discontinued, though authorised by charter.

Row is a small romantic village in the parish of its name, situated on the eastern margin of the Gare Loch, and about two miles west from Helensburgh. The parish of Row is chiefly of a hilly and pastural character, and the low grounds are fertile and beautiful. The parish church stands in the village, near the ferry across Gare Loch to the peninsula of Roseneath; opposite it is a point projecting into the loch, and it is supposed that from this circumstance the name of the parish is derived—the word row signifying a point. The parish (exclusive of a narrow stripe on Loch Long), is about six miles in length by four in breadth; bounded by Luss on the east, Helensburgh on the south-east, on the west by Gare Loch, and its south end is washed by the Firth of Clyde.

SHANDON, about three miles north of Row, is a district containing some fine villas and mansions; occupying a prominent position near the loch is West Shandon House, the princely residence of Robert Napier, Esq. It contains a collection of rare treasures of ancient and modern art, scarcely to be excelled in Scotland. A little to the north of Shandon is FASLANE, where are the ruins of an old chapel, surrounded by the remains of an ancient churchyard.

GARELOCH VILLAGE, about six miles beyond Row, is prettily situated at the head of the loch, a screen of hills rising behind separates the Gareloch-head from Loch Long. The interesting and beautiful Glen Fruin is approached from here.

ROSENEATH is a parish occuping the peninsula of that name, extending for about seven miles from east to west, and from one to four broad. The parish church, a small but neat modern edifice, is within a quarter of a mile of the ferry and pier, and the parochial school is adjacent. Roseneath Castle, already noticed, is the principal object of interest.

About two miles over the hills is the modern village of KILCREGGAN; and a mile further west, at the entrance to Loch Long, is the kindred village of COVE: both are resorted to for sea-bathing, and consist of a series of villas and mansions extending for some miles along the shore; at each is a pier for the convenience of passing steamers; and the places of worship are an Established church and United Presbyterian chapel; a Free church is likewise in the neighbourhood.

KILPATRICK, DUNTOCHER, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

KILPATRICK is a post village in the parish of its name, 53 miles W. from Edinburgh, 10 W. from Glasgow, and 5 E. from Dumbarton, situated on the road between the two last-named towns, and occupying a pleasant site at the foot of a hilly country, in view of the Clyde. The name Kilpatrick signifies the 'church of Patrick,' but in this instance tradition varies from fact, the former authority stating it to be the 'cell,' while the latter proves the definition just given to be proper, for Patrick never was an anchorite; it is generally supposed, however, that this parish was the birthplace of the celebrated titular saint of Ireland. The traditionary record asserts that, at the age of sixteen this individual was carried off from this then civilized Roman district by a band of Irish marauders, who made a descent upon this part of the coast, and with other captives subjected to slavery in their own comparatively barbarous country; but the 'Ecclesia Hibernica' distinctly states that he voluntarily landed on the northern shore of Ireland in the year 461, after a residence of 26 years in the Roman capital. The visit strengthened the connexion that had priorily existed between the two nations. Within its limited locality the village has not the advantage of any manufactory. At the entrance of the village from Dumbarton stands the parish church, a neat stone edifice, surmounted by a handsome square tower and clock, erected in 1812. At the east end of the village is a Free church and an United Presbyterian chapel, together with a Parochial school, also a Free Church school.

At LITTLE-MILL, a mile to the west, is a distillery and a ship-building yard; and situated on a declivity, commanding an extensive and beautiful view of the Clyde and adjacent country, is Milton House, the residence of Messrs. Muter and Millar, proprietors of print works adjacent; at present closed.

At DUNGLASS, half a mile west of Little Mill, are to be seen the ruins of an old fortification, or Roman boundary, and at BOWLING BAY, about mid way between Dunglass and Kilpatrick, commences the Forth and Clyde canal, which, after 39 miles eastern traverse, empties itself into the Forth at Grangemouth, thus connecting the German ocean with the western channel. This great work was begun in 1768, and opened throughout on the 28th of July, 1790. Vessels drawing eight feet water, having a nineteen feet beam, and a seventy-three feet keel, can navigate this noble national junction.

DUNTOCHER is a considerable village, until lately forming part of the parish of Kilpatrick, but now a separate ecclesiastical district; it is situated two miles north from Kilpatrick, and contains three large mills for spinning and manufacturing cotton, together with coal and lime works, all called into operation by the spirit and enterprise of the late William Dunn, Esq., of Duntocher, and kept in active operation by the late Alexander Dunn, Esq., of Duntocher, up to the period of his death, shortly after which the cotton mills were closed, pending the question of succession being settled. There is also a manufactory for spades and shovels. The principal part of the town is lighted with gas. The church of the new parish was erected in 1836, at an expense of £1,700. The other places of worship are a Free church, two United Presbyterian chapels, and a Roman Catholic chapel. Perhaps the most ancient bridge in Scotland exists here; a stone near to it bears the following inscription:—

'PONTEM. HUNC. EXIT.
RUI. CURAVIT. IMP. T.
ÆL. ANTONIN. HADR.
AUG. P. P. QUINT. LOLL.
URBIC. LEG. FERE. COL-
LAPSUM. RESTITUIT.
DOMINUS DE BLANT-
IRE. A. ÆR. CHR.
M.D CC.LXXII.'

which is thus translated—'This bridge was built under the auspices of the Emperor Titus Ælius Antoninus Adrianus Augustus, father of his country, by Quintus Lollius Urbicus, his lieutenant, being almost ruinous. It was restored by Lord Blantyre in the year 1772.' A little above the bridge there was a fort and watch-tower visible when Pennant visited this quarter in 1772, but no vestige of them now remains.

KIRKINTILLOCH AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

KIRKINTILLOCH (or Kirkintulloch) is an ancient and thriving manufacturing town, burgh of barony, and capital of the parish of its name, 40 miles W. from Edinburgh, 20 S.S.W. from Stirling, 16 E. from Dumbarton, the like distance W. from Falkirk, 7 N. from Glasgow, the like distance W. from Cumbernauld. 5 S.W. from Kilsyth, and 3 S.E. from Campsie. It is situated on the water of Luggie, near to its junction with the Kelvin; and is understood to derive its name from the locality, the original designation being Caerpentulloch, signifying, in Cambro-British, the fort on the head or end of the hill, which is descriptive of the site of the town, standing as it does on the verge of a ridge, advancing from the south into a plain on the banks of the Kelvin. The wall of Antoninus passed through this town, and one of his principal forts stood on the summit of a hill, a little south-west of the parish church; the site of the fortress is even to this day recognised by a deep moat called 'Peel.' Kirkintilloch, (which is the largest parish in the shire), and the neighbouring parish of Cumbernauld are separated from the rest of the county by the north point of Lanarkshire, and are surrounded by that county and Stirlingshire. The weaving of lappet muslin is carried on here to a great extent by the hand loom, in which the majority of the inhabitants are employed. There are coal and iron-stone mines, three iron foundries, and several manufactories also in the neighbourhood. The monetary transactions of the burgh are facilitated by branches of the City of Glasgow Bank, the National Bank of Scotland, and also a branch of the National Security Savings' Bank. A penny savings' bank is likewise established. Few places possess more eligible advantages for inland conveyance than this; that great undertaking the Forth and Clyde canal, passing through the town, affords a speedy and certain transit to the east or west coast of Scotland. The Monkland and Kirkintilloch Railway, opened in the spring of 1826, and which extends to Airdrie, joining the Bellochnie railway about a mile from that town, is within six miles; this line also joins the Garnkirk and Glasgow railway. The Edinburgh and Glasgow line passes over the Monkland and Kirkintilloch, a mile and a half south of the town, and at this place is known as the 'CAMPSIE JUNCTION.' Kirkintilloch is a free burgh of barony; its first charter was conferred by William the Lion, dated at Forres; it was granted to William Cumming, of Cumbernauld and Kirkintilloch, and was subsequently confirmed and its privileges enlarged. The town is governed by a senior and junior magistrate, otherwise baillies, ten councillors, treasurer, and town-clerk. The baillies possess the power of deciding in all causes within the liberty of the burgh. The town has a police establishment, under the regulation of commissioners appointed by the provisions of the local act of parliament for the government of small towns. Gasworks have been erected by the commissioners for lighting the town. The court-house and gaol, which form a substantial building, at the cross, is ornamented with a tower and spire, containing a clock. A justice of peace court is held once a month—on Saturday; a burgh court every Saturday, and a sheriff small debt circuit court on the first Thursday of March, June, September, and December. The parish church, which was built in 1644, and is in the form of a cross, stands near the centre of the town. The other places of worship comprise two Free churches, a chapel of ease, erected by subscription in 1836, an original Burcher chapel, an United Presbyterian chapel, and a Methodist meeting-house. Fairs are held on the second Tuesday in May, the last Thursday in July (old style), both for cattle; and October 20th for cattle and horses.

POST OFFICE, COWGATE-STREET, Daniel M'Intosh, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Glasgow) at a quarter-past six and a quarter before eleven morning, and at five evening; and are despatched thereto at ten minutes before nine and a quarter before twelve morning, and in the evening at five minutes before six.

LUSS, ARROCHAR, TARBET, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

LUSS is a small romantic village, in the parish of its name, 12 miles W.N.W. from Edinburgh, 28 N.W. from Glasgow, 31 S.E. from Inveraray, 13 N.N.W. from Dumbarton, 10 N.N.W. from Bonhill, and 9 N. from Helensburgh; most delightfully situated on the western margin of the justly-famed Loch Lomond. The only business of consequence is the Camstraddan and Luss slate quarries, from which considerable quantities of excellent blue slate are obtained, and conveyed to distant parts of the country, by means of small sailing vessels on Loch Lomond and down the river Leven. The parish school is an excellently conducted institution. If healthiness of situation and beauty of scenery be desirable, few places possess equal advantages with Luss; but that which renders it a place of paramount interest is the noble loch, on the margin of whose pellucid waters it reposes, surrounded by some of the most inviting and delightful scenery in Scotland. In summer, the numerous pleasure parties crowding here inpart a gaiety of appearance to the lake, which, if possible, heightens the interest of this charming spot. Steam-boats sail every day (Sunday excepted), from the south end of the loch, calling at Balmaha, Luss, Tarbet, Inversnaid, the foot of Ben Lomond, &c., returning the same afternoon. Here resided the Rev. and learned Dr. Stuart, who translated the Bible into the Gaelic language; and on the opposite side of the loch, near Drymen, lived for a considerable time, Lord Napier, the inventor of logarithms. A fine view of Loch Lomond, with its numerous islands, is obtained from Stonehill, a considerable elevation about half a mile north of the inn. About 2½ half miles south from Luss is Rossdhu House, the seat of Sir James Colquhoun, Bart., of Luss. It is a handsome building, with a fine portico, seated on a low point of land, surrounded on three sides by Loch Lomond. The church was dedicated to St. Mackessog, a native of Lennox, who was a bishop and confessor, and suffered martyrdom about the year 520, at a place below Luss, on the side of the lake, where a large cairn of stones was raised to his memory. He was buried in the Parish Church, and was long regarded as the tutelar saint of this part of the country. Fairs are held here on the 24th May, old style; third Tuesday in August, 14th October, old style; and 7th November, old style.

ARROCHAR (more properly Arroquhar) is a parish lying between Loch Lomond and Loch Long, bounded on the south by Luss. It extends nearly sixteen miles in length by three in breadth. The village, which is situated at the head of Loch Long, is ten miles north from Luss, and about one and a half west from Tarbet. It contains two good hotels, well known to travellers in this mountainous and romantic district.

TARBET is a much famed inn and small village, on Loch Lomond, about eight miles north from Luss, and to distinguish it from Tarbert, on Loch Fine, in Argyleshire, is generally designated Tarbet on Loch Lomond. This place, which is much visited by tourists, is considered the most pleasing and romantic spot on Loch Lomond, and Ben Arthur, or 'the Cobbler,' is best seen near to the inn. The distance between Loch Lomond and Loch Long is here about one mile and a half, and the arrangements for conveyance in summer are such, that a person may leave Glasgow, proceed by rail to Balloch, embark in the Loch Lomond steamer, and sail to Tarbet, walk or ride across the isthmus to Arrochar, where a steamer is ready to start again for Glasgow, down Loch Long and up the Clyde.

NEW KILPATRICK, MILNGAVIE & NEIGHBOURHOODS.

NEW (or EAST) KILPATRICK is a parish partly in this county, and partly in that of Stirlingshire; its extent is upwards of six miles from north to south, by a breadth of from two to four miles. The Forth and Clyde canal intersects it in its northern part, entering the district, on crossing the Kelvin, by a stupendous aqueduct bridge. The district was separated from Old Kilpatrick, which bounds the parish on the west, in the year 1649. The church is six miles north-west from Glasgow, and is a neat building, erected in 1807. Garscube House, the residence of Sir Archibald Campbell, Bart., of Succoth, is the principal seat in the neighbourhood, worthy of notice.

MILNGAVIE (popularly Millguy) is a thriving manufacturing village, and the principal one in the parish of New Kilpatrick, but locally situated on the border of Stirling county, 12 miles E. from Dumbarton, 5 E. from Duntocher, 21 S.W. from Stirling, 7 N.N.W. from Glasgow, 51 W. from Edinburgh, and 2 miles from New Kilpatrick. In the village is a mill for cotton spinning and large print-works, and in the neighbourhood are two bleach fields, a dye works, and a distillery. There is an United Presbyterian Church, a Roman Catholic chapel, and a Chapel of ease, the Parish Church is two miles to the south. The country around is finely diversified with hill and dale, and ornamented with many respectable family mansions. At Mugdock Castle, 2½ miles north, is a remarkable echo; also a small beautiful loch, on the margin of which is an eminence, crowned with an observatory. There is a druidical temple about 3 miles N.E. on Craigmaddie moor, near the remains of Craigmaddie castle, called the 'Old Wife's Lifts'; it consists of three immense stones, two of which are erect and support the third.

DUMFRIES-SHIRE.

THIS is a large and important shire, in the south of Scotland; bounded on the east by the counties of Roxburgh and Selkirk; on the north-west by Ayrshire; on the south-west by the stewartry (or county) of Kirkcudbright; on the north by the counties of Lanark, Peebles, and part of Selkirk; its south and south-eastern boundary is washed by the Solway Frith, and its south-eastern base is skirted by Roxburghshire and the English county of Cumberland. The length of the county, from north-west to south-east, is nearly fifty-five miles; and its extreme breadth, from the south to where it touches Peeblesshire on the north, is nearly thirty miles. According to the latest and best surveys, it embraces an area of one thousand and ninety eight square miles, or seven hundred and two thousand, nine hundred and fifty three statute acres of land, and about ten square miles of lakes.

EARLY HISTORY.—At the epoch of the Roman invasion under Agricola, in the year 80, this part of Scotland was inhabited by a race called the Selgovæ, who spread themselves as far as the banks of the Dee, in Galloway: these people continued independent till the year 875, when they were overpowered by the Northumbrian Saxons, who retained the ascendancy for two centuries; during the lapse of this time, however, immense swarms of adventurers from Ireland and Cantyre effected a settlement: and from these intermixtures sprung the Picts, who progressively acquired the paramount sway. At this period Dumfries-shire is understood to have formed part of Cumbria, which district Edgar bequeathed to his youngest brother David, who encouraged the cupidity of many opulent Anglo-Norman barons, and the country was then divided into extensive baronies. The almost interminable border warfare was a frightful calamity to the inhabitants of Dumfries-shire and Cumberland, who for centuries were subjected to all the horrors attendant upon barbarous incursions and reckless feudal hostility. When the civil war broke out under Charles I, the common people entered heartily into the covenant, and the shire was disturbed by the exertions made by the loyal noblemen an dgentlemen in quelling the insurrections. Attachment to the house of Stuart ruined several of the great families: and humbler causes have conspired to extinguish many names of great local interest. The Maxwells were completely ruined by the attainder of the Earl of Nithsdale in 1715. The Douglasses of Queensberry, and the Johnstons of Annandale, have merged in other families, and out of the general wreck the noble house of Buccleuch has risen to the greatest prosperity and influence of any family in the south of Scotland. From being thus so frequently subjected to the horrors of early invasion and predatory warfare, and being so partitioned into baronies, the shire exhibits, even to this day, the remains of some very important castles and places of security.

SOIL AND SURFACE, PRODUCE, MANUFACTURES, &c.—The lower parts of Dumfries-shire are based with brown, red, yellow, or white sandstone, with dips generally to the Solway; a considerable body of limestone also lies in this quarter, and beds of ironstone are occasionally found to accompany the other strata. Coal prevails in great plenty in the upper portions of Nithsdale and lower parts of Eskdale, the two extreme points of the county. The limestone of the shire has been of great value in improving the lands; marl likewise abounds in various tracts, and of freestone and whinstone there is a sufficiency in all directions: marble is also procured for different useful and ornamental purposes; and near the northern confines of the county, at Wanlock head, there are inexhaustible mines of lead. As in most districts of the south of Scotland, there is a very general mixture of arable and pasture land. The upper part of the shire, or Annandale, Eskdale, and Ewesdale, is principally devoted to sheep-feeding; in the lower portion the farms are larger, and more adapted to agicrulture; the plantations and pleasure Grounds are consequently more numerous, and are remarkable for their beauty and richness.

The following are the principal eminences in Dumfries-shire, with their altitude above the level of the sea:—

IN NITHSDALE DISTRICT.	FEET.	IN ANNANDALE DISTRICT.	FEET.	IN ESKDALE DISTRICT.	FEET.
Wardlaw (in Caerlaverock)	826	Annan Hill	256	Moss Paul (Inn and Stage, Vale of Ewes)	820
Auchinleck	1,500	Repentance Tower	350	Langholm Hill	1,201
Wanlockhead (village)	1,564	Brunswark Hill (Tundergarth parish)	740	Tinnis Hill	1,366
Cairn Kennow (near Drumlaurig)	2,080	Erickstane Brae	1,118	Wisp (in Ewes)	1,940
Queensberry Hill	2,250	Loch-Skene	1,300	Etterick, or Phawhope Penn	2,220
Black Larg (border Ayrshire)	2,890	Hartfell (near Moffatt)	2,629
Lowthers (near Wanlockhead)	3,150

In Annandale the improvement of the breed of cattle has been most apparent; at the Highland Society's meetings some of the choicest specimens of the pure breed of Galloway cows, heifers, and bullocks are exhibited. The number of oxen, sheep, and pigs nurtured in this county, are invariably more than adequate to the demands of its population; an exportation, therefore, of the excess product takes place—and the same may be observed of corn, wool, hides, and skins. The condition of the county is represented as having greatly improved within the last sixty years, and at present its affairs may be considered in as prosperous a state as those of any other district of Scotland. Dumfries-shire cannot be ranked as a manufacturing county; the principal branches under this head are the manufacture of hosiery goods, tweeds, and cotton spinning; the chief seat of the former is limited to the capital of the county—the last to the town of Annan.

RIVERS, &c.—The chief, indeed the only rivers of consequence, are the Nith, the Annan, and the Esk: from these streams the principal divisions of the county obtain their names; from each of these greater divisions diverge vales, which likewise have denominations taken from the waters that are poured through them, such as Moffatdale, Dryfesdale, and Ewesdale. The Nith rises in the eastern hills of Ayrshire, enters Nithsdale by the foot of Carsoncone hill, in the parish of Kirkconnel, and descends into the valley of Sanquhar; having forced its way through the hills which surround this valley, it receives the Crawick water from the north, and the Euchan from the south. The river Cairn, which forms the western boundary of the county, unites its stream with the Nith, a little above Dumfries, a short distance southward from which, the latter river empties itself into the Solway Frith. Near to Jarborough castle, on the banks of the river Cairn, are to be seen those earthen mounds, called 'Bow-butts,' where the barons of Glencairn, with their vassals, used to practice archery. The river Annan (as well as the Tweed and Clyde), takes its rise in the mountains above Moffat, and runs through the flat part of Annandale for upwards of twenty-three miles; in this course it receives the Evan and Moffat waters, and the Wamphray stream; which irrigates a pleasant valley of that name: passing Johnstone, some other tributary rivulets increase its volume; at Loch Maven it is enlarged by the Ae, and a little lower by the Dryfe, which courses through the vale of Dryfesdale, considered the termination of the vale of Annan. The higher part of Eskdale, for nearly twenty miles, is mountainous: the Esk, in its progress through this district, is joined by the Black Esk, the Meggot, the Ewes, and the Wauchope—(almost the whole of this division belongs to the noble family of Buccleuch): after reaching Broomholm, the river traverses a flat country, and a part of Cumberland, before it reaches the Solway Frith; during this portion of its course it receives the Liddal from Roxburghshire, and the Line water from the county of Cumberland: the entire length of its race is about thirty-eight miles, thirty of which are in the shire of Dumfries. The Solway differs very materially from other estuaries receiving in Scotland the appellation of 'Firths:' its waters are shallow, and have long sandy reaches at the ebbing of the tide. The ebbs and flows of the Solway are proverbial for the rapidity of their action, and this is particularly the case during spring tides and the prevalence of gales from the south-west: the borderers, though well mounted, have, in numerous melancholy instances, been overwhelmed and drowned, when returning from the Cumberland fairs, in crossing the bed of this estuary—even the most experienced persons are liable to be overtaken by the tides, when they have the best expectation of fording it in safety. The principal lines of RAILWAY now in operation, are the 'Glasgow and South Western,' and the 'Caledonian,' with their branches.

DIVISIONS AND REPRESENTATION.—The whole county is now popularly apportioned into three districts, namely—ESKDALE on the east, ANNANDALE in the middle, and NITHSDALE on the west. It is ascertained that Dumfries-shire was placed under the government of a sheriff in the thirteenth century, at which period it included the stewartry of Kirkcudbright; the district of Annandale, however, continued to be a stewartry from the period when it merged in the Crown by the accession of Bruce, till the abolition of the heritable jurisdictions. Up to the era of the reformation, Dumfries-shire formed part of the extensive diocess of Glasgow, and was divided into the two deaneries of Nithsdale and Annandale; it now possesses forty-three parishes, which are divided into five presbyteries and one synod. There are four royal burghs in the county—Dumfries, Annan, Sanquhar, and Lochmaben; and six burghs of barony—Moffat, Lockerby, Langholm, Ecclefechan, Thornhill and Moniaive. The shire at large sends one member to parliament, and the royal burghs before named join with Kirkcudbright in returning another representative.

ANNAN AND BRIDE-KIRK.

ANNAN the capital of the district of Annandale and of its parish, is an ancient royal burgh, 79 miles S. of Edinburgh, 87 S.E. of Glasgow, 43 N.E. of Kirkcudbright 27 S. of Moffat, 16 S.E. of Dumfries, and 6 from Ecclefechan, situated on the east or left bank of the river Annan, rather more than a mile above its influx into the Solway Frith, and upon the Glasgow and South Western Railway, for which line there is a station. The name is derived from that of the river, whose appellation is traced to the Celtic An, signifying simply water. It is a town of considerable antiquity, and is one of the most ancient burghs in Scotland. Annan was a Roman station, and the Veromum of the geography of Ravenna. It seems to have been held by the Britons after the departure of the Romans, till they were subdued by the Saxons of the Northumbrian kingdom, when it came to the Scotch. It afterwards became a principal port, and was granted, with the territory of Annandale and the port of Lochmaben, to the ancestors of Robert Bruce, by some of whom a castle was erected, which was once occupied as a church, but afterwards went to ruins, and the original wall now forms part of the gaol and town hall. Upon the death of David II, in 1371, this castle, Lochmaben, and the lordship of Annandale, came to Thomas Randolph, Earl of Murray, and went, with his sister Agnes, to the Dunbars, Earls of March, after their forfeiture it went to the Douglasses, who lost it by similar conduct, and then, having come to Alexander, Duke of Albany, he, for rebelling against his brother, King James III, and plundering the fair of Lochmaben, in 1484, also forfeited it. Since that period it continued in the hands of the king, and became the great key of the western border. By the accession of the Bruce family to the throne, it became a royal burgh. The existing charter was granted by James VI. of Scotland, and is dated July 10th, 1612; it confirms previous charters, and particularly recites one conferred by James V, dated 1st of March, 1538, which stated that Annan had with other towns been burned and destroyed by sieges and the inroads of the English, particularly in 1298, when they entered Annandale, and burnt the town with its church. The burgh is governed by a provost, three baillies, and fifteen councillors, a treasurer, a dean of guild, and a town clerk. It unites with Dumfries, Sanquhar, Lochmaben, and Kirkcudbright, in returning one member to parliament.

The port or harbour of Annan is free, and vessels of two hundred and fifty tons can come within half a mile of the town, but vessels of much larger burthen can enter the river at its confluence with the Solway, distant little more than a mile from the town; at this place are wooden wharfs or jetties. Vessels generally make the passage between Annan and Liverpool within twelve hours, that is, in one tide only, from harbour to harbour; and a vessel makes two journeys to and from weekly. The convenience afforded by the rapidity of communication with Liverpool, has greatly increased the trade, and a considerable quantity of bacon, grain, live stock, and other commodities, are conveyed to and from the Liverpool market. Among the other branches of trade are those of ship-building, tanning, and brewing, and there is an extensive distillery a short distance from the town, up the river. Branches of the 'Commercial Bank of Scotland,' the 'British Linen Company,' and the 'Bank of Scotland,' are settled here; there is also a Bank for Savings.' Limestone and freestone is abundant in many parts of the parish, which has been long famed for the superior quality of potatoes cultivated within it. Annan of late years has been much improved by new streets and buildings. The old bridge, consisting of five arches, was removed some years since, and a neat and substantial bridge erected on its site, towards which a grant of £3,000 was obtained from government, and the remainder supplied by the county. On the west are the town-house and market place, and at the east end of the town is a fine church, built of stone, with a tower and spire. A Free Church, United Presbyterian, Episcopal, Independent, and Roman Catholic Chapels are the other places of worship. Parochial and Industrial, and several private schools are well conducted; but the principal educational establishment is a classical academy; the building, a very handsome one, was erected in 1820; in it are taught most of the elegant, and all the useful branches of education. It is governed by the magistrates and a committee of heritors, and the preceptors consists of a rector, and teachers in the several branches. The market is held on Thursday, at which, during the season, large quantities of pork are sold. There are fairs on the first Thursday in May the first Thursday in August, and the third Thursday in October. The acreage of the parish is about 12,048.

BRIDE-KIRK is a modern village, 3 miles N. of Annan, situated on the west bank of the Annan river. The proprietor was the late Mrs. General Dirom, through whose interest it was erected into a Quoad Sacra parish in May, 1836; and the same lady built the kirk in 1835; she was looked upon as the responsible supporter of the minister. The remains of Bride-Kirk are in this parish

CAERLAVEROCK PARISH,

INCLUDING THE VILLAGES OF BANK-END, KELTON, GLENCAPLE QUAY, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

THE parish of CAERLAVEROCK occupies a sort of peninsula, formed by the Solway Firth, the river Nith, and Lochan water. The magnificent ruin of Caerlaverock castle stands on a level plain, between 8 and 9 miles from Dumfries. It is an ancient possession of the Maxwells, once a powerful family in this part of Scotland, and wardens of the western marshes. It was besieged and captured by Edward I., in 1300, and by Cromwell in 1651. After this it ceased to be a tenable fortress, and fell into decay. It now presents a ruin massive and picturesque, eminently worthy the notice of the tourist. This ancient fortalice was the scene of a foul and remarkable murder, about the middle of the fourteenth century, which has furnished the theme of a very beautiful ballad by K. Sharpe, Esq., published in the 'minstrelsy of the Scottish border.' The tragical event was connected with the assassination of the Red Cumine (a powerful chieftain, who formerly held the Regency of Scotland), by Robert Bruce, attended by Kirkpatrick and Lindsay, two of his adherents. The parish contains about 18,321 acres.

BANK-END is a clean, pleasant village, about 7 miles from Dumfries, containing a parochial and grammar school, which is also a boarding academy.

GLENCAPLE QUAY, on the banks of the Nith, in this parish, is where numbers of coasting traders discharge and take in their cargoes for various parts of the United Kingdom; and when the tide serves, the steamers from Liverpool land their passengers here. KELTON is likewise a small sea port village on the Nith.

POST OFFICE, GLENCAPLE, Mary Richardson, Post Mistress.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Dumfries) at a quarter before ten morning; and are despatched thereto, for all parts, at four afternoon.

Post Office, BANK-END, Ellen F. M'Morine, Post Mistress.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Dumfries) at half-past ten morning; and are despatched thereto at half-past four afternoon.

CLOSEBURN, GLENCAIRN, DUNREGGAN, MONIAIVE,

KEIR, KIRKMICHAEL, AND TYNRON.

CLOSEBURN is an inland parish in the district of Nithsdale; it has incorporated with it the parish of Dalgarno, and is about ten miles in length, by about eleven and a half in breadth, and contains about 29,347 acres. The ruins of the ancient Castle of Closeburn, the property of Sir James Stewart Monteath, Bart., forms an interesting object in the scenery here, which derives additional beauty from some romantic waterfalls; within two miles of the castle are some caverns, in one of which latter the hunted covenanters used to take up their abode to evade pursuit: and it is considered to be the place alluded to by the author of 'Waverley,' in his description of the cave occupied by Balfour of Burley. The most prominent architectural feature in the parish is the baronial mansion, Closeburn Hall, a large and splendid Grecian edifice. A school was most amply endowed in 1723, by one John Wallace, a native of the parish; it is placed under the government of the presbytery of Penpont, and in it all the children of the parish are taught the elements of education, free of expense.

The large parish of GLENCAIRN is also in Nithsdale, and extends eleven miles in length, by from three to five in breadth, containing about 30,239 acres. All the western and northern divisions are mountainous and pastoral. Several small rivulets meander beautifully through it, enriching the scenery, to which the elegant mansion and grounds of Major Walker, M.P. for Dumfriesshire, contribute greatly. On the south-west verge of the parish is Loch Urr, whence issues the river of that name. The church is situate at a short distance from the site of an older edifice.

DUNREGGAN is a small well-built village in the parish of Glencairn, five miles and a half south-east of Penpont, situated on the north bank of the Dalwhat water, where it is crossed by a bridge to MONIAIVE, a small but pleasant village in the same parish as Dunreggan, half a mile therefrom, and sixteen from Dumfries. This is a place of some antiquity, and formerly of more consequence than it now is, having been a burgh of barony, chartered in the reign of Charles I. It was in this district that several martyrs suffered at the time of the Reformation, and in this neighbourhood may be seen various but decent testimonials to their memory. One very handsome monument, erected on an eminence near the village of Moniaive, bears the following inscription:—"In memory of the late Rev. James Renwick, the last who suffered death for attachment to the covenanted cause of Christ in Scotland; born near this spot, 15th Feby., 1662, and executed at the Grass Market, Edinburgh, 17th Feby., 1688. Erected by subscription, 1828."

KEIR is a parish of about 7,890 acres, possessing a considerable quantity of plantation and limestone; it is bounded on the east by Closeburn, on the north-west and north by Tynron and Penpont, and on the south by Dunscore; its length is six and a half miles, and its greatest breadth two and a half; one half of the parish is arable, and the other half is divided into pasture, meadow, and woodlands.

KIRKMICHAEL, united with Garren, in the district of Nithsdale, is about ten miles long and four broad, and contains about 17,131 acres. The parish of Kirkpatrick-juxta bounds it on the north-west, Johnstone on the north-east, Lochmaben on the south-east, Tinwald and Kirkmanse on the south, and Closeburn on the west. Many remains of ancient fortifications and Roman roads are visible in this district. A number of ancient coins and other small antiquities have been found beneath the soil. More than half of the parish belongs to the Duke of Buccleuch, and the rest is distributed among several proprietors. The parish church is near the Ae river, which bounds the parish on the west.

TYNRON parish lies between Penpont on the north and north-east, and Glencairn on the south, and extends nine miles in length, by a breadth of from two to three, with an acreage of about 15,753. It is watered partially by the Shinnel rivulet, along the banks of which there is some pleasing scenery. Near the eastern extremity of the parish rises the Doon of Tynron, a conspicuous pyramidical hill, near the summit of which is an ancient castle. A church stands on the site of the old structure.

CUMMERTREES,

POWFOOT, DALTON, MOUSEWALD, RUTHWELL, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

CUMMERTREES is a parish and village—the latter clean and neat, is 84 miles s of Edinburgh, the same distance S.E. of Glasgow, 22 N.W. of Carlisle, 13 S.E. of Dumfries, 10 S.E. of Lochmaben, the same distance S. from Lockerbie, 6 from Ecclefechan, and 4 from Annan, situated on the Caledonian Railway, for which line there is a station at the village. The parish, which is about four miles in length by three in breadth, containing about 11,747 acres, is bounded on the north-east by the river Annan, and on the south by the Solway Frith. It is a flat, fertile, and well cultivated district, and is now well enclosed. The name is derived from the British words Cum-ber-tree, signifying the hamlet at the short valley, and is sufficiently descriptive of the local situation of the village.—About a mile south-east of Cummertrees is POWFOOT, a fishing hamlet, situated on the shore of the Solway.

DALTON is a small village between three and four miles from Cummertrees. The parish, which now comprehends the two ancient ones of Meikle Dalton and Little Dalton, is four miles in length by three in breadth, with about 6,941 acres. Its general appearance is that of high cultivation, which has been extended over once unprofitable moors and commons.

MOUSEWALD village stands six miles from Dumfries, lying between that town and Annan. The kirk, which is about a quarter of a mile from the village, on an elevated site, contains a dilapidated effigy of Sir Simon Carruthers, long since laird of Mousewald.

RUTHWELL is a village about three miles from Cummertrees; this place is a barony, and is privileged to hold markets and fairs, but it is long since the inhabitants availed themselves of these rights. It was in early days celebrated for the manufacture of salt; but this art has not been practised for some time. Near the shore is the Brow, well and hamlet, where Burns spent several of the last weeks of his existence. The kirk and manse of Ruthwell stand about a quarter of a mile from that village. The gardens of the manse, which are extensive and laid out with great taste, contain a very ancient Runic monument, in a good state of preservation. The parochial school is at Clarencefield. About a mile from Ruthwell, in the parish of MOUSEWALD, is Mount Kedar, where a monument has been erected to the memory of the Rev. Henry Duncan, D.D., late minister of Ruthwell. The memorial, which is of stone, consists of an arched base and pyramid forty feet in height; on the base an inscription states that he was the founder of the system of savings' banks, and was born in 1774, and died in 1846, after being minister of Ruthwell parish forty-four years, when he closed in communion with the Free Church of Scotland. A Free Church and school-house are situated here. The parish of Mousewald contains about 5,891 acres.

DORNOCK, GRAITNEY (OR GRETNA.)

WITH SPRINGFIELD, KIRKPATRICK-FLEMING AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

DORNOCK is a parish and village—the latter a small one, in the district of Annandale, Dumfriesshire, 84 miles s. of Edinburgh, 18 s. of Langholm, 17 s.E. of Dumfries, 12 s.E. of Lockerbie, 7 s. of Ecclefechan, and 2 E. of Annan; situated on the high road from the latter town to Carlisle, and about a quarter of a mile from the shore of the Solway Firth, where there is good sea-bathing. The parish, which is about two miles and a half square, contains about 5,780 acres, and is washed on its southern part by the Solway. An ancient erection, called Stapleton tower, stands on the estate of Stapleton, in this parish. It is now the summer residence of John A. Critchley, Esq. Robgill tower, formerly belonging to the Irvings, of Robgill, stands in the same parish, and, with the broad lands attached, are now possessed by Frederic M'Connel, Esq. At a short distance from the village there are the remains of a Roman military road and Druidical circle or temple. On what was formerly a moor in the parish, a battle is traditionally said to have been fought between the English and Scotch, in which the former were defeated, and their two commanders slain. Two stones in Dornock churchyard, each 6½ feet long, and 2 broad, and raised in the middle like a coffin, mark the place of their reported interment. On these tombs hieroglyphics are cut, which have hitherto puzzled the antiquarian. The kirk and the parochial school are in the village.

GRAITNEY (more popularly called Gretna) is a parish in the south part of the county, lying on the west side of the small river Sark. The present parish, the acreage of which is about 9,090, comprehends the old parishes of Gretna and Redkirk, which were united in 1609. The village of Gretna, or Gretna Green, is situated on the road from Annan to Carlisle, by Longton, eight miles and a half from the former, nine miles and a half from the latter town and is the first stage on entering Scotland from England. The Glasgow and South Western Railway passes through the parish, and there is a station contiguous to the village. This place has long been noted for the celebration of clandestine marriages. Any person can perform the ceremony, which merely amounts to a declaration, before witnesses, that the parties are man and wife, such an acknowledgment being sufficient to constitute a valid marriage in Scotland; by a certificate being subscribed by the officiating priest and witnesses, the union becomes quite indissoluble. The fee charged varies according to circumstances, and the means of the party, from half a guinea to £40, and even £50 has been paid. Bills were brought into the House of Lords to alter the law of Scottish marriages, and more especially the Gretna Green contracts, but they were not carried further than to require that if the parties belong to any other country, one of them must have resided twenty-one days in the kingdom of Scotland before they can be so joined together. The first of these convenient priests, was a fisherman named Coulthard. He kept a ferry-boat, before any high roads were made through the country. After him a farmer, named Peter Graham, succeeded to the office. The next was Joseph Paisley; and after him John Murray, toll collector, who has been succeeded by Simeon Long. The following is the form of the marriage certificate, which, if required, is furnished:—

"KINGDOM OF SCOTLAND, COUNTY OF DUMFRIES, PARISH OF GRETNA.

"These are to certify to all to whom these presents may come, that A. B., from the parish of ——, in the county of ——, and C. D., from the parish of ——, in the county of ——, being now here present, and having declared themselves single persons, were this day married after the manner of the laws of the Church of England, and agreeable to the laws of Scotland.

As witness our hands at Gretna Hall," &c. &c.

About a quarter of a mile from Gretna is the village of SPRINGFIELD, which participates in this matrimonial trade. This village, as also that of Gretna, belongs to the Maxwell family. At SARKFOOT, about a mile from the latter village, is good bathing ground. About two miles west from Gretna is the small village of RIGG, where there is a dissenting chapel.

The parish of KIRKPATRICK-FLEMING, interesting in Scottish legend and song, is bounded on the east by Graitney. The kirk and parochial school, which stand at the southern end of the parish, are about three miles from Gretna. Lime and freestone abound in this district, in which are likewise several mineral springs, possessing medicinal properties similar to those of Hartfell spa, near Moffat. The Caledonian railway, which runs through the village, has a station here.

DUMFRIES,

MAXWELLTOWN, TEREGLES, TROQUEER, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

DUMFRIES, the capital of its county and parish, a royal burgh, the seat of the synod and presbytery of Dumfries, is 338 miles from London (by the route of Manchester), 71 s. of Edinburgh, 72 s.e. of Glasgow, 180 s. by w. of Aberdeen, 60 s.e. of Ayr, 33 n w. of Carlisle (by railway), 15 n.n.w. of Annan, and 8 s.w. of Lochmaben; it is situated on the Glasgow and South-Western railway, and there is a station for the line about a quarter of a mile from the town. Dumfries, which may be considered as the metropolis of the south-west quarter of Scotland, is seated on the left bank of the river Nith, about nine miles above its confluence with the Solway Frith, and navigable for vessels of light tonnage, the tide flowing as high as the old bridge. There exists no record whereby to ascertain the date when the town was founded, or the etymology of its name—Drum-a-frish—Dun-fries—Drumfries and 'Dumfries' have successively been its appellations—Dun a castle, and fries shrubs, is a plausible compound for the original name. The site of this queen of Nithsdale is singularly picturesque, stretching along the bank of the Nith at an elevation sufficient to command a rich prospect terminating at the distance of a few miles in a chain of lofty hills, either cultivated or umbrageous to their summits. There are so many attractions in and around Dumfries, that the gentry of the neighbouring counties resort to it, imparting vivacity and all the delights of good society.

Amongst the improvements of modern times may be named the erection of a suite of assembly rooms, market places, the widening of Bank street, and lighting the town with gas; a spacious quay has been constructed along the side of the town; and a fine Doric column, raised by the county of Dumfries, to the memory of Charles, Duke of Queensberry, who died in 1778, adorns the centre of the burgh. The Court House is a large elegant new building in Buccleugh street, adjoining which is the gaol, comprising a very capacious court-room and other offices. Circuit courts of justiciary are held in April and September for Dumfries-shire and the stewartry of Kircudbright; there are also ordinary and small debt, sheriff's and justiciary burgh courts. The station of the Glasgow and South-Western railway is an important erection, giving animation to the south-eastern suburb of the town. The Theatre is rather a handsome building of stone, with a projecting portico; the interior is tastefully decorated; it is generally open a few weeks in winter. It was here that Kean first emerged from obscurity to fame, and he never forgot the early patronage of the denizens of Dumfries.

A new and important line of railway from Dumfries, goes through Castle Douglas, Gatehouse, Newton-Stewart, to Stranraer and Portpatrick, thence by steamer to the coast of Ireland, which is but twenty-one miles distant from the last named town. The principal imports are timber, hemp, tallow, coal, slate, iron and wine; the exports consist of wheat, barley, oats, potatoes, wool, and freestone. Considerable business is done in the manufacture of hosiery, woollen cloths, hat making, brewing, tanning, and the glue manufacture. Dumfries was for many years the leading market for hare-skins in Scotland, and even regulated the price of home fur in England; and it is still looked to as the arbiter of prices. Several branch banking companies afford facilities to the monetary transactions of the town. The principal hotels are the 'King's Arms'; and the 'Commercial.' Four newspapers are issued weekly, their names are the 'Dumfries Courier,' the 'Dumfries and Galloway Standard,' the 'Dumfries-shire and Galloway Bulletin,' and the 'Dumfries-shire and Galloway Herald.'

The municipal government of the burgh is vested in a provost, three bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, a town-clerk, and nineteen councillors. The craftsmen were formerly divided into seven corporations, with each a deacon chosen from their respective trades, who elected one of their own number to be convenor, and another to be general box-master, all of whom formed what was termed a grand committee of the seven trades; these distinctions, however (for distinctions of considerable importance they were in former times), were virtually abolished by the reform bill; some of of the trades possessed considerable property, which has since been publicly sold, and the proceeds equitably divided among the respective parties. Dumfries unites with Annan, Lochmaben, and Sanquhar, in returning one member to parliament. The present member is William Ewart, Esq. The numerous nursery grounds around the town are both useful and ornamental to the suburbs. The great desideratum of a copious supply of pure water has been attained, and the inhabitants have an abundance brought from ample sources, about five miles from the town.

The places of worship, including Maxwelltown, comprises three churches of the Establishment, two of the Free Church, several United Presbyterian and Cameronian Churches, an Episcopal, a Congregational, a Baptist, and a Roman Catholic Chapel, &c. Saint Michael's, or the mother church, claims peculiar notice on account of its cemetery, which contains numberless elegant and curious monuments, many of them very ancient; but the most attractive is the fine mausoleum raised to the memory of the Scottish bard, Burns; the design for the mausoleum was by F. Hunt, Esq., of London, and Turnerelli modelled the sculpture. By the erection of this monument, it may be said that Scotland has repaid the debt so long due to the memory of him of whose natural genius his countrymen may well be proud. Burns died at Dumfries on the 21st of July, 1796, aged 37 years, and his remains were deposited in the churchyard of Saint Michael's. The mausoleum and the profusion of funeral sculpture which adorn this cemetery are so attractive that it is a pity free ingress is not at all times permitted; the fee doubtless prevents many a stranger from inspecting these beautiful memorials to the dead. On January 25th, 1859, the centenary of the birth of the great Scottish poet, a series of banquets, entertainments, &c., were held in Edinburgh, Glasgow, and in this, as well as in most other towns both in Scotland and England: poems were written in his honour, and at the Crystal Palace, Sydenham, where a grand festival took place, a prize poem (being the best of seven hundred sent for approval), was recited. The tasteful Free Church of Saint Mary, on the north side of English street, is a graceful ornament to this approach to the town, and the cemetery around it is gradually being enriched with finely executed monumental sculpture.

CHARITABLE, EDUCATIONAL, AND SCIENTIFIC INSTITUTIONS.—The infirmary was founded in 1776, at a period when very few charities, of a similar nature, were in Britain; and this is still the only one in the South of Scotland. Medical advice and medicine are gratuitously afforded to every applicant who is an object of charity. It is supported by annual subscriptions, legacies, donations, benefactions, &c., and is under the management of governors. There is also the Crichton Institution for lunatics, a noble foundation upon a lofty site. The Poor's Hospital is for the purpose of supporting aged and indigent poor, and destitute children, who are taught to read and write. It is governed by the magistrates, town council, &c., and is supported by a part of the collections from the church doors, numerous benefactions, donations, and annual subscriptions. It was founded in 1753, by the Messrs. J. and W. Moorhead, merchants. Dumfries is not behind other towns in its support of numerous religious and educational societies—both an infant and an industrial school are amongst the latter institutions. The commodious cottages or almshouses, founded by the benevolence of Mrs. Carruthers, are an interesting memorial of her philanthropy. The Academy; this elegant and useful seminary was founded in 1802, the expenses of the ground, and of building and finishing the fabric, were entirely defrayed by voluntary subscription. In October, 1814, the structure was formally delivered over to the magistrates as patrons and guardians of the institution, who, along with other members of the town council, have the exclusive privilege of appointing the masters. The New Club House, in Assembly street, was formerly the Old Assembly-rooms. The Dumfries and Maxwelltown Astronomical Society have erected, on Corbelly hill, on the Maxwelltown side of the river, an observatory, which is regarded as a highly ornamental feature in one of the most unique half-urban half-sylvan landscapes; and commands an extensive view of beautiful and varied scenery; the cost, which exceeded one thousand guineas, was raised in £5 shares. The plans were by Mr. Newall, architect, and the building was completed in little more than twelve months. It contains four stories—the lower one for the use of the keeper, three others for the accommodation of the subscribers and strangers, which are furnished with globes, mathematical instruments, newspapers and periodicals; and the upper storey is set apart for a camera-obscura and prism. The grounds, which consist of more than half an acre, are laid out with much taste, containing flowers and shrubs of various kinds.

The market days are Wednesdays. The two principal half-yearly markets take the name of the Candlemas and road fairs. Besides the usual commodities that change hands at these periods, many thousand head of black cattle are bought and sold: and vast quantities of pork also find purchasers in Dumfries from the beginning of December to the end of February. The fairs are held on the first Wednesday in February, the third Wednesday in March, the third Wednesday in April, the 26th May or the Wednesday after; the third Wednesday in June, the third Wednesday in July, the third Wedneseay in August, the third Wednesday in October and the third Wednesday in November, for cattle (all old style).

MAXWELLTOWN, formerly a village, is now a burgh of barony, in the stewartry of Kirkcudbright, and connected with Dumfries by two bridges across the Nith. In no instance have the good effects of erecting a village into a burgh of barony been more conspicuous than in Maxwelltown. The charter was obtained from the crown in 1810, and since that time, from being a poor village, notorious for disorderly conduct, it has improved in value and extent of houses, and increased considerably in the number and respectability of its inhabitants; it is governed by a provost, two baillies, and councillors. Among the trading establishments are two foundries and several corn mills. The Church here is handsome and of modern erection.

DUNSCORE, HOLYWOOD AND KIRKMAHOE.

DUNSCORE, a parish in the district of Nithsdale, is bounded by Glencairn and Keir on the north, and Holywood and Kirkcudbrightshire on the south. It is twelve miles in length, and its breadth varies from one to four miles, and contains about 14,924 acres. The hills which surround it are healthy and good for pasture: and one of them, called Bogrie hill, rises 1,200 feet above the level of the sea. The celebrated John Welsh, son-in-law to John Knox, was a native of Dunscore. The land is arable on the banks of the Nith, which irrigates its eastern part; it is also intersected by the Cairn. Sheep and black cattle are reared off these lands, for the southern markets: and oats, barley, wheat, potatoes and turnips are produced in great quantities. The parish church is about nine miles from Dumfries, and seven from Moniaive. There is also in the parish a Free Church, and an United Presbyterian Church. Robert Burns, at one time, held a farm in this parish, near the Nith, named Ellesland, and it was while here that he had an opportunity of eulogizing the Cluden river, which is a continuation of the Cairn water. At this period he took charge of a village library, instituted by his landlord, Robert Riddel, Esq.

HOLYWOOD parish, which is bounded by Dunscore on the north and west, extends for ten miles along the right bank of the Nith, its breadth being from two to three miles, its acreage being about 8,940. The district derives its name from a sacred grove, to which, it is said, the Druids resorted to perform their rites. The temple of these pagans was succeeded by the cell of a hermit, which was subsequently changed into a house for monks of the Premonstratenses, in the beginning of the twelve century; and the ruins of an old abbey in the churchyard are supposed to be the remains of that building. An Irish recluse of the name of Congal seems to have been the founder, and he bequeathed both to the cell and the abbey the name of Dercongal, signifying "the Oakwood of Congal." The church, an exceedingly neat erection, and much admired, stands in a most delightful part of the country, about three miles from Dumfries.

KIRKMAHOE is a small modern village in the parish of its name, and district of Nithsdale, bounded by Closeburn, Kirkmichael, Tinwald, Dumfries, Holywood, Dunscore and Keir; it is five miles from Dumfries, situate on a rivulet, tributary to the Nith, near the southern extremity of the parish. From some of the summits of its uplands, a beautiful view is obtained of the pretty valley of the Nith, fringed in the distance by the Solway tide, and in the far-back ground by Criffel and the Cumberland mountains. The church is a handsome Gothic edifice. The lands of the parish are well cultivated, and there are several plantations. Its acreage is about 12,700.

ECCLEFECHAN,

WITH THE VILLAGES OF EAGLESFIELD, KIRTLEBRIDGE, AND WATERBECK IN MIDDLEBIE, NEWTON, KIRKPATRICK-FLEMING, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

ECCLEFECHAN is a considerable village, in the parish of HODDAM, 71 miles S. of Edinburgh, 75 S.E. of Glasgow, 20 N.W. by rail from Carlisle, 16 E. of Dumfries, and 6 N. of Annan, and 14 from Langholm, lying in a fine situation near the foot of Annandale, and on the road from Glasgow to Carlisle, within a mile of the station on the Caledonian Railway. The land of Hoddam parish is of the very best quality, under a superior system of cultivation, and the district is perhaps one of the most healthy and pleasant in the south of Scotland. The principal employment of the inhabitants is weaving cotton goods for the Carlisle manufacturers, who have constantly a demand for the labours of the loom, and which enables the operatives to enjoy many comforts which they would otherwise be deprived of. Ecclefechan contains a few respectable shops, in which a variety of trades are carried on; its prosperity is, however, mainly sustained by the extensive cattle markets, for which this village has been so long noted. The great marts are held on the first Fridays after the 11th in the months of January, February, March, April, and July; the Friday before the 26th of August, the 18th of September (or the Friday before), the 26th of October, the Friday after the 11th of November, and the Friday after the 11th of December. The first Friday after the 11th of May and the 26th of October are hiring days for servants, the latter being also a cattle market, and the first Tuesday after the 11th of June is a fair for cattle and general merchandise. On the two fair days in June and October, the Duke of Buccleuch, as superior, claims certain customs for all standings, and for all cattle exposed for sale. A branch of the Royal Bank of Scotland is established in the town. Ecclefechan can boast of being the birth-place of two persons of considerable celebrity—namely, the Rev. Edward Irvine, founder of that section of Christians called Irvinites; and Thomas Carlyle, renowned for his quaint but powerful writing. The parish of Hoddam contains about 7,564 acres.

MIDDLEBIE is a parish lying on the road between Langholm and Ecclefechan: it is about seven miles in length by four in breadth, acreage about 17,592. It abounds in red freestone, and is valuable for its lime quarries, but much of the land is of rather poor quality. The village, a small one, is about two miles from Ecclefechan, and about twelve from Langholm. There is an Established church and a parochial school.

EAGLESFIELD and KIRTLEBRIDGE are small villages in Middlebie parish—the former two and a half miles, and the latter three miles from Ecclefechan. WATERBECK village is also in Middlebie parish, four miles from Ecclefechan, on the road to Langholm. It is a pretty little rural place, and has been much improved by the late Mr. Robert Carlyle and his sons. Here the United Presbyterians have a place of worship, and there is a parochial school, and a school (for girls) supported by subscription, in the village.

KIRKPATRICK-FLEMING is a large parish, containing about 11,573 acres, bounded by Middlebie on the north and west, by Dornock and Gretna on the south, and by Halfmorton on the east, about five miles from Ecclefechan. It is a station on the Caledonian line of railway. In this parish are several large mansions, the Union poorhouse, an Established and a Free church, two parochial schools, a Free church school, and one for infants. NEWTON is a hamlet in this parish.

To LANGHOLM, James Davidson, from Waterbeck, on Friday

LANGHOLM,

AND THE PARISHES OF CANONBIE, ESKDALEMUIR, EWES, WESTERKIRK & NEIGHBOURHOODS.

LANGHOLM is a thriving manufacturing town and burgh of barony, in the parish of its name; 73 miles s. from Edinburgh, 80 s. w. from Glasgow, 30 E. by N. from Dumfries, the like distance s. E. from Moffat, 21 N. from Carlisle, 18 N. N. E. from Annan, and 12 N. from Longtown (in Cumberland), delightfully situated on both sides of the Esk, over which there is a stone bridge of three arches, from which may be seen the confluence of the Ewes and the Wauchope with the Esk. This parish and the adjoining ones of Canonbie, Ewes, Westerkirk, and Eskdalemuir are known as the 'five kirks of Eskdale.' The town of Langholm owes its origin to a border house or tower, which was formerly the property of the all-powerful Armstrongs, but is now only seen in a state of ruin. Within the memory of man no less than twelve such towers existed, and amongst them Wauchop Castle, the earliest seat of the Lindsay family, was in the immediate neighbourhood. The author of the 'Picture of Scotland' says—'Eskdale derives more than common charm from the memory of Johnnie Armstrong, whose name was associated with many of its localities;' his tower of Gilnockie still stands, though converted into a cow-house, a few miles below Langholm, on the right bank of the Esk. It was on 'Langholm Holm' that, when going to meet King James V. he and his 'gallant companie' of thirty-six men ran their horse and 'brak their spears.' Johnnie terminated his mortal career at Carlenrig, a place not far distant from Moss-Paul, on the road between Langholm and Hawick: the story of the judicial execution of this border-chief and his companions, by James V., is well known; the graves of the whole of the marauding band are to be seen in a deserted church yard at Carlenrig. This district is also associated with the Covenanters especially with the memory of Alexander Peden, one of the most famous of the Scottish worthies; a 'knowe' or small hill commanding a delightful view of the valley, is still named "Peden's View," and at its foot rises "Peden's Well," where in answer to his prayer a mist is said to have "shrouded him from the Dragoons who were seeking his life. Langholm is also the birth-place of Julius Meikle, translator of Camoe Lucied, and author of the song "There's nae luck aboot the house." BURNFOOT on the banks of the Esk, is three miles from Langholm, and was the birthplace of "the four Knights of Eskdale," Admiral Sir Pulteney Malcolm, General Sir John Malcolm, Sir James Malcolm, and Sir Charles Malcolm who in various ways distinguished themselves in various parts of the world. In the neighbourhood of Langholm, there is a copious mineral well, called Blouch Well, which is exceedingly efficacious in the cure of cutaneous diseases. It is less known than it should be, owing to the limited accommodation which as yet exists in its immediate neighbourhood. In the present day Langholm does not seem to partake of any of the peculiarities which distinguished the country in the 'riding times', or in the ages of superstition, being now one of the most thriving towns of its size in Scotland. Within the last few years the trade of the town has increased in a very remarkable manner, the making of plaids and blankets for the neighbouring shepherds has developed itself into the manufacture of tweeds and other fabrics which find their way into all parts of the kingdom and large quantities are exported, they bear a character second to none in the woollen market. Instead of the one small mill which employed a few hands not many years ago, not less than nine manufacturers now give constant employment to a continually increasing population. Now that there is Railway communication, supplied by the North British Railway Co., affording an outlet to all parts of the country, there is little doubt that Langholm, with its inexhaustable water power, will become the most important manufacturing town in the south of Scotland. It is built in the bosom of a lovely woodland scene, along the Edinburgh and Carlisle road; and is composed generally of good stone houses, roofed with blue slate. The bridge connects the ancient town with a more modern suburb on the opposite side of the river, called New Langholm or New town. Ruskin in his Book on Modern Painters, remarks—"There are perhaps no scenes in our own island more interesting than the wooded dingles which traverse them, the red rocks glowing out on either side, and shelving down into the pools of their deep brown rivers, as at LANGHOLM and Jedburgh; the steep oak copses climbing the banks, the paler plumes of birch shaking themselves free into the light of the sky above, and the fen arches of the monastry where the fields in the glen are greenest, or the stones of the border tower where its cliffs are steepest, rendering both field and cliff a thousand fold more dear to the heart and sight." In the market-place of the old town stands the town-hall jail, and county police station, ornamented with a neat spire. Besides the woollen mills already alluded to, the town contains a number of respectable shops, a branch each of the 'National Bank of Scotland,' the office of which has been recently re-built in an exceedingly handsome style; and the 'British Linen Company', two distilleries, a brewery, dyehouse, two tanneries, and some excellent inns; there is likewise in course of erection what will be an elegant and commodious Temperance Hotel, in which is included the armoury and drill room of the Eskdale Rifle Volunteers (7th Dumfries-shire). A new Police Station and Lockup has been erected in Buccleuch Square, New Town. The government of the town is vested in a baron baillie, appointed by the Duke of Buccleuch, who is superior, and by a police board, elected by the inhabitants. Sheriff's small debt and justice of peace courts are held at stated periods. The parish church, a modern structure, is allowed to be one of the most elegant and substantial in the south of Scotland; the other places of worship are a Free church and two United Presbyterian chapels. A good Parochial school, one endowed by the late Capt. George Maxwell of Broomholm, and one connected with the Free Church are the institutions for instruction, the Parochial and Free church schools are unusually large and commodious buildings. There is a very extensive and richly endowed library, which derives considerable advantage from a munificent bequest of the late Thomas Telford, Esq, the celebrated engineer, who was a native of the district. The inhabitants have brought into the town, at considerable expense, the copious spring known as "Whita Well," whereby every family in the town is now amply supplied with the purest water. A monument to Sir John Malcolm stands on the hill behind the old town, erected at a cost of £1,300, and there is another in the market place, in memory of his brother Sir Pulteney Malcolm. The acreage of the parish of Langholm is about 14,130. The market day is Wednesday; the fairs are held on the 16th April, the last Tuesday in May (old style), 26th July (for lambs), 18th September, and in November; there are also two hiring days—one in May, the other in November. There has been established a monthly sale of cattle, sheep, &c., and the Eskdale and Liddesdale Agricultural Society hold their show of stock generally in October, at which premiums are awarded.

CANONBIE (or Canonby) a parish halfway between Longtown and Langholm, and on the southern border of the county, is separated on the south east from England by the river Liddal, whose romantic banks present some pleasing scenery, and on the south west by the "Scotch Dyke." The river Esk intersects the parish, dividing it into two equal parts. This parish is about nine miles long and six broad, with about 24,360 acres; the high road from Edinburgh to London runs through it. The kirk is a very large stone building, and will accommodate 1,400 persons. There is also a very handsome Free church. There are inexhaustible mines of coal and quarries of lime of excellent quality in the parish, but only a small portion of them are wrought. The scenery along the Esk is considered to be the finest in the south of Scotland. The HOLLOWS is a hamlet situated about a mile from GILKNOCKIE

STATION, and near to which, on the north is Gilknockie Tower. The Duke of Buccleuch is sole proprietor of the parish. The Langholm Railway, branching from the Border Union Line (North British), at RIDDINGS JUNCTION intersects the parish. There are two stations—Canonbie and Gilknockie—the former being most convenient to the Cross Keys Hotel and the hamlets of BOWHOLM, FORGEBRAEHEAD, and GLENZIER, while the latter (Gilknockie) is nearest to CLAYGATE and HOLLOWS.

ESKDALEMUIR is a large and mountainous pastoral parish of about 43,522 acres, on the north-eastern border of the county, and in the district of Eskdale; the manse, which is about the centre of the parish, is thirteen miles from Langholm. A very small portion of Eskdalemuir is under cultivation; the principal land proprietor is the Duke of Buccleuch. The parish of EWES, situated on the eastern extremity of the county, is remarkable for its beautiful ranges of green hills, covered with verdure to their summits, and the clearness of the river, which affords excellent trouting. Numerous plantations on the properties of the Duke of Buccleuch, add additional beauty to the lovely appearance of the sweet dale of Ewes. The acreage of the parish is about 25,010

WESTERKIRK parish, containing about 27,162 acres, is also situated near the eastern boundary of the county, about six miles from Langholm. Nearly the whole of this portion of the district is devoted to pasturage for sheep and black cattle; but there are several elegant villas, which in some degree relieve its otherwise monotonous appearance. The church stands on the left bank of the river Esk.

LOCHMABEN,

WITH THE PARISHES OF TINWALD AND TORTHORWALD, AND THE VILLAGES OF COLLIN, ROUCAN, SMALLHOLM, GREEN-HILL, HECK, HIGHTAE, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

LOCHMABEN is a town of considerable antiquity, a royal burgh, the seat of a presbytery, and capital of the parish of the name, 65 miles S. from Edinburgh, 70 S.E. from Glasgow, 33 S.E. from Sanquhar, 30 N.W. from Carlisle, 21 S.E. from Thornhill, the same distance W. from Langholm, 15 S. from Moffat, 13 N.W. from Annan, 10 W. N. O. from Ecclefechan, 8½ N. by E. from Dumfries, and 4 W. from Lockerbie—situated in a level country, surrounded by a beautiful amphitheatre of hills, and by all the charms which wood and water can bestow, for few towns are situated in a district of so rich and varied beauty, and few are associated with so many historical events. It traces its origin to a very early age, and derives its name from its situation being among a number of beautiful lakes or lochs; the loch on which it is so delightfully placed, the word Lochmaben signifying, in Scoto-Irish, the lake on the white plain. The Castle Loch, which flows very near the south side of the town, is about three miles in circumference; the Mill Loch, is somewhat of less dimensions, and lies on the north side of the town; this loch flows at times even up to the doors of the houses. In these two lochs there is a fish called the vendace (or vendise), which is peculiar to these waters, and is said not to be met with any where else in Britain. It is delicately formed, about six inches long, and resembles a young herring. How it came here is not exactly known, some suppose it to have been brought from La Vendee in France, when Bruce's Castle was a royal residence, and hence the name Vendace. There is an annual Vendace Club composed of gentlemen of the county, who meet once a year (about the end of July), to have a day's fishing and recreation on the Castle Loch. There is also another Vendace Club who fish in the Mill Loch. These two lochs as well as four others of considerable extent are much resorted to by boating and fishing parties, and form a very agreeable recreation both to the inhabitants and also to tourists and visitors.

The Dumfries, Lochmaben, and Lockerbie branch of the Caledonian Line has a station here and also others at AMESFIELD and SHIELDHILL. The town owes its rise to the protection of a castle of vast strength which was built by Robert Bruce, Lord of Annandale, and was the chief residence of the Bruces till the end of the thirteenth century. It stood on the north-west of the lake, which is called the Castle Loch, and was surrounded by a deep moat, the outline of all which is still to be seen. This ancient castle was succeeded by a much larger fortress, built on a peninsula on the south-east side of the same loch. This edifice, with its outworks, covered about 16 acres; after different grants to various relations of the Bruces, it was annexed by parliament, in 1487, to the crown, and is now the property or in the keeping of the Earl of Mansfield. Some of the walls still exist; they are of great thickness, and, with the melancholy firs which mingle with them, present a gloomy yet interesting mass of ruins. The period of the first erection of Lochmaben into a royal burgh is of too remote a date for conjecture; its present charter was granted by James VI, and states that it is a renewal of charters granted by his illustrious predecessors, its date is 16th of July, 1612, from this charter, it appears that the town was more than once destroyed and burnt during the civil wars, its public edifices plundered, and its ancient records, &c. totally lost; but although the whole of the former privileges have been regained, the place itself has never recovered its former consequence. The municipal government is vested in a provost, one baillie, a dean of guild, a treasurer, and five councillors. The election of town councillors is peculiar, the whole council meet on Michaelmas Day, and elect two new councillors for the ensuing year, next, they elect their provost, baillie, dean of guild and treasurer, then they proceed to purge themselves of two old councillors, which is done by a vote being taken as to who shall retire; this system is not fitted for the times and is far from being popular. The burgh unites with Dumfries, Kirkcudbright, Annan, and Sanquhar, in returning one member to parliament. The town-house, with its tower and clock, stands in the middle of the principal street. A subscription library affords amusement and information to the gentlemen by whom it is supported. There are two freemasons lodges, two curling clubs, a bowling green and other associations. There is a branch establishment here of the 'National Bank of Scotland' and also a Savings' Bank for the town and neighbourhood. Lochmaben is not a place of much trade; with the exception of weaving stockings, shirts, &c., which is carried on to a considerable extent, there are no manufactories. It is a rural town and a place of resort for tourists and strangers, who in the summer months, visit it as a place of retirement and recreation.

The Parish church is a handsome and convenient building in the pointed style, with a bold square tower, in which are two well-toned bells; the foundation stone was laid April 10th, 1818, and was opened for divine worship in July 1820, the cost of its erection was about £3000, and it is capable of accomodating about 1400 persons.

The Free church, built in 1844, is a plain and neat structure capable of accomodating 700 persons. The cost of its erection was about £800. There is a chapel for the United Presbyterians, and one for the Reformed Presbyterians, or Cameronians, at Hightae about three miles from Lochmaben. The market is held every alternate Monday, for the sale of pork, &c., and a weekly market has lately been established for farm produce, which is held every Monday. Fairs are also held on the first Tuesdays in January, April, July and October, (all old style.)

Within the parish of Lochmaben there are also four villages known as the "Four Towns" viz: SMALLHOLM, GREENHILL, HECK and HIGHTAE. They are remarkable in Scotland as holding their lands by a peculiar tenure, the proprietors of lands in these baronies are called kindly tenants, and by successive warrants and protections of the King in 1592, 1602, and 1664, declared to have right to continue ther possessions undisturbed and at the old rent, so long as they shall continue to pay the same. These baronies are said to have been conferred on the retainers of the Bruce, and many of the present holders can trace their ancestry for hundreds of years back. Son succeeds father and the title is completed by entry of the name in Lord Mansfield's Rental Book, and the usual solemnities of service and infiefment otherwise common to the law of Scotland are here unknown. The parish comprises about 11,368 acres.

The small village of TINWALD, which is situated about six miles from Lochmaben, was the birth-place of Paterson, the projector of the Bank of England, and the planner of the disastrous Darien expedition. The parish is of a triangular figure, each side of which is about four miles and a half in length, containing about 10,392 acres; its northern boundary is watered by the pleasant river Ae. The greater part of the parish is arable; within its precincts, five miles from Dumfries, is Amisfield Castle, the seat of the ancient family of Charteris.

The parish of TORTHORWALD lies near the foot of Nithsdale, and is bounded by Tinwald on the north, by Lochmaben and Mouswald on the east, and separated on the west from Dumfries parish by the Lochar water. It extends six miles in length from north to south, by a breadth, at the northern extremity, of about two miles and a half, tapering to a point on the south, with an acreage of 6843. The village, which is situated in the north of the parish, is about four miles from Lochmaben, and the same distance from Dumfries. In this village is an excellent classical and commercial academy; and in the vicinity are the ruins of the ancient castle of Torthorwald, supposed to have existed since the thirteenth century. On the road between Dumfries and Annan is COLIN, and near the parish church is ROUCAN, both villages belonging to this parish.

LOCKERBIE,

AND THE PARISHES OF DRYFESDALE, SAINT MUNGO, TUNDERGARTH, AND APPLEGARTH

LOCKERBIE is a neat small market town in the parish of Dryfesdale, 65 miles S. of Edinburgh, 12 N.E. of Dumfries, 11 N.W. of Annan, 6 N.W. of Ecclefechan, and 4 E. of Lochmaben; situated on the great mail road betwixt Glasgow and Carlisle, 72 miles S.E. of the former, and 26½ N.W. of the latter, and on the Caledonian railway, for which line there is a station; it is also the junction for Lochmaben and Dumfries. The town occupies a considerable space of ground; the buildings have a regular and clean appearance, and the surrounding country presents some fine scenery. The origin of this place is remote, and probably, for a long period, its character was only that of a small hamlet, attached to, and protected by, the residence or stronghold of a family of some power. It is within the last century that improvements have manifested themselves to some extent, which may be mainly ascribed to the liberality of the proprietors, who have granted long terms to the tenants on their estates. Manufactures have not made their appearance in Lockerbie, but the trade in articles of general and domestic consumption is good, and progressively augmenting with the increasing prosperity of its fairs and public markets. A branch of the Royal Bank of Scotland, one of the Commercial Bank of Scotland, and another of the Clydesdale Banking Co. are established here; a bank for savings, opened in 1824, has been eminently successful. There are several good inns. The parish church stands about thirty yards off the High-street, and is centrically placed in relation to the parish generally, the extreme points not being at a greater distance than three miles and a half. The Free church, erected in 1843, is a handsome ornament to Bridge-street, and the chapel, belonging to the United Presbyterian congregation, is a convenient building. There is a female society for the relief of the occasional poor, and a masonic lodge. The town is well lighted with gas. A few years ago a considerable sum of money was left by Mr. George Easton, of Chester, towards the erection of a mechanics' hall. The building, a stone one, is now (1866) in course of erection in High-street. The market is held on Thursday; from the last week of November till the end of April, it is extensively supplied with pork, at which there are sometimes sold, in a single day, from £1,000 to £2,000 worth; there is also a market for hiring servants on the second Thursday of October (old style). Fairs are held on the second Thursdays in January, February, March, April, and May, the third Thursday in June, and the second Thursday in August (all old style); the last fair, which is for lambs, is the largest and last lamb fair in Scotland—the number of lambs on the ground being, in some years, from 30,000 to 40,000; the remaining fairs are, a new one (established for the sale of cattle) in September, the second Thursday in October for cattle and horses, the second Thursday in November, and the Thursday before Christmas (all old style). These fairs add much to the prosperity of the town, being well attended; the new one in September takes place the Thursday before the large fair on Brough Hill. The day following the lamb fair in August, races occasionally take place. An auction mart is held at the King's Arms every Thursday, for the sale of cattle, sheep, &c., and is well attended.

DRYFESDALE parish is in the district of Annandale, and includes the town of Lockerbie; the extreme length from north-east to south-west is about seven miles; the average breadth of the upper part is about three miles, and of the lower half about one and a half; about two-thirds of the parish is lowland, and the rest is hilly. There is also a considerable extent of holm land towards the junction of the Annan and the Dryfe. Of the whole extent of 10,372 acres in this parish, about eight thousand are either cultivated or have occasionally been in tillage, the remainder being in moor and pasturage. The point which assumes the greatest height is Whitewoollen Hill, the elevation of which is 650 feet above the level of the sea.

SAINT MUNGO parish is in the district of Annandale, through which the road to Glasgow and Carlisle passes; it is distant about three miles from the village of Ecclefechan, and three miles from the town of Lockerbie. Castlemilk is one of the most beautiful mansions in this part of Scotland, being romantically situated in the midst of pleasure grounds, and in the bosom of a fine valley. This was originally the seat of the ancient Lords of Annandale. Much later it belonged to the Maxwells and the Douglasses; it has been recently purchased from George Armstrong, Esq., by a member of the Jardine family. In the minority of Edward VI. it was besieged by the Duke of Somerset, and some of the balls fired on that occasion were found in 1771, when planting a spot afterwards called 'The Cannon Holes.' The present proprietor, Robert Jardine, Esq., M.P., is erecting a new mansion near to the one above-mentioned. There is an Established church and a parochial school in the parish, which contains about 4,983 acres.

TUNDERGARTH is a parish of about 10,514 acres, on which a great number of sheep are pastured, and is separated from that of Saint Mungo on the west, is nearly 13 miles in length, by a breadth of only about two miles in its widest part. The old castle, now in ruins, is deserving of notice, as it was formerly the residence of the Marquesses of Annandale. The conspicuous hill, called Brunswark, overlooks the district from the south. There is an Established church and a parochial school in the parish.

APPLEGARTH (or Applegirth) is a parish in the presbytery of Lochmaben; in length northwards it extends nearly five miles and a half, and its breadth eastward the same; it contains about 11,929 acres. It is bounded by Wamphray on the north-east, by Hutton on the east, by Johnstone and Lochmaben on the west, and by Dryfesdale on the south. The village, or hamlet rather, lies on the banks of the Annan, three miles from Lockerbie, and about eleven miles from Dumfries. There are two railway stations, an Established church, and two parochial schools in the parish.

SIBBALDBIE, a small village in the parish of Applegarth, is three miles from Lockerbie, and contains the woollen mill of Mr. William Davidson, also a parochial school; and Balgray, the residence of R. Jardine, Esq., is near the village.

POST OFFICE, High Street, Lockerbie, John Primrose Douglas, Post Master.—Letters from London and the North and South of England, arrive at twenty-five minutes past five morning, and seven evening; and are despatched thereto at twenty-five minutes past seven evening. Letters from Edinburgh, Glasgow, and the North of Scotland, arrive at ten minutes past eight evening, and twelve night; and are despatched thereto at half-past six evening, and ten night.

MOFFAT,

WITH THE PARISHES OF JOHNSTONE, KIRKPATRICK-JUXTA, AND WAMPHRAY, AND THE HAMLETS OF CRAIGIELANDS AND HOPPERTOOTIE.

MOFFAT, is a large parish, of about 40,068 acres, in the interesting district of Annandale—the town (which has been styled the 'Baden of Scotland') is small, airy, cleanly, and very respectable, 51 miles S. of Edinburgh, and 21 N. of Dumfries; situated about 1½ miles from Beattock station, on the Caledonian railway, to and from which omnibuses run (from the Annandale and the Buccleuch Arms Hotels) to meet all trains. By this railway accessis easy to the metropolis and the neighbouring towns, as well as to Carlisle and England generally. During the season omnibuses also ply from these inns to St. Mary's Loch on the Selkirk road—passing Frenchland Tower, the lands of Dumcrieff (Lord Rollo), Craigieburn, celebrated in song by Burns, Hogg, &c. (J. Proudfoot, Esq.), Capplegill, (J. Johnstone, Esq.), Bodsbeck Hill, the scene of Hogg's tale of "The Brownie," "The Grey Mare's Tail," sung of in Scott's "Marmion," Loch Skene, a wild and solitary tarn, and are met at St. Mary's Cottage (Tibbie Shiel's), by conveyances from Peebles and Selkirk, whence there are railways. The town stands 378 feet above the level of the sea, and upon rising ground gently declining towards the south, immediately at the foot of, and embraced by a chain of mountains, which form the northern boundaries of Dumfries-shire, with the adjacent counties of Lanark, Peebles, and Selkirk, and which completely environ it on the west, north, and east; the huge summits of this elevated region reach to various altitudes; some covered with wood—others beautifully chequered and skirted with plantations of unequal size, and natural clumps of birch, oak, and mountain ash, affording shelter and enclosure to the intervening grounds, which are partly cultivated and partly (though chiefly) pasture. The progress in these pursuits has been of late very remarkable, as shown in the rise of the price of land, and the reputation of the farm stock of the breeders in the neighbourhood. The principal street of the town (High street) is wide and spacious, laid down upon the principle recommended by the late J. L. M'Adam, and is clean and dry, even within a few minutes after the heaviest fall of rain. It is beautifully lined with ranges of excellent shops, well supplied with the necessaries and luxuries of life, and even the branch streets are being pressed into the service of commerce. On the "well road" and all around the skirts of the town proper, there are rows of splendid villas, cottages, &c., externally well built, and internally fitted up with all the modern appliances of comfort. Within the last ten years building has progressed rapidly, and some fine terraces, crescents, and places have been planned and begun. Several mansions stud the vicinity—Braefoot, Craigieburn, Dumcrieff, Granton, Heatheryhaugh, Langshaw, Larch-hill, Mount Charles, &c. The town commands an extensive and fine prospect of a delightful valleys, stretching towards the south, interspersed with hedge-rows, meadows and corn-fields, and pleasingly diversified by the windings of the river Annan, which has its source in an extraordinary strange and wild ravine, in this district, named the 'Devil's Beef Tub,; and runs at the distance of about two hundred yards, along the south-west of the town, then glides away to meet its neighbouring streams, the Evan and the Moffat, which unite about five miles below: the surrounding plantations, every year increase in extent and beauty, and the cultured strath, the tree-garnished hill, the legended turret, ancient Roman camps and roads, beautiful walks, and the copse and thicket free to the feet of the visitor, supply the eye with pleasure and the frame with health. About four miles north-west from hence there is a petrifying spring, and there are others that do not attract so much notice. To the antiquary the neighbourhood of Moffat presents many objects of gratification, and to these are attached traditions worthy of attention, but too numerous and prolix for detail in a work like the present. The celebrated road maker, John Loudon M'Adam, died in this town on the 26th November, 1836, in his 81st year; he was a native of Ayrshire, but was much attached to the locality of Moffat, where he spent a great portion of his early life; upon one of his sons was conferred the honour of knighthood, which his father had declined on account of his age and growing infirmities; Mr. M'Adam received from government £10,000, in two separate instalments: to his credit it is recorded that, during the whole career of his honourable independent service, he never contracted for works, deeming such a method of acquiring wealth incompatible with the duties of an engineer. On the 18th September, 1860, the eminent civil engineer, Joseph Locke, M.P. (born at Attercliffe, 1806), assistant and pupil of George Stephenson, died in Moffat, whilst enjoying the sports of the shooting season. There are three principal inns, admirably conducted by their respective proprietors—namely, the 'Annandale Arms,' the 'Buccleuch Arms,' and the 'Star,' while a fourth, the 'Beattock Bridge Hotels,' lies south of the town, and near the railway. The Star is an elegant recently built inn, the Buccleuch Arms (formerly Cranstoun's Private Hotel, has been enlarged, refitted, and improved as a public inn; while the Annandale Arms is a place of old repute, and the Beattock Bridge Hotel is known to all travellers. There are likewise in the town well frequented bath-rooms, to which a spacious newsroom is attached for the use of visitors; these are under excellent management. The large hall of the bath-room is used for concerts, lectures, &c., and during the summer, a subscription band is added to the other attractions, which dispenses 'the concord of sweet sound' to the promenaders; on every Friday during the season, there is a weekly ball. On the same premises, there is a small but neat and well kept bowling-green, as well as a billiard room. The other chief public buildings are Moffat House (the town residence of the superior, J. J. Hope Johnstone, Esq. of Annandale), the Established, the Free, and the United Presbyterian Churches, the latter, a handsome structure, opened for worship in July, 1864, a temporary Episcopal Chapel has recently been erected off Well Road. There are also the Banks, the Academy, and Morison's School.

Moffat has long and justly been celebrated as a fashionable summer resort, for invalids and pleasure seekers, and for the medicinal virtues of its mineral waters. The springs are three in number, one sulphureous and two chalybeate; the sulphureous spring is distinguished by the name of 'Moffat Well,' and is about a mile from the town: a very good carriage-road leads to it, and during the summer, omnibuses ply between it and the town. The Fons Moffetensis was described in Latin, in 1659, by Matthew Mackaile, as a spring possessing great healing virtues, sufficiently well known to excite interest; it is now upwards of two hundred and sixty years since the discovery of the valuable qualities of this spring, during which time it has been much frequented from all parts of Scotland and also by visitors from England: and in some instances from Ireland; of late, the summer visitors have so increased, as to be numbered by thousands. In all scrofulous and scorbutic cases it is a powerful remedy, being seldom known to prove ineffectual when the lungs were not diseased: in the removal of bilious complaints, also, it is eminently successful, as well as in creating an appetite and promoting digestion; and it is an excellent specific for gravel and rheumatism; it sparkles in the glass like champagne, but is so volatile that it can be drunk in perfection only at the fountain, whither the summer sojourners hie early in the morning, on foot or per omnibus. Hartfell Spa was first discovered in the year 1748, by a man named John Williamson; it issues from a rock of alum slate, in the side of Hartfell mountain, near Moffat; it may be carried to any distance, but it well not keep good for more than four days; it is a potent restorative, highly beneficial in all complaints peculiar to the fair sex. The other chalybeate is of a peculiar nature, and obtained in a very curious manner, viz., by pouring water upon a rock in the side of a savage dell, called 'Gartpool Linn,' in the vicinity of the town; the surface of this rock is strongly impregnated with sulphate of allumina and iron: the water is much stronger than that of Hartfell, and consequently taken in smaller portions—not more than a wine-glass full at a time. The exquisite scenery of this Linn has been laid out in walks by the munificence of the proprietor (Hon. Butler Johnstone), and is freely open to the public. The different rivers supply abundance of amusement to the trout angler, and the celebrated alpine lake, Lockskeen (whose elevation is upwards of one thousand feet above the level of the sea), contains the finest species of that fish in the south of Scotland. The outlet of the waters of this lake is by the lofty and magnificent cascade called the 'Grey Mare's Tail,' tumbling over precipitous rocks, computed to be about three hundred feet above the level of the vale, and which appears, from the opposite side of the glen to be one unbroken fall. This is the loftiest fall in the British Islands: it pours its waters into the infant Moffat, which flows on through a grand narrow pass, until it sweeps through the domains of Dumcrieff (the property of Lord Rollo), and loses itself in the Annan. Moffat was constituted a burgh by the adoption (1864) of the Police Act, and now possesses a commission invested with powers for the sanitary improvement of the burgh, the holding of monthly courts and other matters concerning health and morals. Moffat is the seat of a sheriff's small debt (local) court, and the justice of peace courts are held on the first Friday of April, August, and December. Moffat has been the birth place of several notables, eg—Nicholaus de Moffet, Bishop of Glasgow (1260 1270), Robert Johnstone, L.L.D., author of a 'History of Scotland,' &c.; Walter Boyd, banker, of Boyd, Benfield & Co.; William Dickson, a writer on Slavery: William Murray, the chronometrist; and Dr. D. Welsh, moderator of the first Free Church Assembly. The late Peter Johnstone, Esq., of Harthope has endowed in the parish a Side School, at Evan Water, and a Female Industrial School, beside the Ladies' knowe. The market is held on Friday, and the fairs on the third Friday in March, the last Friday of July, and the second Friday in September, at which time a flower, poultry, dairy, pony, sheep, &c., show, or rather a combination of shows is held, to which, by its excellence, great crowds are attracted, and on the 20th of October, or the Friday after.

The parish of KIRKPATRICK-JUXTA derives its name from its vicinity to a chapel, of which the ruins are yet visible, formerly dedicated to the famous missionary, meaning the 'lands nigh to the kirk of Saint Patrick;' it is situate in the upper district of Annandale—bounded on the north by Moffat, and on the east by Wamphray, and contains about 22,469 acres. The celebrated Gartpool Linn is in this parish; likewise the Castle of Auchencass, the ruins of which cover a considerable extent of ground; it was erected by Randolph, Earl of Murray, during the minority of David 'the Bruce,' and subsequently was in the possession of Douglas of Morton; its antiquity, therefore, is unquestionable. The modern Castle of Auchencass (the Hon. Butler Johnstone) is a structure of considerable extent, and is splendidly situated on a rising ground near the Evan Water. The old tower of Loch-house is supposed to have been rebuilt by James Johnstone, of Corehead, chamberlain to Bishop Whiteford, of Brechin whose daughter the chamberlain married, and with her obtained possession of the extensive lands belonging to the bishop, in Kirkpatrick-Juxta and Moffat. Loch-house is now inhabited by a cottier or herd, who has his cot within its walls. There are other ruins of ancient edifices, eg—a chapel a little to the N.W. of Moffat, which excite some interest and are worthy of survey. The summer residence of William Colvin, Esq., Craigielands; and the elegant mansion of Marchbankwood (Miss Hope Johnstone), near which is also Beattock House (Mrs. Jardine), a fine modern building, are the only modern mansions of any note in the parish, with the exception of the Beattock Bridge Hotel, about a mile and a half from Moffat. About one-third of the land is under tillage; the larger portion is unimproved and pasture, though it is being rapidly subdued to the plough. CRAIGIELANDS and HIPPERTOOTIE are hamlets in Kirkpatrick-Juxta.

JOHNSTONE parish, is in the district of Annandale, adjoining Kirkpatrick-Juxta; it is six miles in length and three in breadth, and contains about 13,607 acres. The remains of Lochwood tower, situate at the northern end of the parish, in the centre of a venerable and picturesque wood, and surrounded by impassable bogs, are the only vestiges of antiquity, sufficiently interesting to attract attention, in the parish: regarding the (now unknown) personage by whose orders it was originally erected, James VI. is recorded to have remarked, that, 'however, hones the might have been in outward appearance, he must have been a rogue at heart;' Robert, natural brother to the chieftain, Lord John Maxwell, of Nithsdale, burnt it down in savage glee in the sixteenth century, during the clannish quarrel, which resulted in the battle of Dryffe Lands. John James Hope Johnstone, Esq., of Annandale, is proprietor, and occupies an elegant mansion, called Raehills, the only notable residence in the parish. There is nothing peculiar to be observed respecting this local portion of the district, further than that (on the authority of a late reverend minister) 'in this populous rural parish there is neither public-house nor meeting house, resident surgeon, nor village, nor prison, nor lawyer, nor beggar,' all of which is true still. It has four well conducted schools, and all the educational, moral, and religious interests of the parish are carefully and efficiently attended to. The parish churchyard contains the family vault of the House of Annandale. The heritors of this parish erected in 1862, a new Parochial School, with house for the master, and library attached, at a cost of five hundred and fifty pounds, the library contains about one thousand volumes.

The parish of WAMPHRAY receives its names from its situation, emphatically expressed by the Gaelic word Uamh-fri, signifying 'the den in the forest.' Agreeably to this etymology, the church stands in a deep woody recess, by the side of Wamphray water, which brawls and thunders its ways through a most romantic and picturesque glen, formed on both sides either by high steep banks, clad with thriving plantations—or by lofty basaltic columns, mantled with ivy, and sportively adorned by saplings of ash rising from their interstices. This parish adjoins Kirkpatrick-Juxta and Johnstone; it is of an oblong figure, six miles and a half in length by three in breadth, with an acreage of about 13,190. There are but four resident proprietors. The Caledonian Railway runs through the parish, and has a station here.

SANQUHAR,

WITH THE VILLAGES OF CRAWICK, KIRKCONNEL, WANLOCKHEAD, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

SANQUHAR is a large parish of about 41,078 acres, in the district of Nithsdale,—the town, an ancient one, and burgh of barony, is 56 miles S.S.W. of Edinburgh, the same distance S. by E. of Glasgow, 32 E.S.E. of Ayr, and somewhat about 26 N.W. of Dumfries; situated on the road, up the left bank of the Nith, passing into Ayrshire, and on the Glasgow and South-western Railway, for which line there is a station on the east side of the town. Sanquhar, it is supposed, owes its origin to a castle of considerable importance, the ruins of which are now to be seen at a short distance to the south-east, on a high bank overlooking the river Nith. It must have been a building of great strength, having towers at the angles, and was surrounded by a ditch. It formerly belonged to a branch of the family of Crichton, ancestors to the Earl of Dumfries. The castle, as well as greater part of the land in the neighbourhood, is now the property of the Duke of Buccleuch. About a mile from it stands the house of Eliock, the residence of the family of Veitch, which gave a senator to the college of justice in the last century; this mansion lays claim (which is disputed by some authorities) to the honour of being the birthplace of the 'admirable Crichton.' The town consists chiefly of one main street. The family of Queensberry have been great patrons of this town, particularly in improvements on the roads which pass through or approach to it. The late duke also erected the town hall at his sole expense; it stands at the end of High-street, and has a tower with a clock. Sanquhar is the principal coal mart in the county, and large quantities are supplied to Dumfries and other parts. In this parish, as well as that of Kirkconnel, the seams are most valuable; the coal-field extends seven miles in length and two and a half in breadth, and the veins are from three feet eight inches to four feet six inches in depth. The Duke of Buccleuch is the chief proprietor. At the eastern extremity of the parish, about nine miles from the town, are the valuable lead mines of WANLOCKHEAD, belonging likewise to that nobleman. They are said to have been discovered in the minority of James VI., by some Germans, who were employed in searching for gold about this spot. At present, employment by these works is furnished to a considerable number of miners, artisans, and others. There are about one hundred and fifty cotton weavers employed by the Glasgow manufacturers, and upwards of one hundred females of the neighbourhood are occupied in embroidering muslins for the same market. Near the town is a large manufactory for spades, shovels, and other agricultural implements. In the town are branches of the British Linen Company's Bank and the Royal Bank of Scotland; there is also a Savings' Bank and a Mechanics' Institute. Sanquhar was erected into a burgh of barony in 1484, and advanced to the dignity of a royal burgh, by charter from James VI., in 1596. It is governed by a provost, two bailies, a dean of guild, treasurer, and four councillors; and, in connection with Dumfries, Annan, and Lochmaben, sends one member to parliament. A sheriff's small-debt court is held here four times a year. The places of worship in the town are the parish church, a Free church, two for United Presbyterians, a Baptist chapel, and one for the Evangelical Union or Morrisonion body. The parish church, which was erected in 1823 on the site of the old one, is a very handsome edifice, with a square tower, and stands on elevated ground at the west end of the town.

At WANLOCKHEAD is a chapel, in connection with the establishment, for the accommodation of the miners and others employed in the lead works. The executors of the late James Crichton, of Friars' carse, in this county, and a native of Sanquhar, appropriated £2,000 for the purpose of erecting and endowing a free school in Sanquhar. The weekly market, formerly held on Friday, is no longer continued, but there are five cattle markets held in the year, namely, on the first Friday in February; on the third Friday in April; on the Friday before Tarbolton fair, in June; on the Friday before Falkirk tryst, in October; and on the Friday before Mauchline fair, in November. Fairs on the first Friday after the 12th day in the months of February, May, August, and November (old style); and a large fair for lambs, sheep, and wool, on the 17th July, or the first Friday after.

KIRKCONNEL village is four miles from Sanquhar, and eight from New Cumnock; situate on the high road between Dumfries and Glasgow. It contains the parish church and parochial school. The parish, which is bounded by that of Sanquhar on the south and east, is fifteen miles in length and eight in breadth, and contains about 26,808 acres. In it are two mineral springs, one possessing medicinal properties similar in effect to those of Hartfell spa, near Moffat; the other similar to the Kirkland spa, in Galloway. The village inhabitants are almost all employed in the lead mines. The Duke of Buccleuch is proprietor of nearly the whole of this parish.

THORNHILL,

AND THE PARISHES OF MORTON, DURISDEER, AND PENPONT, THE VILLAGE OF CARRON BRIDGE, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

THORNHILL is a very respectable and considerable village in the parish of Morton, 66 miles S. by E. of Glasgow, 48 N.W. of Carlisle, 40 N.E. of Newton Stewart, 34 S.E. of Kilmarnock, 30 N.W. of Annan, the same distance S.E. of Cumnock, 22 N.E. of New Galloway, 14 N.W. of Dumfries, 12 S.E. of Sanquhar, and 7½ N.E. of Moniaive. It is the station on the Glasgow and South-Western Railway, and is charmingly situated towards the centre of the extensive amphitheatre of hills which include Middle Nithsdale, with the river Nith winding through the valley. About four miles from Thornhill is Drumlanrig Castle, the noble mansion of the Duke of Buccleuch and Queensberry: it is beautifully situated on rising ground on the right bank of the river, overlooking the whole district. Within the last thirty years the woods around the castle have been greatly extended, and now cover a large portion of country. The gardens and pleasure grounds of the castle are very beautiful; they are kept with great care, and are free to the inspection of visitors on Tuesdays and Fridays. The castle was rebuilt by William, first Duke of Queensberry, between the years 1674 and 1684, and it is said that the expense incurred in building was so great, that the Duke, not wishing that any one should inspect the accounts connected with it, wrote upon them: "The deil pyke out his een that looks herein." It is also related that the Duke only slept one night in the castle that had cost him so much in erecting. Some of the remains of a very ancient building, which was called the House of the Hausock, and on the site of which the present castle was built, may still be traced. In the year 1776, when Mr. Pennant visited Drumlanrig, there was a breed of wild cattle in the woods, which are described as having been of a milk-white colour, with black ears and fine curved horns. It is said they were removed to Chillingham Castle, in Northumberland, where the breed still exists as well as at Hamilton. Within a mile of Drumlanrig Castle there are the ruins of a very ancient castle, which has been recently excavated with much care, by order of His Grace the Duke of Buccleuch. This is Tibber's Castle, which appears to have been destroyed in the time of Bruce, and is referred to in Blind Harry's metrical history of Sir William Wallace. About three miles from Thornhill are the very fine ruins of Morton Castle. It is very ancient, having been under the care of Sir Thomas Randolph, Earl of Moray, during the minority of David Bruce. The ruins and the surrounding scenery are very picturesque, and have formed a study for several distinguished painters, "Thomson, of Duddingston, Horatio M'Culloch, and J. E. Coulie." The remains of Roman encampments, and, in the high grounds, of ancient British encampments, are very numerous over the whole of the district, and at one time there were many cairns of stones. About three miles from Thornhill, in the parish of Closeburn, there is a very remarkable ravine, worn out of soft sandstone by a little rivulet. This is Crichope Linn, classical from the writings of Sir Walter Scott, in which it is described as being the hiding-place of Burley of Balfour. This place, as well as almost every glen in this district, has associations connected with the times of the persecuted covenanters. The whole of the district may also be said to form part of "the land of Burns." Over it he travelled while engaged in the duties of the Excise; and many of his finest poems are connected with it. The village of Thornhill is in a very salubrious situation; the streets are wide, and the houses are neatly disposed. The tenure upon which the houses are held is doubtful. The land belongs to the Duke of Buccleuch and Queensberry. In Thornhill is an institute, having for its object the diffusion of knowledge among the people by means of public lectures, classes, &c.; it has also successfully engaged in a few publications. There is also a public library, containing nearly 1,500 volumes; a reading room; several benevolent societies; a musical club; a bowling-green; an instrumental band, &c., &c. A private museum, the property of Dr. Grierson, contains many antiquities of local interest, and natural history specimens. The Nithsdale Agricultural Society's show is held on the third Tuesday of September, annually; James Russell, Esq., being its present secretary. The trade of the village is chiefly of a domestic nature; there is, however, a brewery, and it can boast of two of the most respectable and comfortable hotels that can be met with in the south of Scotland—they are the 'Buccleuch and Queensberry Arms,' and the 'George.' The parish church, which was erected in 1781, was so inconveniently situated, as regarded the accommodation of the majority of the inhabitants, that it was taken down, and a new one in 1840-1 erected, in a handsome style, contiguous to the village. Fairs are held on the second Tuesdays in the months of February, May, August, and November (old style); and on the last Friday in June; the latter chiefly for hiring reapers and agricultural labourers.

CARRON-BRIDGE is a village in the parishes of Morton and Durisdeer; it stands on the river Carron, on the road from Sanquhar to Dumfries, 1¾ miles north west of Thornhill; it has a station on the Glasgow and South-Western Railway.

The parish of MORTON extends from the left bank of the Nith north-eastward to the borders of Lanarkshire, a distance of between six and seven miles, by a breadth of about four, its contents being 8,127 acres. It is bounded on the north and north-west by Penpont and Durisdeer, and on the east and south by Closeburn; it is both pastural and arable, and, where cultivated, is well enclosed and fertile. In addition to the Nith, the Carron and Ample streams pass through the parish, nearly the whole of which is the property of the Duke of Buccleuch.

PENPONT parish, containing 22,100 acres, gives name to a presbytery. It is an extensive agricultural district, of irregular form and uneven surface, having comparatively little flat or low grounds: the latter description of land is found chiefly upon the verge of the rivers which flow through it. The village is about two miles from Thornhill; the church, which is contiguous to the village, was built in 1782; it underwent a thorough repair in 1834, when a session-house was annexed to it. There are also places of worship for the Reformed and the United Presbyterians. The village is lighted with gas, and the houses are supplied with water by means of pipes. The Glenquhargen Craig, rising to a great height, is in this parish; there are likewise the remains of Roman encampments, causeways, &c.

The parish of DURISDEER is bounded on the south and south-east by Morton, on the north and north-east by the parish of Crawford, on the south and south-west by Penpont, and on the north-west by Sanquhar; it is eight miles in length, and six in breadth; acreage about 19,852. In this parish is Drumlanrig Castle, the superb and noble residence of the Duke of Buccleuch; it was erected towards the close of the seventeenth century. About a mile above the church the traces of a Roman encampment are obvious. Adjoining the parish church is the sepulchral vault of the Drumlanrig Douglasses: over it is a magnificent marble monument and two sculptural figures in the Roubilliac taste, representing James, second Duke of Queensberry, and his Duchess; this monument was brought from Rome. Exclusive of three small properties, the entire parish belongs to the nobleman before-mentioned.

ELGINSHIRE,

So designated from the name of its capital, Elgin, and sometimes Morayshire, from being the central division of the 'Province of Moray'—is one of the northern counties of Scotland: bounded on the north by that branch of the north sea called the Moray Frith, on the east and south-east by Banffshire, on the south-west by Inverness-shire, and on the west by the latter county and also that of Nairn. The figure of Elginshire is very irregular, being intersected in several places by districts of the counties which form its boundaries; with Nairn it is so intimately connected, that, in speaking of its shape, that small county is not unfrequently included in the description: thus conjoined, the district is somewhat of a triangular figure—with the apex pointed inland—and in this quarter partaking of the wild, rocky, and mountainous character of the Highlands. The county may be said to comprehend 470 square miles of a land, and seven square miles of lakes. For several years past, agricultural improvements have made rapid strides, and the greater portion of waste land is now either brought into cultivation or planted with forest trees. In ancient times the limits of the county were much more extensive than at present, comprehending all that tract of country which lies between the river Spey on the east, the Beauly on the north-west, and the northern confines of Argyleshire on the south west. The remains of antiquity are numerous, of which the cathedral of Elgin, the Bishop's palace at Spynie, the priory of Pluscardine, the castles of Lochindorb and Dunphail, and the 'dun' of Relugas, are the chief. Of the struggles of the natives with the Danes, who infested the district in former ages, there are various testimonials, such as 'cairns,' monumental pillars, &c. &c. The 'Province of Moray,' anciently so important and extensive, in the present day is without any political distinction, and is divided into the three several shires of Banff, Moray (or Elgin), and Nairn. On the east it is separated from Aberdeenshire by the Deveron; on the west it is bounded by Inverness-shire, and on the north it has the large arm of the sea, designated from it the Moray Frith. So late as the time of Charles I, the Highlanders considered Moray as a sort of neutral land, where every man was at liberty to take his prey. The Province of Moray suffered more, perhaps, than any other district in Scotland by the civil wars. The people were then generally attached to the covenant; and, as Montrose made it one of his principal scenes of action, it is easy to conceive that its peaceable farmers were not permitted to have both their opinions and their goods undisturbed. Montrose, in his descent upon Moray, in 1645, after his victory of Innerlochy, destroyed all the houses of such as did not join his standard, and gave up the towns of Banff, Cullen, and Elgin to indiscriminate pillage.

Soil, Surface, Climate, Produce, &c.—The soil of this county, though less uniform than that of Banffshire, is for the most part a sandy loam—in some places a sandy gravel: considerable tracts are of very fertile clay, and of the most genial mould. The low country may be pictured as a large plain, extending from the Spey westward, between the shore and a range of mountains, for the whole length of the district, nearly forty miles—but of unequal breadth, from about five to twelve miles or more, measured on a straight line from the hills to the shore: this plain, however, is diversified, over its whole extent, by ridges of lower hills in general nearly parallel to the shore: beyond this are valleys of great fertility and beauty, near the sources of the rivers Spey, Lossie, and Findhorn—with the lesser vales along the banks of the tributary streams which pervade the intervening hills. Within the range of the mountain district, the county may be described as chiefly pastoral; the arable land in most instances, hanging upon the acclivities of the valleys, or stretching out in narrow plains upon the banks of the waters which wind among the hills—the wideness of the valley bearing a relative proportion to the size of the river. The upper part of the county is popularly termed 'the Brae of Moray:' it is mountainous and woody, and abounds in beautiful lakes. The agriculture is very spirited, and the land in general yields a higher rent than that of the neighbouring shires. In the lower part of the county, the Earl of Fife, and other proprietors, have formed plantations to so great an extent, that almost every part of the country inaccessible to the plough has been covered with different species of forest trees. A considerable traffic in the export of wood from the forests of Strathspey, by floating it to Garmouth, has been carried on to an advantage. Except sandstone, limestone, and marl, no mineral substance of value has been discovered in this district. The greatest attention is paid to the breed and to the feeding of cattle, and the culture of wheat is not so general anywhere northward of the Grampians. Little can be said respecting manufactures: woollen stuffs are made to a small amount, as well as linen yarn; which, together with grain, cattle, salmon, hewn freestone, wood, and whisky, comprehend the principal exports. Ship building has long been carried on extensively at Garmouth, at the mouth of the Spey. Herring fishing is prosecuted at four villages on the coast, viz:—Lossiemouth, Hopeman, Burghead, and Findhorn. The average annual catch of herrings, being valued at upwards of £30,000 annually, exclusive of the amount derived from the produce of the white fishing, and the fine salmon fishing, at the mouths of the rivers Spey and Findhorn, and all along the sea coast. The Duke of Richmond's salmon fishings at the mouth of the Spey, are alone, worth £12,000 a year. The coast of this district, although within the fifty-eighth degree of north latitude, has ever been distinguished for the mildness of its climate: the hardier kind of fruit—all the varieties of the apple, and almost all of the pear and of the plum—by a little attention may be abundantly produced on every farm; fruits, also of greater delicacy—the apricot, the nectarine, and the peach—ripen sufficiently on a wall in the open air. With respect to the winds, the most prevailing gales are from the north-west. This part of the country presents no object so elevated as to attract the clouds or impede their course; and from this cause, it is concluded, falls of snow are comparatively unfrequent, and of small depth, as they are drifted over the subjacent levels, insomuch that the operations of husbandry are but little interrupted by the inclemency of the weather. It is asserted that, in the lower part of Moray, the climate is as warm, and the atmosphere at least as dry, as in any district of Scotland; in the higher quarter, the weather is more mild than in the adjoining county of Banff, at the same distance from the sea coast—a natural consequence of its local position, the progress of cultivation, and the inherent warmth of the soil.

RIVERS, LAKES, AND RAILWAYS.—The principal rivers are the SPEY, the FINDHORN, and the LOSSIE, all flowing in a northerly direction, and each teeming with the finest salmon. There are many delightful lakes, of which LOCH SPYNIE is most deserving of notice: it is three miles in length and one in breadth, and appears to have been formerly a firth of the sea, though it is now shut up at the east and west by a long extent of valuable ground; in accordance with this apparency, the land between the lake and the sea still retains the appellation of Ross Isle; and a corroborative proof of the accuracy of the popular designation is exhibited by the sea-shells (particularly those of the oyster) that are found on the margin of the lake, several feet below the surface of the earth. Loch Spynie nourishes several of the aquatic tribes, but none in such abundance as the perch and the pike. The RAILWAYS in this county are the Aberdeen, and Inverness Junction Line which passes through, calling at Elgin and other towns—there is also a branch from Elgin to Lossiemouth, one from Orton to Craigellachie; a branch line from Findhorn to the Kinloss Station of the Inverness and Aberdeen Junction Railway, and a branch from the Alves Station of the Inverness and Aberdeen Junction Railway to Burghead.

Elginshire comprehends sixteen parishes, and eight parts of parishes; it contains two royal burghs—ELGIN and FORRES: the former is united with Cullen, Banff, Inverury, Kintore, and Peterhead, in returning one member to parliament; and the County at large, in conjunction with Nairnshire, deputes another representative.

POPULATION OF THE SHIRE IN THE YEARS 1811, 1821, 1831, 1841, 1851, AND 1861.

The Italic letters b. and p. respectively signify Burgh and Parish.

ABERNETHY AND KINCARDINE

ARE two parishes, but united under the first mentioned name, its situation is partly in Elginshire and partly in Invernesshire. It is bounded on the north by Duthil and Inverallan; on the east by Kirkmichael, and is separated on the south from Braemar by the celebrated Cairngorm mountain—its length is fifteen miles, by a breadth of nearly twelve. The river Nethy, from which the name is derived, runs through the parish, and falls into the Spey. There are several lochs, the principal being Loch Avon. Cairngorm mountain is one of the loftiest of the Grampians—it is 4,050 feet above the sea level, and 1,750 feet from the surface of Loch Avon, which is a mile from its base. It has obtained great celebrity from having furnished large quantities of a particular species of topaz, but which are now nearly exhausted. In the parish is an Established Church, and one for members of the Free Church, to both of which schools are attached. The Earl of Seafield is patron of the parish.

DUFFUS,

BURGHEAD, HOPEMAN, CUMMINGSTON, NEW DUFFUS AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

DUFFUS parish extends along the shore of the Moray Frith to the north of Elgin, from which the church is about five miles distant. The parish is about six miles in length, by about three in breadth, and contains about 6,000 acres arable. The villages of BURGHEAD, HOPEMAN, CUMMINGSTON and NEW DUFFUS are all within the parish.

BURGHEAD is a small fishing village in the above parish, eight miles W. from Elgin, and about ten N.E. from Forres. It possesses a fine pier, and a safe and commodious harbour, well protected from the north and east winds; at high water steam or other vessels may enter with perfect safety. This was anciently a Roman as well as a Danish station, the remains of a fort of the latter nation are still visible, also a well dug out of the solid rock, which is known by the name of the Roman well. The occupation of the inhabitants is fishing for salmon, herring, and cod. There is also a chemical works, at which there are several employed. The vessels belonging to this place land goods here for the surrounding country. In the parish is an Established Church, with a Chapel-of-Ease at Burghead, where there are also a Free Church, and an United Presbyterian Chapel, together with several schools.

DUTHIL,

ROTHIEMURCHUS AND CARR-BRIDGE.

DUTHIL, is a parish lying partly in this county and partly in that of Inverness; the river Spey is the divisional line here between the two districts, and the river Dulmac intersects that part of the parish situated in Moray, for nearly thirteen miles, when it falls into the Spey. ROTHIEMURCHUS, once a part of this parish and still connected with it in civil matters, is now a Parliamentary parish, lying between the Cairngorm mountain and the Spey, a short way further up that river than the greater part of Duthil; jointly they extend in length twenty miles, by a breadth of seventeen. The whole is generally highland in its character, game is plentiful, and there is a considerable quantity of natural wood. The name of Grant is remarkably prevalent in this district. The parish church stands about seven miles from Grantown and 24 from Inverhaven; and there is a Free church and manse. CARRBRIDGE, or, as it is commonly called, the "Bridge of Carr," is a small village in this parish, 20 miles from Kingussie, and 25 from Inverness.

EDENKILLIE AND DALLAS.

EDENKILLIE is a parish lying to the south of Forres. The church, which is near the centre of the parish, is about nine miles from Forres, in a most romantic situation. It stands on the banks of the Divie, a black tumbling stream that dashes from rock to rock along the bottom of deep, narrow ravines, and a little further down falls into the Findhorn. The woods of Darnaway on the west, and Altyre and Logie on the east, are very extensive, and unsurpassed in beauty. The viaduct, which carries the Inverness and Perth Junction Railway over the Divie, near the Church of Edenkillie, is said to be the finest bridge in the north of Scotland. It has seven arches, and the height from the surface of the water to the rails is about 110 feet.

DALLAS is a parish, fifteen miles in length and nine in breadth. The village is about eleven miles south west of Elgin, and nine of Forres, which is also the nearest railway station.

ELGIN,

WITH THE VILLAGES OF LOSSIEMOUTH, ALVES, NEW SPYNIE, BIRNIE, BISHOP MILL, LHANBRYD, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

ELGIN is a royal burgh, the capital of its shire, and the seat of a presbytery in the synod of Moray; 189 miles N. of Edinburgh by way of Aberdeen, and 153 by way of Brechin and Huntley, 83 N. of Brechin, 64 W. of Aberdeen, 39 N.E. of Inverness, 12 E. by N. of Forres, and 9 W. of Fochabers; pleasantly situated on the right bank of the river Lossie, about five miles above its influx into the Moray Firth at Lossiemouth, and surrounded by hills o'er clad with waving pine, beech, oak, and elm trees. It is the general supposition that the town was originally a settlement of Helgy, a general of the army of Sigurd, the Norwegian Earl of Orkney; who, about the year 927, conquered Caithness, Sutherland, Ross, and Moray, and it is said from this person the name of Elgin is derived; and as the word Helgyn is still used in the inscription upon the seal of the town, it is probable that this etymology is correct. So early as the reign of William the Lion a castle was built here, the ruins of which are still visible on an eminence, called 'Lady Hill,' on the north-west side of the town. It is now the site of a monumental column, erected by public subscription, in memory of the last Duke of Gordon. In 1224 Andrew, Bishop of Moray, translated the bishopric from Spynie to the church of the Holy Trinity, near Elgin; but the cathedral was burnt down by Alexander Stewart, Lord of Badenoch [commonly called the Red Wolf of Badenoch], son of Robert II., in 1390, who was forced from his fastness in Lockerbie, to do penance for the deed. About the year 1414 it was rebuilt in a magnificent manner. From what still remains, it appears to have been a large and superb edifice, in the Gothic style of architecture, two hundred and sixty-four feet in length, and thirty-five in breadth. The chapter-house, which still remains pretty entire, and was some years since repaired, and covered with a roof of lead, by the Exchequer, is a specimen of tasteful architecture; and the whole, when perfect, is supposed to have been one of the most magnificent religious structures in Europe. The ruins form a conspicuous object on the approach to Elgin from the east; while, as a beautiful contrast, immediately opposite, towards the south, stands Anderson's Institution, for the support of old age and the education of youth, a fine modern structure, erected by the munificent bequest of Major-General Andrew Anderson, H.E.I.C.S., a native of the place, and of very poor parentage. The funds for the support of this institution are between £70,000 and £80,000. The structure is in the Grecian style, and occupies about an acre of ground; it is surmounted by a handsome dome, and on the pediment in front, which is supported by four massive stone pillars, is placed a statue of the benefactor, represented in the attitude of delivering a bible to a youthful figure, whilst, with his right hand, he is supporting the figure of an aged man: the building cost about £8,000. The apartments for the aged are in the west wing; those for the scholars of the institution, of whom there are fifty, children of the working class, and are wholly supported and educated in the establishment, are in the east wing. At the back, or south wing, is the Free school, where the children receive a free education, but are supported at home; the number of these averages from two hundred and fifty to three hundred. After passing through the nursery grounds of Robert Morrison, this building has a pleasing effect on entering the town from Aberdeen. The western extremity of the town is embellished by Gray's Hospital, a noble and modern structure. Dr. Alexander Gray, of India, a native of Elgin, by will bequeathed £30,000 for the purpose of erecting and endowing a hospital for the sick poor of this town and county. This building is delightfully seated upon an eminence, and has a fine portico, supported by stately pillars, and surmounted by an elegant dome; the whole is spacious, and built of fine stone, according to a design furnished by Mr. Gillispie, of Edinburgh. The principal street of the town is about a mile in length, widening in the centre, where stands the Established church, a beautiful modern structure, after a plan by Archibald Simpson, Esq.; it is calculated to seat a congregation of two thousand. The western pediment is supported by six massive fluted columns; and at the east end is a lofty tower, surmounted by a figure of Demosthenes' lantern, supported by eight columns; the building cost about £8,000. On the west of it is a raised and spacious pavement, used as a market place for farmers' produce, and also a beautiful fountain, which has an imposing effect. In North-street, commencing about the middle of the town, are many fine buildings, particularly the Trinity Lodge Rooms, a handsome edifice erected in 1821, after a design by Mr. Burns, of Edinburgh, and at a cost of £3,000. This street is tastefully terminated by the Trinity or Scottish Episcopal chapel, a neat Gothic edifice, erected in 1825. During the last few years Elgin has very considerably increased in extent, and many of the old buildings, which obtruded themselves upon the front of High street, have been pulled down, and new structures raised in their places. In this street are the principal inns. Here, also, are the banking houses—highly respectable branches of the British Linen Company, the Commercial Bank of Scotland, the North of Scotland Bank, the Caledonian Bank, the Union Bank of Scotland, the Royal, the City of Glasgow, and a Savings' Bank. The trade of this burgh cannot be considered extensive, being situate in an agricultural district, and principally depending thereupon; it was, however, greatly increased by the opening of the Great North of Scotland and Morayshire Railways. There is a woollen manufactory, which employs a good many hands, and two iron foundries. Of the other branches, a trade in corn, wool, and timber, is of some consequence, and there is a large tannery, whilst in the neighbourhood are extensive lime works and a millstone quarry. Alexander II., in 1224, granted to the burgesses of Elgin a guild of merchants, which still continues, though the funds of the corporation were, for a considerable period, merged in the common good: connected with the guildry, there is a flourishing charity fund, from which decayed members and their families derive handsome pensions. The municipal government is vested in a provost, four baillies, and twelve councillors. The burgh joins with Banff, Cullen, Inverury, Kintore, and Peterhead, in returning one member to parliament. There are several mineral springs in the vicinity of Elgin, and from the healing virtues of their waters, with the salubrity of the climate, many are supposed to have derived considerable benefit. The weekly corn markets are held on Friday; the cattle markets are held on the third Friday in the months of January, February, March, April, the second Friday in May, the first Tuesday and last Friday in June, the third Tuesday and last Friday in July, August, September, and October, the second Friday in November, and the third Wednesday in December. The feeing markets are held on the Friday before the 26th May, the first Friday in July (harvest), and the Friday before the 22nd of November.

On the opposite bank of the Lossie is the small village of BISHOP MILL, the superior of which is the Earl of Seafield. It contains a few of the usual trades found in a country village, and two corn mills, and an assembly school.

LOSSIEMOUTH is a village in the parish of Drainey, five miles north from Elgin, situated on the banks of the Lossie, at its influx with the Moray Firth, from which locality its name is derived. It is the seaport of Elgin, and is fast advancing into importance. Most of the town is new and regularly laid out, and is a favourite resort for sea-bathers. Several gentlemen, resident in Elgin, have erected villas, in which they and their families reside during the summer months. A new harbour has been formed, which renders it a safe and commodious haven for shipping. The cost of this erection amounted to £20,000. The improvement of the harbour, and the facilities of railway communication, which this village has now enjoyed for several years, have given a stimulus to the trade, which has rendered it one of the most important seaports north of Aberdeen.

ST. ANDREWS—LHANBRYD.—This parish comprehends what were originally two—St. Andrews and Lhanbryd; the former, including LINKWOOD, and BARMUCKITY, the latter lay to the east of St. Andrew's and comprehended the lands of COXTON, PITNASEIR, &c.

About 3 miles E. of Elgin, and in the above-named parish, is the neat village of LHANBRYD, having a good inn, two saw mills, a woollen mill, a few well-stored shops, a respectable boarding school, and an infant school. It is noteworthy for its geological productions, some valuable specimens of which are in the possession of Mr. Peter M'Kenzie, of Fossil Cottage.

FOCHABERS,

SPEYMOUTH, GARMOUTH, KINGSTON, URQUHART AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

FOCHABERS is a small town and burgh of barony, in the parish of Bellie, 52 miles E. by N. of Inverness, 12 S.W. of Cullen, 9 E. of Elgin, and 8 N.N.W. of Keith: situated on the great north road from Edinburgh and Aberdeen to Inverness, and occupying a rural site in a deep valley, through which the Spey runs at a little distance to the west of the town. The houses are neatly built, and the streets diverge from a square, in the centre of which stands the Parish Church, and near to it an Episcopalian Chapel; there is also a large chapel for Roman Catholics. An elegant stone bridge, which crossed the Spey near the town, was partly swept away by the great floods which occurred in the summer of 1829; it has subsequently been rebuilt.

This is not an important town as respects trade. Its thoroughfare situation contributes somewhat to its prosperity, which is likewise assisted by the gentee[l] neighbourhood by which it is surrounded. Fochabers i[s] a burgh, and is governed by a baron baillie, appointed by the Duke of Richmond, whose seat (Gordon Castle) graces the vicinity of the town, and is the great object of attraction to, and admiration of, strangers. It is allowed to be one of the most magnificent structures, and, perhaps, the finest mansion north of the Firth of Forth. The edifice was originally a gloomy tower in the centre of a morass, called the Bog of Gight, and accessible only by a narrow causeway and a drawbridge. It is now a vast quadrangular structure, the front stretching to the length of 568 feet, surrounded by a beautiful park, and equally beautiful country. It is approached by a gateway, at the west end of the town. The body of the building rises to the height of four lofty stories, and on each end is a pavillion of two storeys, connected by a gallery of two lower storeys. The ancient tower, which is ninety feet high, overlooks the whole structure, and commands a view of the entire plain, with all its waving woods, and the windings of the river Spey. The busts and pictures which grace the interior of this noble residence are most valuable, comprising many rare and original gems of art. At the eastern end of the town stands an elegant building, in the Elizabethan style of architecture—this is a free school founded by Alexander Milnes, Esq., a native of Fochabers. By his will, dated New Orleans, 17th of October, 1836, he bequeathed to the parishes of Bellie and Ordiish, the sum of 100,000 dollars for establishing a free school. The cost of erecting the building amounted to £4,338, out of a fund of £16,415—£15,000 being invested in heritable security, yielding an annual income of £680, by means of which five hundred children are educated.

The parish of BELLIE, of which Fochabers is the kirk town, is partly in this county and partly in Banffshire. It is six miles in length by four in breadth, bounded by the sea on the north, and on the south-east by Ruthven and Boharm. The county of Moray comes here east of the Spey to a small extent, and on this piece of ground, which is in the parish of Bellie, stands the town of Fochabers. When William, Duke of Cumberland, was on his march to engage Prince Charles at Culloden, he slept a night in the manse of Bellie. Fairs are held at Fochabers on the third Wednesdays in January, the fourth Wednesdays in the months of March, May, October, and December, and the second Wednesday in August (all new style).

GARMOUTH and KINGSTON are small villages in the quoad sacra parish of SPEYMOUTH, but locally in the civil parish of URQUHART, with which parish the population is returned; they are situated between four and five miles N.W. of Fochabers—the former situated at the mouth of the Spey, on its left bank. The principal trade is ship building, and the exportation of corn, coal, timber, and salmon: of the latter, considerable quantities are caught and sent principally to London and other southern markets. The imports are guano, bone-manure, timber, and coal. The port has a good harbour, formed by the mouth of the Spey, and here a number of vessels have been built entirely of native wood. A fair is held on the 30th of June (new style)

FORRES, FINDHORN, RAFFORD, DYKE AND MOY.

FORRES is a royal burgh, the capital of the parish of its name, and the seat of a Presbytery; 201 miles N. by W. from Edinburgh, by way of Aberdeen, and 165 by way of Brechin and Huntley; 75 N.W. of Aberdeen, 27 N.E. of Inverness, 21 W. of Fochabers, 20 E. of Fort George, 12 W. by S. of Elgin, and 11 E. of Nairn. It is a neatly-built clean town, and stands on rising ground, at the distance of about five miles from the bay of Findhorn, which is its sea-port. Forres is noted for one of the most remarkable stone obelisks, of ancient date, in Britain. This interesting objects stands at the east end of the town, and is supposed to commemorate a pacification concluded here between Malcolm II. and Sweno, a Danish invader, about the beginning of the eleventh century. It is an enormous slab of grey stone, upwards of twenty feet in height, supported by a socket which conceals at least three feet more, and the shape resembles that of a very long wedge, or, as some fancifully describe it, a Highland broad-sword; the figures upon the obelisk, which are presumed to represent a battle and subsequent treaty, are wonderfully distinct, considering that they must have withstood the assaults of wind and weather during the last eight centuries. At the western extremity of the town, on an eminence, once stood a castle, wherein Duffus, one of the early kings of Scotland, was perfidiously killed by Donald, governor of the fortress; which circumstance, it is said, Shakespere has made use of in his dramatic version of the murder of King Duncan by Macbeth; and it was on the waste in the neighbourhood that that hero, along with Banquo (according to the old historians), met 'the weird sisters,' who gave him so many fatal promises. The exact spot on which that event is asserted by the country people to have taken place, is marked by a small clump of trees, about two hundred yards north from the post-road between Forres and Nairn, near the toll-bar five miles from the former of these places, and nearly on the confines of the two counties of Moray and Nairn; the extensive heath still surrounding this place is visibly worthy of the epithet 'blasted,' being one of the most desolate tracts of waste land anywhere to be seen. On the castle eminence has been erected an obelisk to the memory of Dr. Taylor, who sacrificed his life by over-exertion in his attention to the wounded Russians, after the famous battle of Alma. Upon an eminence to the south-east of the town stands a tower erected by the inhabitants of Forres, in honour of Lord Nelson. From its elevated situation a fine view is hence obtained, and the object is a conspicuous one for a considerable distance. Sloping to the north where the river Findhorn sweeps round from the south-west through the forest of Dainaway is a modern mansion, the seat of the Earl of Moray. Adjoining to it is the old castle, a noble hall, built by Earl Randolph, regent of Scotland during the minority of David Bruce, capable of containing one thousand men under arms. Here Mary Queen of Scots held her court in 1566. In this part the heron is so numerous that whole flocks it is said, at times, darken the air, and drown with their cries the sound of the gushing waters. About two miles below, the river, which is the estuary of Findhorn bay, is crossed by an elegant suspension bridge erected at the expense of government.

The trade of Forres is not of an extensive character. A distillery, a brewery, dye works, a woollen manufactory, chemical works, and two flour mills. There are four branch banking establishments. We must not omit mention of Cluny Hill House, which stands on one of the beautiful eminences in the immediate vicinity of the town, which has been built expressly for a hydropathic establishment, and its situation is peculiarly favourable for invalids. The resident physician, Alexander Munro, M.D., has been eminently successful in the practice of hydropathy, which has now taken an important place among curative agents. There are two masonic lodges in the town. Forres is a royal burgh and governed by a provost, three baillies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, and seventeen councillors. The burgh unites with Nairn, Fortrose, and Inverness, in returning one member to parliament. A sheriff's small debt court sits once in every two months for the recovery of debts not exceeding £12. In the centre of the High-street is a handsome structure surmounted by a spire. The building comprises the gaol, a court house, a council-room, &c. At the south-east end is a good stone edifice erected in 1824, called Anderson's Institution, for educating children of the humble classes of Forres, Rafford, and Kinloss, founded by Jonathan Anderson, Esq., a native of Forres.

The places of worship are a Church of the Establishment, a Free Church, and for congregations of Episcopalians, United Presbyterians, and Independents.

The markets are held on the third Tuesdays in January, February, March, April, and May: the second Tuesday in June, the first in July and August; the fourth in September and October; the Tuesday before the third Wednesday in November, and the second Tuesday in December. Feeing markets for hiring servants are held on the Saturday before the 26th May (called Whitsunday market); and the Saturday before the 22nd November (called Martinmas market), all new style.

FINDHORN is a small village and sea-port in the parish of Kinloss, five miles north of Forres, of which it may be considered the port. It lies at the point of land which is rendered peninsular by the bay of Burg Head on the east, and the harbour of Findhorn on the west. The latter is convenient, and possesses a share of coasting trade in the exportation of salmon, corn, bark, potatoes, and wood; the latter article is principally shipped to Newcastle and Sunderland, where it is used for props in the coal pits. The imports consist of coal, guano, slate, tile, lime, and different kinds of goods. The curing of fish is an occupation extensively pursued here. The village is connected by a branch line, three miles in length with the Inverness and Junction Aberdeen Railway.

DYKE and MOY is a parish situated on the river Findhorn and the Moray Frith. It is is about 4 miles W. of Forres, in length it is about six, by a breadth of three and a half miles. At BRODIE, is this parish, is a station on the Great North of Scotland Railway. There is an Established Church, and a Free Church, to the former a school is attached.

RAFFORD is a parish 3 miles S.E. of Forres, situated on the river Findhorn. In length it is about eight by a breadth of four miles. The places of worship are one of the Established and a Free Church. A market for cattle is held on the second Wednesday in November.

KNOCKANDO, WITH ARCHIESTOWN.

KNOCKANDO is a parish, situated on the north side of the river Spey; with Rothes on the west, Dallas and Birnie on the north, and Cromdale and Edenkillie on the west. Its length is about ten miles, by a breadth of about two. The country is hilly, and generally pastoral. In 1829 severe floods occurred in Moray, and this parish suffered very seriously, many families being rendered quite destitute. The burn of Knockando, a small rivulet, was on this occasion swollen to a size equal to that of the Spey in its ordinary state. There is an Established church; and in ARCHIESTOWN, a village in this parish, is also a Free church, and one for the United Presbyterians.

ROTHES

IS a parish partly in the county of Elgin, and partly in that of Banff: it is bounded on the south and south-west by Aberlour and Knockando, and on the north by Elgin, Birnie, &c., and on the east by the river Spey; it is nine miles in length, by an average breadth of three. The village, which is a considerable one, is about 54 miles W.N.W. from Aberdeen, and 10 S. from Elgin; situated near the western bank of the Spey. The name is derived from Ruddh-ius, signifying 'red water,' from the colour of the soil of which the banks of its streams are composed. The trades of the place are those usually found in a country village—if we may except one distillery.

POST OFFICE, Old st, ROTHES—James Hendry, Post Master.—Letters arrive from all parts at forty-nine minutes past eleven morning, and at forty-nine minutes past four afternoon; and are despatched at eight morning, and at ten minutes past five evening.

FIFESHIRE.

THIS is a extensive, populous, and important county, lying on the eastern side of Scotland; it is a peninsula, having the Frith of Forth on the south, the German Ocean on the east, and the Tay on the north, which river separates it from Forfarshire and Perthshire; on the west it is bounded by the latter county and Kinross, with a small part of Clackmannan. The breadth from its eastern apex to its western point, where it intersects Kinross and Perth, is about thirty-five miles; towards the south, however (from Kinghorn to the verge of Kinross-shire), it is not more than ten miles across: the extreme length, from north-east to south-west, in a curved line, is full forty miles. The regularity of its figure is much interrupted by the intrusion of Kinross-shire, which creates a considerable indentation, not far from its centre, on the west. Its superficies comprise 467 square miles, or 298,880 English acres; of cultivated land there are about 210,000 acres, and of uncultivated about 90,000; the lakes cover about three square miles.

EARLY HISTORY—At an early period the district of Fyfe included Kinross-shire, Clackmannanshire and part of the counties of Perth and Stirling; it was then designated Ross, a term signifying a peninsula, and seems to have then been under one general jurisdiction. This large territory has long since been dismembered—Clackmannan was first taken from it, and next Kinross was erected into a distinct shire. The origin of the name 'Fife' has much puzzled etymologists, nor has a satisfactory conclusion ever been arrived at upon this subject. The monkish chroniclers assume its derivation from one Fyfus Duffus, a hero of whom nothing more appears to be known than that he was a chieftain who performed some great exploits, and did the country essential service in war. The ancient history of Fyfe is enveloped in nearly similar obscurity: its original possessors were the Celts, and their invaders the Romans; and, towards the close of the ninth century, the king of the Scots obtained paramount sway over the district. Between this period and the eleventh century, the country was in a great measure either the property or under the jurisdiction of a potent succession of 'thanes,' of the title of Macduff: one of these, Duncan Macduff, was created Earl of Fife by Malcolm the III. about 1057; and from this time, till the family honors were merged by the marriage of female heirs or extinction in other families, and finally lost by forfeiture in 1424, the Earls of Fife were amongst the most influential of the Scottish peerage. After a lapse of more than three centuries, the ancient title of Earl of Fyfe was revived as an Irish peerage, in 1759, in the person of William Duff, Lord Braco of Kilbryde, who, according to his genealogists, derived his descent from the original earls. The lineal descendant of this person now inherits the title and privileges—the estates of the family being situated principally in Aberdeenshire and Banffshire.

SOIL, SURFACE, AND CLIMATE.—The peninsula of Fyfe was originally almost an entire forest, full of swamps; and while in this condition was the haunt of wild beasts, especially swine of a monstrous size. It is understood that such animals were not extirpated in the reign of James V. who, like his forefathers, often made Fife the scene of his hunting expeditions. In this county are found four kinds of soil, differing considerably in quality, and generally occupying distinct tracts of country. Along the braes facing the Frith of Forth, the composition of the land is for the most part excellent—being deep rich loam, good clay, and gravel mixed with loamy earth, based chiefly on whin-rock; north from the waving line which bounds this territory to the base of the hills on the south side of the vale of Fife, and from St. Andrew's on the east to the western parts of the county, the soil is in general vastly inferior—a great proportion being cold, poor, and very wet clay; the tract of the 'Howe of Fife' consists of loam, partly deep and moist, and partly light and dry, with also a considerable proportion of moor and moss; in the hilly district, from the vale to the river Tay, the land is almost uniformly of the best description, having, much rich loam, clay, and gravel. Consequent upon the progressive operation of habitual and experimental cultivation, these primitive properties of the soil have been modified, improved or ameliorated, according to the system or means and perseverance of the agriculturist. The peninsula of Fife exhibits in its surface a series of vales stretching from west to east parallel with the sea on each side, and of greater or less dimensions: these vales, which, from the undulating character of the country, are in some places not so distinct as in others, are the basins of different small streams, which merge either in the Frith of Forth or St. Andrew's bay. The eminences of greatest altitude in Fifeshire are, Kelly-Law, 800 feet; Largo-Law, 1,020; East Lomond Hill, 1,260; and West Lomond Hill, 1,280, above the level of the sea. The CLIMATE of this peninsula is, perhaps, as genial and salubrious as that of other districts more to the south: the fogs, which formerly were continually exhaling from the lochs and marshes, to the injury of the crops and the health of the inhabitants, who were then afflicted with agues and other concomitant diseases, have long since been effectually dissipated by the drainage of the damp lands, and the general spread of healthful cultivation. Altogether, Fife is a most important district: its agricultural prosperity and capabilities—its manufactures—its fisheries, and its mineral treasures—its burghs, sea-ports, and fine harbours—and its domestic and foreign commerce—form a combination of advantages that must distinguish this shire as one of the most favoured, probably, in all North Britain.

PRODUCE AND MANUFACTURES.—The shire is fortunate in possessing inexhaustible mines of coal, with whinstone, sandstone, limestone, and some ironstone. Coal and lime are wrought only in the southern division of the county, between the two extremities, and some miles inland; within this district there are as extensive lime and coal works as can be seen in Scotland. The sandstone found in this part is of the very best quality; from its beauty it is exported to Edinburgh, where some of the finest edifices have been built with it. Marl is abundant in some places—so likewise is fine clay, for the composition of bricks, tiles, and pottery. From the possession of the above fossils, and the exuberant produce of corn and cattle, it is a common saying among the people of Fife, that their county could support itself better, without the aid of imported articles, than any other district in Scotland. Besides supplying home consumption, it enjoys a very large export trade in corn, potatoes, pigs, black cattle, lime, coal, and sandstone—not to mention that of its manufactured goods. Lead has been discovered in the western Lomond, and mines of this ore have been profitably worked in the parish of Kemback:

pebbles, much admired for the high polish of which they are susceptible, have been found in different places; with agates and rubies of fine water. The staple MANUFACTURE of Fife is linen goods, in the weaving of which, whole towns, villages, and hamlets, are busily employed without intermission: fine diapers and shirtings, and the most elegant table-linen, are produced from the looms of this county; of this trade Dunfermline is the principal seat; while the yarns, composed of foreign flax, are mostly spun and bleached on the Leven and in the adjacent places. Blankets and plaidings are also manufactured in the shire, but not to an important extent.

RIVERS AND RAILWAYS.—Exclusive of the Forth and the Tay, the county is watered by several streams—none of which, however, are entitled to the denomination of rivers, except the Eden and the Leven, both of which abound with excellent salmon. The North British Line of RAILWAY runs direct through the county, on the seaboard, from Burntisland to Ferry-Port-on-Craig, having various branches running landwards, to the counties of Clackmannan, Kinross, and Perth, exclusive of the various branches for mineral traffic, leading to the different shipping ports on the northern banks of the Forth. The route of the respective branches will be best ascertained by reference to the towns given in the directory of the shire.

DIVISIONS, REPRESENTATION, &c.—This county forms a sheriffdom, under one sheriff depute; but being divided into an eastern and a western district, each is placed under the jurisdiction of a sheriff substitute; in these two districts are comprehended the four sub-divisions of St. Andrews, Cupar, Dunfermline, and Kirkcaldy. It has politically and ecclesiastically attached to it the islands of Inchcolm, Inchkeith, and May, in the Frith of Forth. Fife comprises sixty parishes, and two parts of parishes—having thirteen royal burghs with parliamentary representation; these, conjointly with Culross, in Perthshire—Queen's-ferry, in Linlithgowshire—and Stirling, in Stirlingshire—return three members; and the shire at large sends another to the senate.

ABERDOUR

Is a parish and village—the latter, which is also a seaport, is 10 miles N.W. of Edinburgh (across the Frith of Forth), 8 from Kirkcaldy, and 3 from Burntisland, the nearest railway station, situated a few hundred yards from the Frith of Forth. This district formerly belonged to the monastery of Inchcolm; the small island of Inchcolm now belongs to the parish of Aberdour—the form of the latter is nearly square, measuring about three miles and a half each way, and containing 6,059 acres; it lies along the north bank of the Forth, and is divided into two districts by a small ridge of hills, which run from east to west; it is a place of considerable antiquity, and belonged in the twelfth century to the family of the Euponts, from which it passed to the Mortimers by marriage, and afterwards to the Douglasses, one of whom, in 1457, was created Lord Aberdour and Earl of Morton, whose castle, which stood close to the village, was burnt down by accident a century and a half ago. Aberbour has a good harbour, and it is the shipping port for Donibristle Colliery. It is also a place of summer resort of the citizens of Edinburgh and their families, there being good bathing ground here, and the exposure being sunny and warm. One of the chief causes of its popularity as a bathing-place is the ready access which is obtained by steam vessels, and other means of conveyance from the opposite shore. In the village are the Established, Free, and Episcopal churches; the two former have schools attached to them.

ANSTRUTHER (EAST AND WEST), CELLARDYKE, AND KILRENNY.

ANSTRUTHER EASTER, a royal burgh, in the county of Fife, is 22 miles E. from Kirkcaldy, and about 10 s. from St. Andrews. It was a place of great importance before the union with England, carrying on an extensive trade with Holland and France; and from its contiguity to Cellardyke, it is still one of the first fishing stations in Scotland. Fish-curing is the staple trade: in 1825, there were only fifty-eight boats from 18 to 20 feet long; now the number is one hundred and seventy-two from 38 to 41 feet long, and from 28 to 34 long measurement. The harbour was found too small for the increasing trade of the district, and the three burghs of East and West Anstruthers and Cellardyke united their efforts to obtain, with government assistance, an union harbour, which is expected to cost £33,000, and which is now in course of erection. With the present harbour it will give a space of 13½ acres, and will accommodate five hundred fishing boats, and admit vessels from 200 to 500 tons burthen at half flood; there will be eight feet of water at the East Quay at the lowest spring tide. The trade, in addition to fish curing, is of a domestic nature; baking, tanning, and fish curing are the most prominent branches, but there is likewise a considerable portion of business done in the export of grain, potatoes, &c. A number of coasters belong to the port, and a steam packet plies three times a week between it and Leith, conveying hence grain, fish, &c., and returning with merchants' goods. The East of Fife line is now extended to its terminus at Anstruther, and a project is on foot for carrying on the line by the sea coast to St. Andrews. It is the station of a custom-house, whose district extends to Crail. Branches of the National Bank of Scotland, Commercial Bank of Scotland, and the Clydesdale Bank are settled here. The town is governed by a provost and two bailies, a treasurer, and five councillors, elected under the Scotch Burgh Reform Act. A weekly corn market is held every Friday. This burgh is united with St. Andrews, Cupar, Crail, Kilrenny, Anstruther Wester, and Pittenweem, in returning one member to parliament. It is worthy of note that Dr. Chalmers, the celebrated orator and divine, and Professor Tennant, author of 'Anster Fair,' were natives of this town, and also Professor Goodsir, of the Edinburgh University. In addition to the Established church, there is a Free church, and United Presbyterian, and Independent and Baptist chapels; also a burgh school, and a free school for both sexes.

ANSTRUTHER WESTER, which adjoins Anstruther Easter, is also a royal burgh, and holds its charter of incorporation from James VI., in 1587; a bridge connects the two burghs. This burgh was disfranchised in 1853, when three managers were appointed by the Court of Session. The inhabitants are principally employed in agricultural pursuits. Great improvements have been effected in this town within the last forty years; among these must be noticed the widening of the main street from thirteen to thirty feet, its being macadamised, and the formation of a neat footway or pavement at an expense of £450, contributed equally by the burgh and the county; the place is supplied with water, the streets well lighted, common sewers and other conveniences constructed, wherby the public thoroughfares and lanes are kept in a clean and orderly state; a parish church, manse, and offices for the clergyman; and a parochial school, and dwelling-house for the schoolmaster, were also erected.

The village of CELLARDYKE (or NETHER KILRENNY) is contiguous to Anstruther, before described. The three burghs are so contiguous to each other, that to a stranger the separation is not discernible. The greater number of the inhabitants are fishermen, and about one hundred and seventy boats belong to the place.

KILRENNY is a parish and royal burgh—the former is situated one mile from Anstruther, and three from Crail. The parish approaches a circular form, having a diameter of about two miles. The coast here is one continued range of rocks, with two small creeks which form the harbour of Anstruther, and the port of Cellardyke or Nether Kilrenny. Here is an Established church and a parochial school. This burgh, in conjunction with the Anstruthers, and other places before named, returns one member to parliament.

AUCHTERDERRAN, LOCHGELLY, KINGLASSIE, BEATH, COWDENBEATH, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

AUCHTERDERRAN parish is four miles long and three broad. The soil is fertile, and only about a third is under tillage, the rest under pasture. The inhabitants, who assiduously apply themselves to agriculture, have much improved the condition and appearance of the district. A considerable bed of coal and ironstone traverses this parish.—LOCHGELLY, which is the principal village in the parish, is 8 miles N.W. from Kirkcaldy, and the same distance E. from Dunfermline. About one and a half miles from Lochgelly are the ruins of the castle of Lochore. The Edinburgh, Perth and Dundee Branch of the North British Railway passes close to this village, and COWDENBEATH: and adjoining are four furnaces for smelting the iron ore, which is here raised in abundance, also two at LUMPHINNANS, about one mile distant A branch of the Union Bank of Scotland is established in the village. The places of worship in this village are a Free Church, a Chapel-of-Ease, and a United Presbyterian Chapel; but the Established Church is at the hamlet of AUCHTERDERRAN, two miles distant. Fairs for cattle are held on the first Thursday in April (O.S), the third Wednesdays in July and September, and the first Thursday in November.

The parish of KINGLASSIE extends four miles in length, by two in breadth at its narrowest part, and four at its broadest. It is watered by the Lochty and the Ore, tributary streams of the Leven. On the first of these, stands the irregular village of Kinglassie, which is two miles from Leslie, and 3½ N.E. from Lochgelly. There are quarries of freestone; and the coal obtained in this parish is considered about the best in the county. The inhabitants of the village are principally supported by the coal and iron works in the locality. The places of worship are an Established and a Free Church. A fair is entitled to be held on the third Wednesday in May, and on the Thursday before Michaelmas (O.S.).

AUCHTERMUCHTY,

DUNSHALT, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

AUCHTERMUCHTY, signifying in Gaelic, 'the Cottage of the King,' is a parish and a royal burgh—the latter 22 miles from Dundee, 19 from St. Andrews, 14 from Perth, 5 from Newburgh, 15 miles from Kirkcaldy, and 28 miles, nearly due north, from Edinburgh. A station of the Fife and Kinross branch of the North British Railway is adjacent to the town, distant 4 miles from LADYBANK—a station and junction on the Edinburgh, Perth and Dundee section of the above-named railway. The land in the vicinity of the town is remarkably rich and fertile, and the climate is considered very salubrious. It is situated on the road from Kinross to Cupar Fife, ten miles from the former and nine from the latter town. Auchtermuchty is irregularly built—many of the houses are thatched and low, but the greater proportion are of a superior appearance. There is a good substantial mansion-house in the town, which was once the residence of the Thane of Fife. A stream of water called Loverspool runs through the town, dividing it into nearly two equal parts. This place was constituted a royal burgh by James IV., which charter was confirmed by James VI., and it still enjoys all the privileges arising therefrom. It is governed by a provost, two baillies, nine councillors, a treasurer, and town clerk, and has a sheriff's small debt court, which is held quarterly. Mrs. Tyndal Bruce of Grange and Falkland, is patroness of the parish, and a large proprietress in it. There is a castle on one of her estates, which was built by the unfortunate Mary, Queen of Scotland. A considerable trade is carried on here in manufacturing linen. Malting, distilling, and brewing are also carried on, and there are branches respectively Bank of Scotland, Union Bank of Scotland, and a Bank for Savings.

The places of worship comprise a Church of the Establishment, a Free Church, three United Presbyterian Churches, and one for Baptists. The Parish Church is an old structure, enlarged, and situated near the centre of the town. Schools are connected with the the Parish Church and the Free Church. A large school, conducted on the Madras principle, is numerously attended. The parish school, 75 feet in length by 21 in breadth; can be divided into three apartments or class-rooms, by two sliding partitions. It was erected at an expense of upwards of £700. Acreage of the parish, 3,533. Fairs are held on the first Monday in February, last Monday in April, July 2nd, 1st Monday in October and December.

POST OFFICE, AUCHTERMUCHTY, Agnes Dickson, Post Mistress.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Ladybank) at ten minutes before nine morning, and ten minutes before seven evening, and are despatched at forty minutes past six morning, and at twenty-two minutes past four afternoon.

BURNTISLAND.

Burntisland is a parish containing 2,950 acres, a royal burgh, and a seaport or creek—the latter six miles from Kirkcaldy, 2½ w. of Kinghorn, and three miles E. from Aberdour, and eight from Edinburgh. It is the terminus of the Edinburgh, Perth, and Dundee railway, and is situated on the shore of the Frith of Forth, well sheltered by hills, which rise towards the north in an amphitheatrical form. The parish of Burntisland was anciently called Kingorne Wester; and that part of the town now called the Kirkton was the original town; the parish church and burying ground were there, the ruins of the former are still to be seen, and the latter is still used as a burying ground. The town was originally a burgh of regality under the Abbott of Dunfermline. In the year 1541 it was purchased from him by James Vth., and erected into a burgh royal, confirmed by James VIth, 1587, and renewed by Charles Ist, 1632. Since the passing of the burgh reform act, the parliamentary burgh includes the Castle, Kirkton, and intermediate grounds. Anciently, the burgh was managed by twenty-one councillors, including a provost, three bailies, dean of guild, and treasurer. But at the present time its magistracy consists only of twelve councillors, including a provost, two baillies, a dean of guild, and a treasurer; and in connection with Dysart, Kirkcaldy, and Kinghorn, returns one member to parliament. The only building of antiquity in the burgh deserving of notice is Rossend Castle; it was often the resting place of the unfortunate Queen Mary, on her journeys to Falkland, and a room in the castle is still shown as the Queen's room. The east end of the town in former days was entered by an archway erected at the east end of High-street, and closed with gates; this was taken down about forty years ago. The town-house, built in the year 1626, stood at the foot of High-street; it was also taken down some years since, and a handsome structure, with a steeple and clock, was erected at the corner of Kirkwynd, with suitable apartments for the courts. The harbour is reckoned the best in the Frith, being both capacious and of great depth of water; it has also an excellent dry dock; and a light-house stands on the entrance to the haven. The basin of the harbour is said to have been originally formed by Cromwell, whose dyke or wall, running from the foot of Rossend Castle to the island, is still extant. About the middle of the 17th century, the harbour was repaired and improved by the inhabitants, with some assistance from the convention of burghs; before the union, the commerce was considerable, and in the 17th century it carried on an extensive traffic with Holland. From its being the terminus of the railway before mentioned, it has now become a place of considerable importance—the population in the course of the last few years being doubled, and the revenue of the burgh much increased. The town has been greatly indebted to Sir John Gladstone, Bart., of Fasque, through whose public spirit and enterprise a substantial and commodious low-water pier was erected, making Burntisland a ferry station between Fife and Midlothian. The pier, with the right of ferry, has been sold to the railway company, who have stationed a number of excellent steamers on the passage. The company have also erected an ingenious apparatus, by which they are enabled to run the railway trucks off the lines into the steamers without damage or displacement of the goods. From the excellent position of Burntisland as a seaport town—secure from almost every wind that blows, its excellent bathing ground, and its contiguity to Edinburgh, it has now become a fashionable summer residence—the main street and the surrounding walks presenting in the summer months a gay and animated appearance. To the east of the town are the links, much resorted to for golfing and promenading. An arrangement was made with the railway company, by the officials of the burgh, regarding a commutation of customs and shore dues, whereby they secured to the town a revenue of £1,000 a year on the railway traffic; they likewise bound themselves by act of parliament to expend two-thirds of this sum in deepening and improving the harbour; the railway company, on their part, agreeing to expend £25,000 in carrying the head of the harbour further into the sea, but which has never been carried into effect. A substantial middle pier runs out into the harbour for the purpose of accommodating vessels of large tonnage. The breakwater extends seaward about 560 feet, completely protecting the harbour from S.W. and W. winds, the only winds to which the harbour is exposed. The quay wall on the east side extends about 350 feet, running parallel with the point of the breakwater, and forms loading berths for large vessels—there being twenty-four feet of water at high water, spring tides, and nine feet at the lowest ebb of spring tides. The Customs jurisdiction of this creek, under the port of Kirkcaldy, extends from Pettycur to Aberdour. The town consists of one long main street, with smaller diverging thoroughfares, well paved and gas lighted. Herring curing, cooperage, and the shipping of coal and iron, are the chief branches of trade. Messrs. Young & Co.'s distillery at Grange, about a mile from the town, is celebrated for the purity of spirits manufactured there. The recent introduction into the town of an excellent supply of water has been a great benefit to the inhabitants, as has also a complete system of sewerage and drainage which has been lately carried out at considerable expense, at the instance of the police commissioners. These sanitary improvements have greatly enhanced the salubrity and cleanliness of the town and district. In the town is a branch of the National Bank of Scotland. Sir John Gladstone erected a number of handsome villas on the east of the links, called Gladstone Terrace. Lammerlaws, signifying 'hills on the sea,' a beautiful rising knoll commanding a splendid view of the Frith and the city of Edinburgh, is now covered with elegant villas and gardens. The town possesses a large and elegant hall, which was built at the expense of the late Joseph Young, Esq., of Duncan, for concerts, lectures, and other public meetings, and has been found of great use to the community. The places of worship are the Parish church, which was built about the end of the sixteenth century, but was not established the parish church till 1632; it is a commodious and venerable edifice overlooking the sea; an United Presbyterian church; and a Free church, a new and handsome building, recently erected at the east end of the High-street. The Episcopalians have an elegant church in the Gothic style, with parsonage and school adjoining. There are Parochial, Free, and Episcopal Church schools; a subscription library and news rooms, and a Young Men's Institute for the purpose of giving lectures on various subjects, and also a number of friendly associations are connected with the town. No market days are observed. A fair is held here on the 10th of July (new style).

CERES AND KEMBACK.

CERES (or Cryus), is a parish and village—the former situated on an acclivity nearly three miles S.E. from Cupar Five. The parish is eight miles long and from one to four in breadth, with 10 075 acres, the surface is hilly, but in general subject to agriculture. On the north it is bounded by Cupar parish, on the east is Cameron, on the south Largo, and on the west Cults. Flax spinning and weaving a few linen fabrics employ some of the inhabitants of the parish. The old house of Scotstarvet, once the family residence of the Scots, one of whom wrote a remarkable little work entitled—'The Staggering State of Scots Statesmen,' is within the parish, and occupies a conspicuous situation on the top of the high grounds, which bound the house of Fife on the east. The house contains a museum of antiquities and curiosities. The Parish Church, which stands in an elevated situation, has a castellated square tower, which is seen at a considerable distance. Fairs are held on the last Tuesday in March, and the 24th of June.

The parish of KEMBACK is nearly of a triangular figure, with its broadest side to the Eden, and measures about three and a half miles in breadth, and length. It is one of the richest agricultural and most beautiful districts in the country; out of 2,602 acres more than 1,500 are fine arable land, and there are many fine plantations in different parts of the parish. Besides the Eden it is watered by the Ceres stream. The church stands about a mile and a half from Ceres village, and three from Cupar.

CRAIL AND KINGSBARNS

CRAIL is a parish, a royal burgh, and a sea-port—the latter 26 miles E. from Kircaldy, and 10 S E. from Saint Andrews. It was anciently called Caryle or Cairraile, and is mentioned by old historians as a town of considerable note, so early as the middle of the ninth century. its importance in latter days has, however, greatly declined, and notwithstanding it possesses great capabilities as a port, it enjoys but very little trade; this, in some measure, may be ascribed to the inconvenience of its harbour, for it is otherwise eligibly situated. Its principal exports consist of grain and potatoes: the imports are chiefly coals. The town consists of two streets, and two or three lanes; of the former, one is broad and spacious, containing some good houses—several of which are of that massive and antique description which indicate past wealth. Crail was erected into a royal burgh by Robert Bruce and it is governed by a provost, two baillies, and a treasurer (in all nine councillors); in conjunction with St. Andrews, Cupar Fife, the Anstruthers, Kilrenny, and Pittenweem, it returns one member to parliament. The Parish Church, Free Church, and an United Presbyterian Church, are the places of worship. The celebrated James Sharp, archbishop of St. Andrews, was once minister of the church, and his hand-writing is still to be seen in the session records.

The parish of KINGSBARNS lies in the eastern part of the county, with its eastern side to the German ocean—originally it formed part of Crail, but was separated from that parish in 1631. The villags lies a mile to the south, on the public road round the coast, 6½ miles S E. from St. Andrews, and 3½ N. from Crail. The largest and best flag-stones in the country are obtained near the village, and marble of a fine quality is met with occasionally. A little to the east of the harbour are the fragments of a castle or palace, once the residence of David I., the remains of which consist chiefly of a wall, now partially enclosing a garden. Pitmilly, a very ancient seat, stands in the northern part of the parish.

CUPAR-FIFE AND DAIRSIE.

CUPAR (popularly designated CUPAR-FIFE, to distinguish it from Cupar-Angus, on the borders of Perthshire), is a royal burgh, the capital of the county of Fife; 32 miles N. (by rail) from Edinburgh, 14½ S. from Dundee, 9 W. from St. Andrews, and the same distance N.E. from Falkland; pleasantly situated on the left bank of the Eden, and on the line of the Edinburgh, Perth, and Dundee branch of the North British Railway. It is a place of considerable antiquity, but in the present day, its aspect is that of a modern thriving town, nor are there any ancient remains to be discerned in or about Cupar. Of its castle, so frequently alluded to in Scottish history, not a vestige is now visible; the Castle hill, where that fortress once stood (in which the plays of Sir David Lindsay, and the 'Satire of the Three Estates,' were acted in 1555), is now occupied by an endowed school, called the Madras Academy; and the spot which once resounded with the clangour of arms is now devoted to learning. The principal streets of the town are the Crossgate, the Bonnygate, and St. Catherine street, which last is built on the plan of the houses in the New Town of Edinburgh—in this street are the county buildings, the newsroom, library, and three hotels. Opposite the county buildings is an Episcopal Chapel, in the Grecian style; its site is clearly that of a convent of Dominican or Black Friars, in old records described as being situated to the east end of the town. The streets and shops are lighted with gas, supplied by a company established in 1830. On the north side of the river is the old prison, said to resemble the old gaol of Glasgow: it is now used as stores and depot for the Fife Militia Artillery, a more commodious edifice having been erected for a gaol, on rising ground, a little to the north of the Dundee road. The principal trade of Cupar arises from the linen manufacture; but there are also other prosperous branches, as those of brewing, tanning, coach-making, &c., and of all the various necessary and domestic avocations a due proportion. There are six branch banks—one of the 'British Linen Company,' the 'Commercial Bank of Scotland, the 'Clydesdale Banking Company,' the 'Royal Bank of Scotland,' the 'City of Glasgow Bank,' and the 'National Bank,' together with a 'Bank for Savings.' Three newspapers are published in Cupar weekly—the 'Fife Herald,' Thursday; the 'People's Journal,' Saturday; and the 'Saturday Herald.'

As a royal burgh, Cupar is governed by a provost, three bailies, and a dean of guild, with a treasurer and twenty-one councillors: in conjunction with St. Andrews, the Anstruthers, Crail, Kilrenny, and Pittenweem, the burgh returns one member to parliament. Being the county town, and head burgh of the shire, the public business relating to both is transacted at Cupar: and here, consequently, reside a considerable number of practitioners before the courts of the shire. The ordinary sheriff court, and the commissary courts, are held every Tuesday and Thursday during session; and the sheriff small debts court on the first and third Tuesdays of each month during the same period.

The places of worship are the Parish Church and a chapel in connection therewith, and others for the Free Church, United Presbyterians, Episcopalian and Baptist congregations. The schools of Cupar are of the best class, and are supplied with able teachers in all the useful branches of education: and a public library, well stocked with books in the various branches of literature and science, evidences the polished taste of the inhabitants. The parish of Cupar contains 5,737 acres. The weekly market for corn, is held on Tuesday, and a cattle market on the first and third Tuesdays in every month.

DAIRSIE is a parish and village—the latter a small one, is situated on the main road from Cupar to Dundee, three miles from the former and eight from the latter town. The river Eden, which intersects the parish, is crossed by a good bridge of three arches, the erection of Archbishop Spotteswood, who was the proprietor of the Dairsie estate. The church, which is in the Saxon style of architecture, and surmounted by a neat spire, was erected at the commencement of the seventeenth century. Dairsie Castle, now a ruin, is noted as having been the residence of Archbishop Sharp, as well as the place where a parliament was called upon to assemble in the year 1335. Chapel well, in this parish, in high repute for the healing properties of its waters, is the site of a Roman Catholic Chapel, of which no remains are visible. This parish is nearly three miles in extent each way; and contains 2,560 acres, with little exception, the whole is fine arable land, and freestone and whinstone abound beneath its surface. Population in 1861, 638.

DUNFERMLINE,

WITH THE VILLAGES AND HAMLETS OF CROSSFORD, HALBEATH, TOWN HILL, WELLWOOD, SPITTAL, MILES MARK, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

DUNFERMLINE is a city and a royal burgh, and the seat of a presbytery—the capital of its parish, the chief town in the western part of Fife, and the most important in the scale of manufactures in the county; its ancient title of city is now revived; it is 16 miles N.W. from Edinburgh, 47 N.E. from Glasgow, 31 S S.W. from Cupar, 14 miles from Alloa, 21 from Stirling, 15 from Kirkcaldy, and 6 from North Queen's Ferry; situate on rising ground, three miles north from the Firth of Forth, and three hundred feet above its level at Limekilns, the nearest part of the coast. Thus elevated, it commands a prospect remarkably various and beautiful, extending over fourteen different counties, and comprising a fine marine view on the south, and its salubrious situation renders it one of the healthiest cities in Scotland. The North British railway comes to the town, and affords direct communication with nearly all parts of the country; whilst another line about 3 miles in length, hence to Charlestown, is used principally in the conveyance of coal for shipment at that port. It is now joined to the Stirling and Dunfermline railway at the Colton junction. The West of Fife mineral railway runs from the town north into the rich mineral district which contains immense quantities of coal, iron stone, lime stone &c. At an early period Dunfermline became a royal residence: Malcolm Canmore usually resided in a tower, or castle, built on a peninsulated hill in a valley near the town; a palace was afterwards erected not far from the tower, in a most romantic situation—the south-west wall still remains a monument of the magnificence of the fabric of which it formed a part. The monastery, one of the most ancient in Scotland, was founded by Malcolm Canmore for monks of the Benedictine order, and was completed by his son, Alexander I: it continued to be governed by a prior till the reign of David I., who raised it to the dignity of an abbey, and, in 1124, translated thither thirteen monks from Canterbury. The abbey was richly endowed, and derived its revenues from very distant parts of the kingdom; it was an imposing and extensive building, but fell a sacrifice to the plundering army of Edward I., on his insidious intervention in the affairs of Scotland. About the commencement of the sixteenth century all that survived of this venerable pile was the church, with a few cells for the monks; these were demolished at the Reformation. The city consists of streets, stretching from east to west, with a number of smaller streets, crossing down-hill at right angles, or proceeding in a northerly direction. The houses along the leading thoroughfares are nearly all well built, and have somewhat of a metropolitan air; surveying the spires and other eminent points in an external view of the place, it presents the contour of a venerable city. Within the last fifty years its size has been greatly increased, not only by the extension of the cross streets, but by the addition of a large suburb to the west and east, and during the last twenty-five years the improvements effected have been considerable. The town is lighted by gas, and the inhabitants are abundantly supplied with water. Fire plugs on the gravitation principle are placed in numerous places throughout the streets and lanes. Perhaps the most prominent public building in the town, if we except the edifices for religious purposes, are the County Buildings, once called the Guildhall, standing on the south side of the High-street, and constructed in the Grecian style, with a spire one hundred and thirty-two feet in height rising over the front. They contain a sheriff court room, justice of peace court room, and a suite of rooms for the sheriff, sheriff clerk's office, procurator fiscal's, and other county business. In this is also the Post Office, Savings' Bank, Public Library, and reading rooms. The Music Hall is a large modern erection, used for all kinds of public meetings. The upper hall is a noble looking room of 90 feet in length, 50 in width, and 45 in height. The lower hall is fitted up as the city theatre, and is usually occupied by a company from the metropolitan theatres from three to four months in the year. It is also used as a Corn Exchange every Tuesday; its area is nearly the same as the hall above. The building has commodious ante-rooms and other conveniences. Next is the Town Hall, at the corner of Bridge and Kirkgate streets, it is likewise surmounted by a tower and spire of considerable altitude: it contains the town clerk's offices, a court room, council chambers, and police offices. The other public buildings comprise the prison, the workhouse and fever hospital - all of which occupy sites at the eastern extremity of the town. The burgh of Dunfermline, it appears, was held of the monastery, which formerly possessed paramount jurisdiction and exclusive privileges here for nearly two centuries; and became royal by a charter from James VI., dated 24th May, 1588; in this document the monarch ratifies sundry charters, donations, and indentures, by John and Robert, abbots of Dunfermline, particularly one dated the 10th of October, 1395, by which the abbot and convent renounce, in favour of the eldermen and ommunity, the whole income of the burgh belonging to their revenue, with the small customs, profits of court, &c., 'reserving, however, the power of punishment, should any of the magistrates be guilty of injustice in the exercise of their office.' In 1724 the burgh was placed on the footing it still maintains as respects its government, which is vested in a provost, two baillies, and a dean of guild, together with a treasurer, a chamberlain, and a town clerk; the council is composed of twenty-two members, elected pursuant to the terms of the Municipal Reform Act. The burgh joins with Stirling, Inverkeithing, Culross, and Queen's Ferry, in sending one member to parliament. Dunfermline is constituted the seat of a sheriff substitute for the western district of Fife; he holds a weekly court on Fridays during the session; and police and small debt courts are held every Wednesday, over which the burgh magistrates preside. The constantly increasing population and prosperity of Dunfermline may be entirely ascribed to its manufacture of table linens: this branch took root in the town about the commencement of the last century; the cloth is woven of all dimensions, of the most elegant patterns, and to a greater extent than in any other town in Great Britain, and many firms are engaged in this business. There are establishments for the spinning of linen yarn, and several large factories where steam and hand-loom weaving is carried on. It is said that the chest of the incorporation of weavers contains two curious specimens of their art: a man's shirt wrought in the loom by a weaver of the name of Inglis; and a woman's shift, by another named Meldrum, both of which are without seam, and effected without the assistance of the needle; the only part which Inglis could not accomplish was a button for the neck. Exclusive of the linen trade, there are other branches of magnitude and importance, amongst which may be mentioned the large fire-clay works of Messrs. A. Wilson and Son, at Loch-Head, where every description of article usually made from that material are manufactured. There are, also, iron and brass founding, and an extensive engineering works, brewing, dying, and the manufacture of tobacco. The coal trade in the neighbourhood is also very extensive, and large quantities of this article are annually exported. Four branch banks of the first respectability are established here, and a bank for savings. There are three principal inns, and many other comfortable houses for public accommodation of lesser note. The Commercial Hotel in Douglas-street, the nearest to the railway station, is a respectable and well-conducted establishment, either for commercial gentlemen or tourists. The parish abounds with valuable mines and minerals; in many places there are rocks of white freestone, and whinstone for paving the streets is in sufficient supply; limestone has been wrought very extensively, and ironstone is plentiful throughout this locality. The parish church has been collegiate, and under the care of two ministers, since 1645. Of the other places of worship, their situations, and the respective officiating clergymen, will be found under a distinct head in a succeeding page. The Secession church (now the United Presbyterian), which has extended over the greater part of Great Britain, became conspicuous here at an early period of its history—The Rev. Ralph Erskine, one of the parochial clergymen of Dunfermline, being one of the four ministers who first seceded from the establishment in 1773, and shortly after founded Queen Ann-street church here, which, it is believed, was the first or second of that denomination. The most elegant building here of modern erection is the Abbey Church: it is of ornamental Gothic architecture, surmounted by a massive tower one hundred feet high. The interior of the church is much admired. While excavating the foundation, the workmen discovered the tomb of that celebrated monarch, King Robert the Bruce, 490 years after his death; his remains were collected and enclosed in a leaden coffin and are interred under the tower. Adjoining the new is part of the old abbey church, where many other Scottish monarchs and nobles lie buried. The town and neighbourhood support many friendly societies. There are two superior schools, the 'Dunfermline Grammar School,' and the 'Dunfermline Commercial Academy'; also Lancasterian, infants', and Sabbath schools, and several private academies; two public libraries, a subscription news room; mechanics' and scientific institutions; bible, tract, missionary, and other religious societies; a horticultural society, and various charitable associations. The markets are held on Tuesdays and Fridays—the former principally for grain, which is disposed of by stock and sample. Fairs, the third Tuesdays in January, March, April, June, July, September, October, and November.

DYSART

Is a parish and a royal parliamentary burgh—the town is situated two miles from Kirkcaldy, on a gentle declivity towards the Firth of Forth. It consists of three streets, with a sort of square in the centre, where stands the town-house, a plain old building, with a tower and spire, at one period of much greater importance to the commercial uses of the town than it is at the present day. The central street contains many substantial houses, but of very antique appearance. The streets are gas-lighted by a company formed in 1843. So early as 1546 Dysart is mentioned as one of the principal trading towns on the coast of Fife, and was much noted for the manufacture and export of salt. The alteration in commerce consequent on the union of 1707, destroyed the ancient legitimate trade, which was succeeded by smuggling; and this contraband traffic, in its turn, has also been annihilated. The trade it now enjoys is respectable, and consists in the weaving of ticks, checks, and similar linen fabrics. There is a large power loom factory in the burgh, giving employment to several hundreds of the inhabitants, besides two flax spinning mills, and in the vicinity are mines of coal, extensively wrought, besides a considerable trade in ship building. The harbour is good, and there is a small floating dock; also a patent slip capable of taking up vessels of 400 tons burthen, the only one on this part of the coast. Coal is the principal export. Dysart was created a royal burgh in the beginning of the sixteenth century, but the original charter is lost. It is governed by a provost, two baillies, and six councillors—in all nine; and joins with Kirkcaldy, Kinghorn, and Burntisland, in returning one member to parliament.

The places of worship are the Established Church, Free Church, and an United Presbyterian Chapel. Parochial, Industrial, and infants' schools, a newsroom, and a mechanics' institute, are in the town The most remarkable object of antiquity near the town is the castle of Ravenscraig, standing on a steep crag fronting the sea: this castle is alluded to in Sir Walter Scott's 'Lay of the last Minstrel'—under the name of Ravensheugh. It was inhabited in Oliver Cromwell's time, and was assaulted by a party of his troops; it has for many years been deserted, and time has reduced it to a ruinous state. Dysart gives the title of Earl to a branch of the Murrays of Tullibardine. The Earl of Rosslyn has a seat in the neighbourhood. Fairs are held on the 6th of May, the third Tuesday in June, the fourth Wednesday in August, and on the 8th of November.

POST OFFICE, High-street, DYSART, Margaret Dick, Post Mistress.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Kirkcaldy) at nine morning, and at forty minutes past six evening, and are despatched thereto at ten minutes past one afternoon, a quarter past four afternoon, and half-past nine night.

FALKLAND AND FREUCHIE.

FALKLAND is a parish—the small ancient town of its name is a burgh of barony 25 miles N. from Edinburgh, 23 S. from Dundee, 15 S.E. from Perth, the same distance N.N.W. from Kinghorn, 10 S.W. from Cupar, 3 from Auchtermuchty and Strathmiglo, and the same distance from the Falkland road station of the North British railway. It is situated nearly in the centre of the county, on the north side of the Lomond hills, which shelter it completely from the winds to the south Falkland consists principally of one street, the eastern part of which is broad and spacious, but towards the west is narrow and inconvenient. The few good houses in the town are of an antique character, without any pretensions to architectural excellence. The palace is the only building worthy of the notice of a stranger; this, for a long time, was only a ruin, but was rescued from total decay and repaired by the late Mr. Bruce, of the state-paper office. The excellence of the workmanship still delights the eye of the antiquarian, and gives an idea of what the building once was. The royal family of Scotland resided here occasionally: James V. died here in 1542. A dungeon is shown, in which it is said the Duke of Rothesay was starved to death by his uncle Albany. Tradition reports that this victim of oppression was supported for a length of time by two females, the wives of tradesmen of Falkland, one of whom supplied bread to him through a chink in the walls of the prison, while the other conveyed the milk from her breast by means of an oaten reed; being at length discovered, these supplies were cut off, and he perished of hunger. In 1615, it is said, the famous Rob Roy garrisoned the palace with a party of the Macgregors, and laid the country under heavy contributions for miles round, until at length he retired with great booty

The town was erected into a burgh by James II., in 1458, and its charter was confirmed and renewed by James VI. in 1595, in order (in the words of the charter) to 'obviate the damage and inconvenience sustained, for want of innkeepers and victuallers, by the many prelates, peers, barons, nobles, and others of their subjects, who come to their country seats.' The magistracy consists of a provost, three baillies, a treasurer, a town-clerk, and fourteen councillors. A town hall was erected in 1801, in which balls and other public assemblages take place. A large common, which belonged to Falkland, and on which the inhabitants had a right to turn their cattle, &c. was some years ago divided among the heritors, and is nearly all enclosed. The manufacture of linen forms an important branch of trade here, and the chief occupation of the industrious class is weaving. The Lomond hills in this district are shaped like a cone, the eastern Lomond, which is the most regular and beautiful, is about 1,650 feet above the level of the sea, and appears to have been fortified. The west Lomond is higher, and has on its top a large cairn or heap of loose stones.

The places of worship are a Parish Church, a Free Church, and a chapel for Independents. The Parish Church was erected some years ago, through the liberality of the late O. T. Bruce, Esq., at an expense, it is said, of £7,000; it is a handsome structure, surmounted by an elegant spire; and to perpetuate the memory of this gentleman a monument has been erected on Nett Hill, near the Lomonds, and can be seen at a great distance. A very handsome fountain was likewise constructed in the centre of the town by the above gentleman, who did much to contribute to the welfare and improvement of this place. A Parochial school has been established by the heritors; and there are other schools, including one for infants. Fairs are held in the parish on the second Tuesday in January, third Thursday in March, second Monday in May, third Friday in June, first Thursday in August, last Tuesday in September, and Friday before Edinburgh Hallow fair, in November. The August fair is an extensive one for cattle, and is attended by many English dealers.

FREUCHIE is a village in the parish of, and about two miles east from Falkland, and in which the linen manufacture is also carried on to a considerable extent, one power loom factory being in full operation, and another in course of erection. The inhabitants are principally employed in weaving linen goods. An United Presbyterian Chapel and a Subscription school are in the village.

FERRY-PORT-ON-CRAIG OR TAYPORT,

WITH NEWPORT, WOODHAVEN, FORGAN AND LEUCHARS.

FERRY-PORT-ON-CRAIG, or TAYPORT. This parish is five miles in length, by from half a mile to a mile in breadth—stretching along the sea, at the mouth of the Tay, where the land rises into a hilly range, extending westwards. The village or town is five miles from Dundee, seated at the base of the hills opposite to Broughty village. The Edinburgh, Perth and Dundee section of the North British railway terminates here, and passengers are forwarded by steam-boat to Broughty Ferry, and thence by rail to Dundee, both on the north bank of the Tay. For facilitating the shipping of goods, the railway company have constructed a dock and thrown out a pier; the latter can be approached by the steamers at all times of the tide. A great part of the village is composed of new houses, some of which are suited to the accommodation of visitors, who resort hither from the inland parts of the country for the benefit of sea-bathing—the beach here being naturally well formed for that purpose; hitherto the chief support of the inhabitants was derived from the weaving of linens, but a power loom factory, recently erected, affords employment to a number of hands, and two or three flax spinning mills are in course of erection, from which it is expected the trade of the place will derive material benefits. The salmon fishery which is co-extensive with the parish along the coast, is another source of emolument, being actively pursued during the season; the fish captured here are mostly sent to the London market. The City of Glasgow Banking Company have opened a branch here. The places of worship are the Parish Church, a Free Church, a United Presbyterian Church, and a Baptist Chapel.

FORGAN parish extends four miles in length by two in breadth, lying near the mouth of the Tay; having Tayport on the east Leuchars and Kilmeny on the south, and Balmerino on the west. The land generally declines to the Tay from an elevated back-ground, and is now well cultivated, inclosed, and beautifully wooded. On the shore is NEWPORT, where there is a small harbour and ferry station opposite to Dundee, with which latter place there is hourly communication by steam boat. From the great number of handsome villas recently erected on the slopes to the river, Newport has acquired quite a picturesque appearance, and as a summer retreat bids fair to rival many of the neighbouring watering places. The Kirk of Forgan, which is situated inland, is about ten miles distant from Cupar, and the like distance from St. Andrews. About one mile west from Newport is the small harbour of WOODHAVEN.

LEUCHARS parish is nine miles in length by five in breadth; bounded on the east by the German ocean, and watered by the Eden on the south and south west. The surface is level, and the soil tolerably fertile. The village of Leuchars is pleasantly situated about a mile from the coast, and six from St. Andrews, on the road from that town to Dundee. The majority of the inhabitants are employed in the weaving of linen. The Edinburgh, Perth and Dundee branch of the North British Railway passes through the parish, and there is a station in the village. The church is very ancient, and considered one of the most perfect specimens of Saxon architecture in Scotland; it is supposed to have been erected in the twelfth century; there is also a Free Church in the parish.

INVERKEITHING,

WITH THE VILLAGES AND HAMLETS OF NORTH QUEENSFERRY, ST. DAVID'S, FORDELL, HILLEND, JAMES TOWN, ROSYTH, DALGETTY, CROSSGATES, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

INVERKEITHING is a royal burgh, a seaport and the capital of its parish; 14 miles N.W. from Edinburgh, 31 s. from Perth, 13 s.w. from Kirkcaldy, and 4 from Dunfermline—the last-named places, and Halbeath and Crossgates, are the nearest railway stations. It is most agreeably situated at the inner side of the bay of the Firth of Forth, on an acclivity springing from the margin of the bay, and about 2 miles from North Queensferry, on the great road from Edinburgh to Perth, Aberdeen, &c. Its site commands an extensive view of the south bank of the Forth, with all that is grand and picturesque in the scenery of Mid-Lothian—Edinburgh, with its magnificently seated castle and fine buildings, lofty spires and towering monuments, bounds the eastern prospect, which is truly majestic when the morning sun beams on Arthur's Seat or Salisbury Craigs; while the passing and repassing of vessels on the river, and others lying at anchor, or moored in the harbour, add greatly to the beauty of the survey. So early as the days of David I., Inverkeithing was a royal residence, and received a charter of confirmation in the reign of William the Lion. There are many remains of antiquity, some of which are coeval with the earliest periods of Scottish history. The old castle of Rosyth, the celebrated residence of Margaret, spouse of Malcolm Canmore, and subsequently of the Stuart family, still resists the fury of the storm, and rears its venerable head amidst the waters of the Forth; the rock on which it stands is connected with the main land by a causeway, and a stone slab placed in the wall, over what appears to have been the principal entrance, bears the date 1561. In Sir Walter Scott's novel of the Abbot, this castle is alluded to, and tradition points it out as being the birthplace of the wife of Oliver Cromwell. It is now the property of the Earl of Hopetoun, whose noble mansion stands on the opposite shore, each gaining by the contrast—the one preserved in stately magnificence, and the other a mighty skeleton. The town consists chiefly of two streets, which are well paved and gas-lighted; improvements generally have been made, and the thoroughfares display some excellent and well furnished shops. There is a neat town-house, which comprises a gaol and suitable apartments for the courts. The first existing charter of Inverkeithing is one from William the Lion, confirming charters of earlier but unknown dates, a number of intervening charters were confirmed by one from James VI., in 1598. The government is vested in a provost or high sheriff, two bailies, a dean of guild, and a treasurer, elected by the councillors. The expense of paving, lighting, the supply of water, &c., is defrayed from the corporation funds. The burgh, in conjunction with Dunfermline, Stirling, Culross, and Queen's Ferry, sends one member to the imperial parliament. Besides the usual trades found in a respectable country town, there are established here two iron foundries, and a steam engine and boiler manufactory—and at the latter, iron vessels are constructed. Fire-bricks, tiles, and fire clay gas retorts are made extensively by Mr. Fraser; and tanning, rope making, and iron and wood ship building are other businesses—connected with the latter branch is a patent slip, of great use in repairing vessels. Halbeath and Townhill coals are shipped to the extent of about 50,000 to 80,000 tons per annum; the superior quality of these coals brings a high price. Freestone and whinstone are abundant in this neighbourhood and of excellent quality, and considerable quantities of each are annually exported. The harbour is capacious, and the bay is noted as a place of security in all winds; and the private harbour of East Ness, belonging to the Halbeath Colliery, is being extended, so far as to afford additional accommodation, and give about eighteen feet of water at spring tides. A branch of the Clydesdale Banking Company is established in Inverkeithing, affording great convenience to the monetary transactions of the commercial inhabitants. The places of worship are a church of the establishment, and one for an United Presbyterian congregation. There is a public school of the burgh, in which the languages, mathematics, and the usual branches of education are taught; and there are some private schools of a respectable grade, and societies for the propagation of Christianity. A fair is held on the first Friday in August.

NORTH QUEENSFERRY, formerly in the parish of Inverkeithing, but now annexed to Dunfermline, is well known to travellers as the port and point of land opposite to Queensferry (or South Queensferry), in Linlithgowshire, and a steamer passes between the two several times daily. A short distance to the west of the village is the anchorage ground, resorted to by vessels in stress of weather or contrary winds—called Saint Margaret's Hope. Here is a station of the coast-guard, and it is a fishing one for a kind of sprat, of which prodigious quantities are taken.

SAINT DAVID'S is a small port about a mile and a half to the east of Inverkeithing. The rise of this place may be mainly ascribed to the advantages it affords for the shipment of coal, brought from the extensive collieries at FORDELL by means of a railway five miles in length. At the pier here, which has been extended at a cost of from £4,000 to £5,000, upwards of 500 tons of coal can be shipped daily; and there is an average depth of eighteen feet at high water—being greater than that of any other port on this part of the coast, and will admit vessels of five hundred tons to receive their cargoes at the pier; it is the property of George William Mercer Henderson, Esq. Fire-brick and tile making are the only branches carried on here.

HILLEND, JAMES TOWN, and ROSYTH, are hamlets, situated from about a mile to a mile and a half from Inverkeithing. There is nothing worthy of particular remark attached to either. A parish school for Dalgetty, recently erected, is situated at the eastern extremity of Hillend.

DALGETTY is a parish, and formerly a village, lying to the east of Inverkeithing; this district is rich in coal, of which great quantities are exported from St. David's. In this parish are the ruins of Fordell Castle (erected 1111), with its beautiful grounds and waterfall; it is well worthy of notice from the tourist.

CROSSGATES is a village, partly in the parish of Dalgetty, and partly in that of Dunfermline, four miles north from the former and three from the latter; situated about a quarter of a mile from a station on the North British railway. The inhabitants are principally employed in the collieries surrounding the village. The places of worship are the Established church and an United Presbyterian chapel; also a Subscription school.

KETTLE,

PITLESSIE AND COLLESSIE.

KETTLE is a parish and village—the latter 17 miles s. from Dundee, and four from Falkland, standing about a quarter of a mile off the main road from Edinburgh to Cupar, nearly six miles from the latter town. The Edinburgh, Perth, and Dundee branch of the North British Railway passes through the village, at which there is a station. The name of Kettle is of very obscure etymology; it was anciently called Katul, and in common phraseology it is invariably entitled 'the Kettle.' At one period the parish was denominated King's Kettle, from being the property of the crown. This district forms a large portion of that rich and beautiful territory on the north side of the Howe of Fife, it is exceedingly fertile throughout, with a slight exception. The river Eden bounds the parish on nearly the whole of its northern side. The manufacture of linen is the principal trade carried on here. The church, which is a handsome building with a square tower, was erected in 1832. Besides the Established Church, there is a Free Church, and an United Presbyterian Chapel. In this parish, about half a mile from the village, is the hamlet of BALMALCOLM.

PITLESSIE is a small village in the parish of Cults, two miles from Kettle; situated on the road between Kirkcaldy and Cupar, 4 miles from the latter town. The occupation of the inhabitants is of the same nature as those of Kettle. The parish of Cults abounds in coal, lime, and freestone, and it is generally well cultivated and enclosed. The parish is chiefly in the Howe of Fife, on the south bank of the Eden, having Ceres on the east, Kettle on the west, and Monimail on the north. The principal ornaments of this district are the mansion-house and beautifully disposed pleasure grounds and plantations of Crawford Priory, which lie on the west side of the road to Cupar. Wilkie, the justly celebrated painter, was a native of the parish, his father having been minister of Cults. The ancient name of the parish was Guilkes, which signifies a nook or corner, it being disjointed from the large strath which runs from east to west along the bank of the Eden.

COLLESSIE is a parish lying to the north of that of Kettle, eight miles in length by five in breadth; consisting chiefly of fine enclosed lands, and some fine plantations rising from the Eden to the hills on the north. The village, of no importance in the way of business, is situated three miles from Auchtermuchty, and six from Cupar, the railway before mentioned passes through it. The Parish Church is a neat building surmounted by a spire. LADYBANK is a small village in this parish, and a junction station on the North British Railway.

KILCONQUHAR,

WITH BARNYARDS, EARLSFERRY, COLINSBURGH, ELIE, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

THE parish of KILCONQUHAR lies on the shore of the Frith of Forth, extending in an oblong form between seven and eight miles from north to south, and varying from two to nearly five miles in breadth. The surface rises from the south, and the soil varies gradually as it recedes from the coast. The flat part of the south is a sandy soil, the rest being all of an upland character. There are many beautiful seats in the parish, of which Balcarras, the residence of Sir Coutts Lindsay, Bart., is the chief; and there are other elegant mansions also deserving notice. Kilconquhar loch is a fine sheet of water, three quarters of a mile in length, and nearly the same in breadth, with two small islands, which harbour many swans and wild fowl. Fairs are held 14th May and 8th November. This parish contains four villages, namely, KILCONQUHAR, EARLSFERRY, (a burgh), BARNYARDS, and COLINSBURGH. The latter, which is the principal village, is 17 miles from Kirkcaldy, 11 from Cupar, the like distance from St. Andrew's, four from Largo, one from Kilconquhar and Barnyards, and two miles S.W. from Elie.

COLINSBURGH is a village of some trade, having a branch of the Commercial Bank of Scotland, a good inn, and several well-furnished shops. Besides the Parish church, and a United Presbyterian chapel, at Kilconquhar, there is also one of the latter here. In the village a weekly corn market is held on Thursdays, and fairs on the second Tuesday in March, and the second Thursday in June and October.

ELIE is a small parish, being only about a square mile in extent, bounded on the north and west by Kilconquhar, and on the east by St. Monance, lying on the coast of the Frith of Forth. The whole, which is enclosed, is the property of William Baird, Esq., who has here an elegant residence. The village of Elie is six miles E. of Largo, one mile and a half from Kilconquhar, two and a half from Colinsburgh, and the same distance from St. Monance. It stands so near the sea that the waves wash the walls of some of the houses. The harbour is said to be the deepest on the Frith of Forth, except that of Burntisland. The beach is here very fine and sandy; and the bathing being excellent, many persons resort here in the summer from distant parts, but at other times it is destitute of attraction, although at some earlier period it must have been a place of more importance than it now is; for in one of the streets near the sea there are some substantial ancient residences, evidently once the habitation of families of distinction. The places of worship are the Parish church, a Free church, and an Independent chapel. A new, handsome, and commodious parish school and master's residence, have recently been erected north of the town. The trade of the place is confined to the export of grain and potatoes: there is also a branch of the National Bank of Scotland, and at Earlsferry village, which joins with Elie, the weaving of ticks and checks for distant houses, and the coal works, are the chief employment and support of its inhabitants.

POST OFFICE, KILCONQUHAR, Alexander Wilkie, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive at ten minutes past nine morning, and from Leven and Largo at seven evening; and are despatched at forty minutes past six morning, and five minutes past four afternoon.

Post Office, ELIE, Ann Gourlay, Post Mistress.—Letters from all parts arrive at nine morning, one afternoon, and seven evening; and are despatched at twenty-five minutes past six morning, and four afternoon.

KINGHORN, PETTY-CUR, AUCHTERTOOL,

AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

KINGHORN is a town of considerable antiquity, and a royal burgh and parish, three miles S.W. from Kirkcaldy, and two and a half from Burntisland; occupying a pleasant situation on the side of a hill, sloping to the Frith of Forth, and exactly opposite to Leith, and on the line of the Edinburgh, Perth, and Dundee Railway. It consists principally of one main street, intersected by others of minor importance. An elegant edifice was erected some years ago, answering the purpose of a town house and gaol. Another public erection, worthy of notice, is a handsome new school house; it contains school rooms, and a library and museum. Kinghorn was invested with the privileges of a royal burgh by King David I., and about that time it is said to have been a royal residence. In consequence of non-election of councillors in terms of the sett of the burgh; the government is now vested in five managers, a treasurer, town clerk, &c. The courts formerly held here have been transferred to Kirkcaldy. The burgh, in conjunction with those of Dysart, Kirkcaldy, and Burntisland, returns one member to parliament. The branches of trade carried on here is flax spinning—for which Messrs. Swan Brothers have two mills; the manufacture of glue on an extensive scale by the Messrs. John Darney and Sons, and iron ship-building by Mr. John Key, each of whom employ a large number of hands. Improvements in the town are in progress, particularly in the erection of a more modern and superior class of houses, both for business purposes and private residences. The harbour has fallen to decay, and the nearest, now, is about half a mile mile distant, at PETTY-CUR, which for many years was the ferry-place for Edinburgh, now transferred to Burntisland. The island of Inchkeith, distant about three miles from Petty-Cur, has the appearance of a barren rock; on visiting it however, both arable and pasture land are discovered. It also contains a small harbour and a light-house, for the security of vessels sailing up the Frith. About a mile to the eastward is the Kirkcaldy Combination Poorhouse for the parishes of Kirkcaldy, Abbotshall hall, Burntisland and Kinghorn; it occupies a commanding situation near the coast. Further particulars will be found in the account of Kirkcaldy. We may also state for the curious, that this poorhouse was the first institution of the kind assessed for poor rates in Scotland. The case arose in consequence of three other parishes refusing to pay the rates assessed by the parishes of Kinghorn, and after being brought before the Lord Ordinary, was upon appeal, carried to the second division of the court of session, and a decree given in favour of Kinghorn. The expenses in the case amounting to nearly £300, being defrayed by the parishes of Kirkcaldy, Abbotshall and Burntisland. The places of worship are a Church of the Establishment, a Free Church, and an United Presbyterian Chapel; and the educational institutions are a school in connection with the Free Church; one for infants, and 'Philp's Institution.'

AUCHTERTOOL, a small inland parish and village, the latter situated four miles west from Kirkcaldy, and about the same distance from Kinghorn, and stands in the midst of a beautifully deversified landscape. Agriculture is the principal pursuit of the inhabitants, there not being any kind of manufacture or trade in the place, except a distillery and a corn mill. There is an Established Church, a Parochial, and two Subscription schools. From a little lake, called Camilla loch, in this parish, the river Teel takes its rise; on the verge of the loch are the ruins of Camilla Castle, or 'Hallyards.' Auchterteel is said to have been the original name of the parish, deriving the appellation from its situation on the banks of the Teel.

POST OFFICE, KINGHORN, Edward Taylor, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Edinburgh) at half-past seven morning, and evening, half-past five, and are despatched thereto at eight morning, and thirty-six minutes past five evening.

Letters from Kirkcaldy, and the east coast arrive at half-past eight morning, and at six evening, and are despatched thereto at a quarter seven evening.

KIRKCALDY

WITH ABBOTSHALL, PATHHEAD, ST. CLAIRTOWN, AND GALLATOWN.

KIRKCALDY is a royal burgh, the seat of a presbytery, a populous thriving sea-port, and the capital of its parish; 14 miles N. from Edinburgh, 33 S.W. from Dundee, and 6 from Burntisland—(all rail distances), on the North British Railway (Edinburgh, Perth, and Dundee line), the station of which is contiguous to the town. It is situated on the northern shore of the Firth of Forth, and stretches along the base of a range of rising grounds to the extent of nearly two miles, including suburbs. From the narrow dimensions of the site on which the town stands, the inhabitants have from the first been necessitated to build their habitations in a continuous line along the shore, though without much regard to the regularity of their structure; and having thence elongated most disproportionately, the place from an early period has been styled 'the lang town o' Kirka'dy,' in familiar allusion to its appearance. Though formerly limited to this long street, and a few narrow diverging lanes, houses were in time erected on the ascent behind, or near to the shore in front; and it now comprises several well-built cross streets and detached dwellings, the residences of the more opulent classes; so that, when viewed from the sea, the town appears environed by finely-enclosed productive fields, ornamented by the beautiful grounds and conspicuous tower of Raith, (the residence of Col. Robert Ferguson), and the grounds surrounding the elegant mansion of Dunniker, the seat of James T. Oswald, Esq. The prospect from the heights is of a different character, but equally delightful, embracing, as it does, the town and landscape immediately beneath and around, with a view of the busy waters of the Firth of Forth. From a remote date the town of Kirkcaldy has sustained great vicissitudes and fluctuations in its commerce and prosperity. When Charles I. erected it anew into a royal burgh, it had, according to tradition, one hundred ships belonging to it, and ranked as the sixth place of maritime importance in Scotland; but, in 1673, the number of vessels in its possession had decreased to twenty-five. On the return of peace, in 1763, the trade to the port revived, and the quantity of shipping consequently increased and progressively augmented, so that in 1792 it boasted twenty-six vessels; from this period Kirkcaldy has gradually risen into repute, both as a port and a manufacturing town. The trade of the port is pretty extensive. The principal importations are flax, timber, grain, &c.; the exports are linen, yarn, and coal. Vessels from this port have been employed in the Davis Straits whale-fishery for many years, and there are vessels at the present time engaged in that trade. A branch from the main line of railway traverses the entire length of the harbour—a great convenience to operations of loading and unloading vessels. The harbour, which has been greatly improved within the last few years, is almost dry at low water; but at full tide is capable of admitting vessels of large burden. This port is the seat of a custom-house having control over a considerable line of coast. The prominent trade of Kirkcaldy and neighbourhood bears an intimate affinity with that of Dundee, consisting of the spinning of flax, tow, jute, and the weaving of linen goods for home and foreign consumption; striped hollands, dowlas, ticks, checks, sailcloths, &c., are amongst the fabrics produced, and in the manufacture of which there are several extensive power-loom factories in full operation; there are also several bleach-fields and dye works, and a large earthenware manufactory, where a superior class of goods are made. The other branches include two large floor cloth manufactories, brewing, ironfounding, machine making, and a considerable corn and meal trade. The general commerce of the place is assisted by resident branches of five banking establishments, namely, the 'National Bank of Scotland,' the 'Commercial Bank of Scotland,' the 'Bank of Scotland,' the 'Union Bank of Scotland,' and the 'City of Glasgow Bank.' There is also a branch of the 'National Security Savings' Bank.' There are now many elegant shops, with extensive stocks of fashionable, ornamental, and useful goods; and there are two tolerably good inns. The streets are well paved and lighted with gas. The celebrated Adam Smith, author of the "Wealth of Nations," was born here in the year 1723. The civic government of the town is confided to a provost, two bailies, a dean of guild, and a treasurer; the council consists of twenty-one members. The burgh is conjoined with Kinghorn, Dysart, and Burntisland, in sending one member to parliament: the present member is Roger Sinclair Aytoun, Esq. The chief magistrate is provost and admiral, and is assisted by assessors of admiralty. There is also a board of harbour commissioners, of which the Provost is chairman. The paving, watering, and lighting is under the management of burgh trustees, the Provost being chairman. In 1829 was completed, and has superseded the old town-house, a handsome building of large dimensions, containing a hall for burgh and district meetings; a burgh court and record rooms, an office for the town-clerk, and other apartments. The sheriff holds a circuit court here on the first Friday of every alternate month, under the small debts act; and the justices of the peace likewise sit on the first Monday monthly, for adjudicating claims under other pecuniary acts. The foundation stone of a new corn exchange in Cowan-street was laid with masonic honours in May, 1859. The union poorhouse is a conspicuous building, beautifully situated on the lands of Abden, in the parish of Kinghorn, commanding an extensive view of the Firth of Forth. It was erected in 1849, capable of accommodating 150 paupers, and was opened for the reception of inmates in May, 1850. The total cost considerably exceeded £5,000. It is the joint property of the parishes of Kirkcaldy, Abbotshall, Burntisland, and Kinghorn, nearly half being held by the parish of Kirkcaldy. The parish church, which is in the Gothic style, stands on an eminence above and at the back of the town; the other places of worship are a Free church, two United Presbyterian churches, and Episcopalian, Baptist, and Independent chapels. The principal educational establishments besides the parochial or burgh school, (a handsome building erected in 1844), is Philp's Institution for instructing children of both sexes, selected from among those of the poorest inhabitants; in connection with this charity there are schools also at Path-head, Abbotshall, and Kinghorn. The property bequeathed by Mr. Philp for erecting and sustaining schools in these places is estimated at nearly £70,000. The pupils are admitted between the ages of six and fifteen, and are taught only the plainest elementary branches; thirty shillings per annum is allowed for clothing each pupil. There is also a charitable trust by John Thomson, for educating poor children, and for annuities for the support of poor inhabitants. There are also several private seminaries for the education of the wealthier classes. There is a working men's club and reading room, a subscription library, and mechanics' institution; and two advertising newspapers are published here every Saturday. The market, which is a stock market for the sale of grain, and is the most important in the county, is held on Saturday. Fairs on the third Fridays in February, April, and July, and the first Friday in October.

ABBOTSHALL, although a distinct parish, may be said to form almost an integral part of Kirkcaldy, for its principal street called the Links, (nearly a mile long), runs west in a direct line with the High-street of the town named. The trade and manufactures are of the same character as those of Kirkcaldy; and more immediately in Abbotshall are dye works, an earthenware manufactory, and a large corn mill. The places of worship are Established and Free churches; and the schools are parochial, 'Philp's Institution,' and subscription. The general appearance of the parish, the extent of which is about two miles either way, is very agreeable, rising gradually from the coast northward into tolerably high grounds. Raith House, before noticed, is in this parish.

PATH-HEAD is a large village in the parish and parliamentary burgh of Dysart, situated chiefly on the face of a hill, looking towards the Frith of Forth. It extends nearly to the town of Kirkcaldy, of which it may be said to form an integral part, and is joined by two other districts, respectively named GALLATOWN and SAINT CLAIRTOWN. The manufacture of linen goods is briskly followed in these places, essentially similar to the Kirkcaldy trade. Dowlas, ticks, sheeting, &c., of excellent quality, are produced both by hand and power; flax spinning is also carried on to some extent; and in Path-head there are two floor cloth manufactories. At St. Clairtown is an earthenware manufactory, and a branch of the 'Commercial Bank of Scotland.' The places of worship are an Established church, two Free churches, and a meeting-house for Baptists. The means of education are not wanting, a commodious school-house having been erected in Path-head some years since by the trustees of the late Robert Philp, Esq., of Kirkcaldy; and in 1849, an auxiliary parochial or subscription school was opened, also a subscription school in St. Clairtown, and one in Gallatown, in all of which a sound and useful education is imparted.

LARGO (UPPER AND NETHER), AND LUNDIN MILL.

LARGO parish lies on the shore of the Frith of Forth, betwixt Newburn and Kilconquhar on the east, and Leven on the west—its inland quarter being bounded by Ceres. The parish contains three villages, one called UPPER (or KIRKTOWN of) LARGO, NETHER LARGO, and LUNDIN MILL; the first is situated a mile from the sea, on the road leading from Leven to Anstruther—3 miles from the former, 9 from the latter, 11 from St. Andrews, 9 from Cupar, and 10 and a half from Dysart. In Upper Largo, which is a very agreeable little village, stands the Parish Church, an ancient Gothic fabric, with a spire rising from the centre. This was the birth place of the celebrated Scottish admiral, Sir Andrew Wood, who, in the reign of James IV., defeated the English fleet under Stephen Bull. The East of Fife railway passes within a short distance of the village, where there is a station. A hospital, which stands in the village, was erected by means of an endowment by a Mr. John Wood, a native of the place; it is a handsome building, in the Gothic style. The intention of the founder was one of a peculiar nature—any man 'of the name of Wood' may have admission here, to whatever part of Scotland he may belong. The foundation provides the inmates with beds and bedding, the produce of the gardens, and £15 per annum. The National Bank of Scotland has a sub-branch, and a Savings' Bank is also established.

NETHER LARGO is a fishing village, one mile from Upper Largo, seated at the head of an indentation of the Frith of Forth, called Largo bay; it stands at the influx of a rivulet named the Keil, whose estuary forms a harbour to the place. This village would have remained amongst the most obscure of coast villages but from the circumstance of its having been the birthplace of Alexander Selkirk, rendered famous by the pen of De Foe as 'Robinson Crusoe.' The house in which Selkirk was born still exists: it is an ordinary cottage of one storey and a garret, and is stationed on the north side of the main street of Largo. A descendant of this person, and of the same name (Alexander Selkirk) is at this time a resident in the village, and at one time possesed the chest belonging to the hero of De Foe, together with the cup (formed out of a cocoa-nut) from which he drunk; both relics, however, have long since been disposed of to some antiquarian. The gun with which he killed his game was sold some years ago, and is now in the possession of the family of Lumsdanes, near Colinsburgh. The weaving of linen goods occupies several of the inhabitants of these villages. In the parish are edifices for congregations of the Established and Free Churches and Baptists and United Presbyterians. With the churches, schools are connected. On the east bank of the Keil are the ruins of the ancient castle of Bateruvie.

POST OFFICE, UPPER LARGO, John Marr, Post Master.—Letters from Edinburgh, Kirkcaldy, Cupar, and Leven arrive at nine morning, and are despatched thereto and to all parts at half-past six morning.

LESLIE

IS a burgh of barony, and manufacturing town, 12 miles E. from Kinross, the like distance S.W. from Cupar, 9 N.W. from Kirkcaldy, and 3 W. from Markinch, (a station on the Edinburgh, Perth, and Dundee branch of the North British Railway). It is seated along the summit of a ridge of ground rising from the Leven on the southern and a shallow vale on the northern side, and situated on the public road up the vale of Leven, leading into Kinross-shire. It consists principally of one street, running from east to west. It is a very ancient place, often frequented by the James's when holding court at Falkland; and here is the scene laid of the song of the "Jolly Beggars." Of its age, the irregularity of the streets, and architecture of the houses (being built with the gable ends to the street), are proofs. Nearly all the dwellings are provided with gardens behind, and the environs display much rural beauty—the streets of the town are gas-lighted. At the eastern entrance to the town is a pleasant public 'green,' of a triangular figure; in former times, this area was the scene of various pastimes, and the place of annual meeting of the pedlars or packmen of Scotland. Many improvements have been made in the burgh within the last sixty years, and during that period its size has been nearly doubled. This increase is attributable to the prosperity of its manufactures, consisting of linens and woollens, flax spinning, paper making, and bleaching; the works of these are chiefly established on the banks of the Leven. A branch railway runs from the west end of the town to join the Edinburgh, Perth, and Dundee branch of the North British Railway at Markinch. A branch of the 'Union Bank of Scotland' was opened here in 1850; and there is a National Security Savings' Bank. Leslie is governed by two baillies and sixteen councillors; the Hon. George W. Leslie, M.P., has a seat, (Leslie House), at the eastern end of the town; around the mansion are some fine pleasure grounds and agreeable plantations. The places of worship are the Parish church, a plain structure with a spire; a Free church, and two Presbyterian churches; there are three or four public schools in the parish. The Established church Sabbath school is attended by 300 children, conducted by eighteen teachers. There is also a library established under the title of the "Leslie Institute Library:" it consists of 850 vols. of valuable books. One of the rules of the library is that it can never be dissolved, its laws being like that of the Medes and Persians, unalterable. The inhabitants of Leslie have for years taken pride to themselves for their upright dealing. Although upwards of 1,500 people are employed in public works, scarcely a case of discipline has occurred for years, and until 1856, no lawyer ever could find a footing. Fairs are held here on the first Tuesday in April, the Wednesday next before Michaelmas (old style), and on the first Friday in October. The April fair is considered the largest in the county of Fife.

POST OFFICE, LESLIE, Elizabeth Esson, Post Mistress.—Letters from all parts arrive at half-past nine morning and at thirty minutes past seven evening; and are despatched at ten minutes before six morning and twenty-five minutes past three afternoon.

LEVEN WITH INNER LEVEN,

AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

LEVEN is a town in the parish of Scoonie, nine miles from Kirkcaldy, four from Wemyss, and three from Largo, situate on the coast of the Frith of Forth, on the mouth of the river Leven, from which the place takes its name. The town consists of three principal streets, irregularly built, but contains some good houses; with several lanes and detached mansions. A number of elegant villas have been erected at the Links, a little to the east of the town, and several handsome mansions are in the neighbourhood. A branch railway from Thornton station on the Edinburgh, Perth and Dundee Railway, gives the town the benefit and facility of that mode of transit; this branch railway is extended east to Elie. The town has also the benefit of a harbour, but it is not much resorted to in consequence of the bad entrance and limited accommodation at the quay. The entrance and harbour are, however, capable of improvement. The principal imports are flax, tow, barley and timber. The town is greatly improved, and its trade augmented: so that Leven may now be pronounced one of the most thriving of the small towns in the county of Fife. Over the Leven, and connecting this town with the village of INNER LEVEN, is a handsome stone bridge. The staple trade of Leven is the preparation and spinning of flax, and the weaving of linen; the mills of the former, especially, employing a considerable number of hands. The Durie ironfoundry, a concern long established, is very extensive, and produces specimens of work that may compete with any of a similar kind in Scotland; the proprietors of these works, Messrs. Balfour & Co., manufacture both for the home trade exportation. Close to the town are the Hawkslaw works of Messrs. Boswell & Co., hemp and flax spinners. For the spinning and making herring net and sail twines they have long been deservedly famed; they have added to their extensive works machinery for the manufacture of herring nets, and from the accurate and beautiful work made, they must ere long place hand-made nets amongst the things that were. They also manufacture largely for home and export. The number of hands employed by them is upwards of 400. A bone-dust mill, corn mills, bleach fields, the manufacture of bricks and tiles, and rope making, are the other leading branches carried on here and in the vicinity. There are three branch banking houses, and several fire and life agency offices. During the summer months, Leven is the resort of a number of respectable families from Edinburgh and the interior, for the benefit of sea bathing. 'Crawford's Hotel,' the principal of the kind, affords superior accommodation either to families, tourists, or commercial gentlemen, to it has been added a large posting establishment.

Leven is a burgh of barony, and is governed by a baron baillie, appointed by the superior, Mr. Christie, of Durie. The purposes of lighting, cleaning, and water are carried out in the burgh by commissioners appointed under the General Police Act for Scotland, which was some time ago adopted here. The sheriff holds a small debt circuit court here every three months, namely, on second Friday of March, first Friday of June, and the last Fridays of August and November.

The Parish Church of Scoonie, which is one of the plainest in the shire, stands close to the town; a Free Church, an United Presbyterian and Episcopal Chapels are the other places of worship. A Parochial and Free Church Schools, with some private academies are the educational establishments. Between the town of Methil and the mouth of the Leven, there are some fine open downs on which a golfing society exercise their healthful amusement, and annually play for a gold and a silver medal. To the east of Leven there are also fine open downs or links where the game of Golf is daily practiced by the members of the Leven Golf club and others. Fairs, the second Wednesday in April, o.s. the first Wednesday in July, and third Wednesday in October.

POST OFFICE, BANK STREET, Stephen Youden, Post Master.—Letters from Edinburgh, and the South, North, East and Buckhaven, arrive at ten minutes past nine morning, and at seven evening. and are despatched to Edinburgh, and the South and North at forty minutes past six morning, and ten minutes past four evening.

LIMEKILNS, BRUCEHAVEN, AND CHARLESTOWN.

LIMEKILNS with BRUCEHAVEN is a small sea-port, in the parish of Dunfermline, three miles south of that town, situated on the north bank of the Frith of Forth. It was at one period a place of considerable trade, but at the present day its excellent harbour is chiefly made use of for the mooring of vessels. Ship-building is carried on at Brucehaven ship-yard, and many beautiful clipper-built vessels have been launched here. Several owners of vessels employed in the coasting trade reside here; and there is an association for the insurance of vessels. A congregation of United Presbyterians have a chapel here.

A short distance from Limekilns is the village and port of CHARLESTOWN, the property of the Earl of Elgin, who has formed a commodious harbour and pier, and built residences for the men employed at his extensive lime works in the vicinity. From hence enormous quantities of lime is exported annually; it is likewise the shipping port for several of the adjacent collieries. The accommodation found at the harbour here, for loading and unloading vessls, is most excellent. Manufactories for salt, an iron foundry, a fire-brick works, a steam saw mill and timber yard, are among the other businesses of this flourishing little place.

POST OFFICE, CHARLESTOWN, George Blyth, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Dunfermline) at half-past twelve noon, and at half-past five evening; and are despatched thereto at two afternoon, and at nine night.

MARKINCH,

KENNOWAY, AND THE VILLAGES OF MILLTOWN (OR MILLTOWN OF BALGONIE), THORNTON, AND WINDYGATES.

MARKINCH is a parish and village—the latter, a station on the Edinburgh, Perth, and Dundee Railway, is situated near the centre of the parish, at the distance of 10 miles S. from Cupar, and 8 N.E. from Kirkcaldy, and between 6 and 7 miles from Leven; it occupies an open situation on a piece of irregular rising ground; and on the highest part is seated the church. A branch line of railway from the Edinburgh, Perth, and Dundee line connects this place with Leslie. Flax spinning, and the weaving of linen is extensively carried on here; there are also paper and corn mills, a woollen manufactory, and bleach fields. The district around abounds in coal, and in the village there is a sub-branch of the Commercial Bank of Scotland. The places of worship are a church of the Establishment, a Free church, and a chapel for the United Presbyterians—with the first and second, schools are connected. The parish of Markinch is bounded by Kennoway on the east; on the west by Dysart, Kinglassie, and Leslie; on the north by Falkland and Kettle; and on the south by Wemyss; it extends from north to south five miles and a half, by a mean breadth of two, its southern end being considerably wider. The parish has a general slope towards the south. It is under the best state of cultivation, enclosure, and plantation, and must be ranked amongst the most beautiful parts of this shire: it is traversed by the streams of the Leven and the Or, and the great road through the county crosses it. The Edinburgh, Perth, and Dundee Railway is carried over the first named river by means of a handsome viaduct of ten arches, nearly ninety feet in height. Balgonie Castle, the property of Charles Balfour, Esq., is an edifice of great antiquity and strength; it stands on the south bank of the Leven, in the midst of some finely wooded grounds. About half a mile to the east is the Castle of Balfour, surrounded by pleasing plantations and enclosures; and in a delightful situation is the house (or castle) of Balbirnie, a good substantial mansion. Fairs, second Tuesday in February, last Tuesday in March, second Tuesday in May, second Tuesday in July, second Friday in October, and third Tuesday in December. The village of WINDYGATES in this parish stands on the high road between Markinch and Leven (about two miles west from the latter). Contiguous to the village, is the extensive distillery of the Messrs. John Haig and Co.; also the flax spinning mills of Messrs. G. and H. Wilson and Co. A district Post-office has been opened here, and close to it is CAMERON BRIDGE, a station on the Leven and East of Fife Railway. A fair is held here on the second Tuesday in March.

MILLTOWN, or MILLTOWN OF BALGONIE, is a village about midway between Windygates and Markinch, and with the exception of the large flax-spinning mills of Messrs. J. G. Stuart & Co., is not deserving of particular notice. There is a chapel of ease belonging to the Established Church, a Subscription School, and a Post-office.

THORNTON is a village situated near to the south-eastern extremity of the parish, and close to a junction on the North British and the Leven and East of Fife Railways. There is a joint station here. The Dysart Combination Poor-house, erected in 1862, at a cost of about £6,000, is in this village: it is a handsome stone building, capable of receiving 130 of the poor of the surrounding parishes. There is a chapel of the Established Church, a Subscription School, and a Post-office.

KENNOWAY parish, which lies to the east of Markinch, is three miles long and two broad, situated on an acclivity rising from the south to the north. It commands a delightful and extensive prospect, from its southern side, of the Firth of Forth, its islands, and the Lothians; while, from the northern extremity, the view extends over the greater part of the counties of Fife, Angus, and Perth, including the Grampian hills. The village of Kennoway is situated about three miles from that of Markinch, and the same distance from Leven, at the head of a beautiful and romantic glen, the sides of which are precipitous and rocky, and contains caves, which were probably used as places of refuge or retreat for marauders in ancient times. Hand loom weaving and agriculture appear to be the principal pursuit of the inhabitants. The places of worship comprise a Church of the Establishment, a Free church, and a a chapel of the United Presbyterians. With the first named a school is connected.

POST OFFICE, MARKINCH, Ann Hutchison, Post Mistress.—Letters from Edinburgh and the South arrive at six minutes past eight morning, and six evening. From Perth, Dundee, and the North at forty minutes past seven morning, and twelve minutes after five evening; and are despatched to Edinburgh and the South at twenty minutes past seven morning, and five evening. To Perth, Dundee, and the North, at fifty minutes past seven morning, and fifty minutes past five evening.

Money Order Office and Savings' Bank.

Post Office, KENNOWAY, William Thomson, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Edinburgh), at ten morning, and eight evening; and are despatched at six morning and four evening.

Money Order Offices at Markinch and at Leven.

Post Office, MILLTOWN OF BALGONIE, Janet Philp, Post Mistress.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Markinch), at a quarter-past nine morning; and are despatched thereto at five minutes past four evening.

Post Office, THORNTON, Isabella Miller, Post Mistress.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Kirkcaldy), at twenty minutes past ten morning; and are despatched at five minutes past three afternoon.

Post Office, WINDYGATES, Peter Smith, Post Master.—Letters from Edinburgh and the South, Cupar, Dundee, Kirkcaldy, and Markinch, arrive at half-past eight morning, and at half-past six evening; and are despatched thereto at a quarter-past seven morning, and fifty minutes past four afternoon. From Leven at half-past seven morning, and at a quarter-past five evening; and are despatched thereto at eight morning, and at six evening.

The nearest Money Order Office is at Leven.

NEWBURGH,

WITH THE PARISHES OF ABDIE, BALMERINO AND CREICH.

NEWBURGH is a royal burgh, sea-port and the capital of its parish, 15 miles S.W. from Dundee, 11 S.E. from Perth, 10 N.W. from Cupar, and 5 N. from Auchtermuchty, situated on the line of the Edinburgh, Perth, and Dundee Railway, and on the south bank of the Tay. It consists of one long street in the direction of east and west, parallel with the course of the river, and a lane or two leading towards the shore, where there are convenient quays for the shipping of merchandise, and a spacious harbour; the Tay above, being navigable only for vessels of about two hundred tons; those of greater burthen put in here to discharge their cargoes, which are sent to Perth by lighters. That the town is of considerable antiquity is unquestionable; according to some authorities, its origin is ascribed to the fostering patronage of the adjacent abbey of Lindores, founded in 1178, by David, Earl of Huntingdon on his return from the Holy Land. The unfortunate Duke of Rothsay, who was starved to death in Falkland Palace, was buried here. The ruins are a little eastward of the town. Several stone coffins have at different times been discovered, and are still to be seen. The name of New-burgh is supposed to be conferred upon it in contradistinction to the ancient decayed burgh of Abernethy, which lies about two miles to the west. Formerly the greater proportion of the habitations were low-built and roofed with thatch, but of late years a better style of architecture has prevailed, and there are now many good houses. The town hall stands near the centre of the town, and the church, nearly opposite to it, is a handsome edifice.

In the year 1266 the town was erected into a burgh of regality, and in 1631 Charles I. granted to the place a charter, forming the community into a royal burgh; in virtue of which grant Newburgh is said to have sent a commissioner to the Scottish estates, but being unable to pay his expenses, which was then the custom, the burgh, upon petition, was relieved from the burden of parliamentary distinction, and it has never since been oppressed by representative honours. There is, however, at the present time, no evidence of it ever having sent a member to the Scottish parliament. There are two ancient crosses within the parish, one at Mugdrum, about 13 feet high, and Macduff cross, or rather the pedestal of it, of great interest, from its having been granted to Macduff as a sanctuary for his successful aid against Macbeth. The government is vested in two baillies and fifteen councillors, with a treasurer and a town clerk. Within the last fifty years, Newburgh has risen very considerably in wealth and outward appearance through the industrious habits of its population, and the traffic carried on at its port. There are two branch banking establishments. The Central Bank of Scotland, and the Commercial Bank of Scotland, also a Savings' Bank, in connection with the latter. The manufacture of linen goods may be considered the staple of the place, exclusive of which the trade in corn and timber is by no means inconsiderable; of the former especially, large exports are made. To the parish of Newburgh many interesting particulars belong, which our confined space will not allow us to notice, but which the reader will find amply detailed in Messrs. Chambers' excellent Gazetteer. The places of worship comprise a church of the Establishment, a Free Church, and two United Presbyterian Churches. There are several schools in the parish. The parochial school, the pupils, of which in addition to the ordinary branches are taught Latin, Greek, Hebrew, mathematics and navigation. A school, a neat and handsome building, conducted on the Madras principle was erected some years ago at the east end of the town, with funds from Dr. Bells trust, private subscriptions, and government aid. Fairs are held on the third Friday in June, and on the first Tuesday in December, for hiring servants.

ABDIE parish, which is of considerable extent, but greatly intersected by other parishes, lies on the north bank of the river Tay, amongst those highlands to the westward, which have acquired the appellation of the Ochill hills. The surface is remarkably uneven, but the soil is in general fertile. It possesses three quarries of granite, of which considerable quantities are shipped for paving the streets of London. The parish is well watered with lochs, the chief of which is the lake of Lindores, about a mile in length, and of irregular breadth. This piece of water is well stored with fish, and being surrounded by some romantic scenery, is a beautiful object in the view of the country.

BALMERINO or Balmerinoch (pronounced Ba'mernie) is a parish lying on the south bank of the river Tay, extending, on an average, about 3¼ miles in length, and 2¼ in breadth. The surface is a gradual decline to the side of the river. The harbour of Balmerino is small, but a considerable quantity of grain is annually exported from it. The kirk and little hamlet lie on the road along the high ground, from the ferry opposite Dundee, to Newburgh. To the west, and on a slip of ground intruding upon the waters of the Tay, stands the ancient village of Balmerino, adjacent to which are the ruins of the once-famed abbey—a beautiful structure, begun by Alexander II., and his mother, Emergarde, daughter of the Earl of Beaumont, in 1229. These ruins, which are richly clothed with ivy, and surrounded with some fine tall trees, are much admired by strangers.

CREICH parish, situate four miles west from Cupar, is about three miles in length, and two in breadth. Its surface is undulating, and the soil sandy and thin; but agriculture is making rapid improvement. On a little eminence near the church, are the vestiges of a Roman camp, and at a short distance therefrom are the remains of a castle which formerly belonged to Cardinal Beatou. The parish was the birthplace of the Rev. John Sage, the first of the post-revolution bishops in the Scottish episcopal communion, and the author of that very remarkable production, the 'Fundamental Charter of Presbytery.'

PITTENWEEM AND ST. MONANCE.

PITTENWEEM is a royal burgh and sea-port, in the parish of its name; 24 miles N.N.E. from Edinburgh, 21 from Kirkcaldy, 5 S.S.W. from Crail, 10 S. from St. Andrews, and three and a half miles from Kilconquhar (the last named the nearest railway station); situated on the coast of the Frith of Forth, one mile from Wester Anstruther, and occupying rather an elevated site of ground above the harbour. It consists of an irregular main street, with a few bye thoroughfares, the houses generally bearing an ancient aspect. The dwellings around the harbour are of a respectable appearance; and over this part of the town stand the remains of the priory of Pittenweem, the date of which is not with certainty known: exclusive of some fragments of the religious edifice, there is a quadrangular range of curious antique buildings entire, said to have been the residence of the prior, and other superior officers of the establishment. These remains exhibit a fine specimen of the domestic ecclesiastical architecture of the ages anterior to the Reformation. Adjacent to the monastic ruins stands the parish church, an old edifice with a turretted spire. Pittenweem was constituted a royal burgh by James V., in 1537; it is governed by one provost, two baillies, a treasurer, and eight councillors; and joins with Cupar, St. Andrews, the Anstruthers, Crail, and Kilrenny, in sending one member to parliament. Between the period of Pittenweem being erected into a royal burgh and 1639, it appeared that it was a place of considerable note and trade; but, from the latter period to the year 1645, it suffered severely—no fewer than thirteen sail of large vessels belonging to this port having been either taken by the enemy or wrecked. It is now a fishing station of some importance; and fish-curing is carried on rather extensively, in addition to which the trade in grain is of some consequence. The places of worship are the Parish Church, and Episcopalian and United Presbyterian chapels; it contains also a parish and burgh school. It was at Pittenweem that the robbery was committed upon the collector of the excise by Wilson and Robertson, which led to the outrages of the Porteous mob and the consequent catastrophe; the house in which this transaction took place is still standing, on the north side of the street, north of the church.

The village or small town of St. MONANCE (or St. Monans) is one mile and a half from Pittenweem, on the same coast as the latter place. There is a small harbour attached to it, and at one period it was ranked amongst the most considerable fishing stations on the coast of Fife, and its inhabitants still pursue that avocation. St. Monance is a burgh of barony, governed by two baillies, a treasurer, a provost, and nine councillors. Lying away from the direct thoroughfare along the shore of the Forth, it is comparatively seldom visited, and is, therefore, only locally known. From the adjacent country its little church alone is visible, standing on the height above the houses, and so near to the sea as to be occasionally wet with its foam: it is a curious old Gothic edifice. Until the year 1646, the name of the parish was Abercrombie, or Inverny; its present name is derived from St. Monan, a martyr celebrated for his miracles in Fife and the adjacent Isle of May.

ST. ANDREWS

IS a city, a royal burgh, and sea-port,—and perhaps the most interesting town, as regards its ecclesiastical history, in North Britain; 39 miles N.N.E. of Edinburgh, 10 miles from Cupar, Anstruther and Crail, and six from Leuchars, a station on the Edinburgh, Perth and Dundee section of the North British Railway. It stands within the bay to which it gives name—wherein flow the river Eden, and a small stream called the Kinley. Its history is mingled with the civil and ecclesiastical annals of Scotland, especially the latter; but the narrow space within which the proprietor of this work is confined, in the descriptive notice of towns, denies to him the gratifying task of performing that ample justice to these subjects which their importance demands, and which have been so ably and so elaborately treated by the authors of the 'Gazetteer of Scotland.'

The city of St. Andrews in 1410 first saw the establishment of its university, which was the earliest of the kind in Scotland—it originated with Bishop Wardlaw, a magnificent and liberal minded prelate; in 1411 it was endowed by a charter. The college of St. Salvator was erected by Bishop Kennedy in 1456, that of St. Leonard in 1512, and that of St. Mary, or the divinity college, in 1537; in 1747 the institutions of St. Salvator and St. Leonard were united, by parliamentary statute. The university library contains upwards of sixty-three thousand volumes. The united college has a chancellor, a rector, and principal, with professors of Greek, logic, natural philosophy, moral philosophy, humanity, civil history, mathematics, and natural history. The college of St. Mary's is an institution of less consequence; it consists of a principal, and professors of divinity, church history, and oriental languages

The site of the Madras college is on the south side of the South-street immediately behind and comprehending within it part of that fine old ruin the Black Friars, which will thus be associated with an improved system of education for centuries to come—uniting, tastefully and appropriately, something of the splendour of the departed with much of the elegance and usefulness of present times. This noble institution, which was endowed by the late Dr. Bell, the distinguished founder of several similar establishments, both in this and in other towns of Scotland, cannot fail to secure to his memory, for ages to come, that veneration and esteem to which, as a benefactor of his race, he is so well entitled. The foundation was stone laid on the 9th April, 1832.

The town originally consisted of four streets; Swallow-street (which has for centuries disappeared) towards the sea; North-street, in which a number of elegant edifices are now erected, together with the buildings of the united college, partly old and partly new; Market-street, which runs through the middle of the town: South-street, which is spacious and well paved, terminates towards the east in a beautiful view of the ruins of the cathedral, and towards the west is a fine arched entrance, being the old city gate. The streets all concentrate towards the old cathedral, and the still more ancient tower of Regulus, or, as it is more commonly called, 'St. Rule.' In this quarter still stands a great part of the magnificent wall reared by Prior John Hepburn in 1516; it runs along the south side of the town, and contains fourteen round and square towers, each having a niche on the outside for a saint; and appears one of the most interesting relics in the place. From the top of St. Regulus' tower there is a beautiful view of the Bell rock, the bay, the city, and the surrounding country. The ruins, rapidly decreasing, of the once formidable castle, the scene of Cardinal Beaton's cruelty to others and of his own assassination, lie towards the north-east, and jut out into the sea. On the shore is a small eminence called the Witch hill, the place where those convicted of witchcraft suffered. Near this spot is a monument raised in 1842 to the memory of the martyrs—Wishart, Mill and others; it is in the form of an obelisk, and is forty-five feet in height.

As before stated, St. Andrews is a royal burgh, by virtue of a charter conferred by David I., which was confirmed by Malcolm II., the unfortunate monarch who was slain at Glammis castle in 1034: the charter, together with the silver keys of the city, and the axe which was used for the decapitation of Sir Robert Spottiswoode and some other loyalists are still to be seen in the town house. The city is governed by a provost, a dean of guild, and four baillies, with a treasurer. The burgh unites with Cupar, the Anstruthers, Kilrenny, Pittenweem, and Crail, in sending one member to the imperial parliament. St. Andrews enjoyed at one period an extensive foreign trade, and so lately as the reign of Charles I., it owned from thirty to forty trading vessels. At present the chief trade is in coal. The harbour is small: the water is seven feet at ordinary tides, and fourteen at spring. A branch line of railway from the Edinburgh, Perth and Dundee section of the North British Railway, at a point near Milton, in the parish of Leuchars, was opened some years ago, under the title of St. Andrews Railway Company. The length of the line is five miles. Four banking establishments are in operation here, namely—branches respectively of the 'Commercial Bank of Scotland,' of the 'Clydesdale Banking Company,' of the 'Royal Bank of Scotland,' and of the 'Bank of Scotland.' There are three principal inns—these are the Royal Hotel, in South-street, the Star and the Cross Keys in Market-street.

Nearly opposite St. Mary's college, on the north side of the street, stands the town church, erected in the twelfth century; it is in good preservation and repair, and is crowded with seats and galleries. Within the door, and on the right side is the superb monument of Archbishop Sharp, erected by his son in 1769: it it composed of white marble; the figure of the prelate is represented in the attitude of kneeling, and below is exhibited, in relief, the assassination of this ecclesiastical dignitary. It was thoroughly repaired in 1850, at an expense of upwards of £100. Besides the two Parish Churches, an additional one has been erected, there are also a Free Church, and Episcopal, United Presbyterian, Baptist, and Independent Chapels. A golfing society was instituted here in 1754; it has always been well sustained by its respective members, who number between three and four hundred; they hold two great meetings annually. St. Andrews, whether as regards its early importance in the history of Scotland, with which it is so intimately associated—its numerous relics of antiquity which everywhere arrest the eye—its venerable religious edifices, and its seminaries of learning—must be admitted to be a place possessing undying excellence to the mind of the antiquary, and replete with interest to the well-informed historian, the contemplative tourist, and the casual visitor. The market is held on Monday; and the fairs on the second Monday in April, the second Tuesday in August (old style), and the first Monday after the 10th of November.

STRATHMIGLO AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

STRATHMIGLO is a parish and small town—the latter nearly two miles from Auchtermuchty, eight from Kinross, and a station on the Fife and Kinross branch of the North British Railway, which runs close by the town, distant about five miles from Ladybank junction on the Edinburgh, Perth and Dundee branch, situated in a pleasant plain, on the north bank of the Miglo or Eden; and consists chiefly of two streets, with several lanes diverging from them. The town house stands about the centre of the principal street; it has a square steeple, at the top of which is a balcony surrounded by balustrades, the whole being surmounted by a spire nearly eighty feet high; from the front of the steeple projects a stone pillar, which formerly served as a sundial, now much defaced; above this are the arms of the house of Burleigh. By charter in 1600, the detached portions or feus were erected into a burgh of barony, and this grant was confirmed by James VI., in 1605, but the nomination of bailies and admittance of burgesses was vested in the person of the superior. Within the last seventy years a village has been built on the opposite side of the Miglo, called the FEUS OF WESTER-CASH. Between the old town and this new village is a beautiful square and level meadow, called Town-green, intersected by the Miglo, and belonging to the burgh. The manufacturing of linen is carried on to a considerable extent, and there is an extensive bleach works. The places of worship are a church of the Establishment, a Free Church, an United Presbyterian and Reformed Presbyterian Churches. The first mentioned is a plain building, standing at the entrance of the town. A fair is held at Strathmiglo on the last Friday in June.

POST OFFICE, STRATHMIGLO, Janet Troup, Post Mistress.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Ladybank) at nine morning, and at seven evening; and are despatched thereto at seven morning, and at ten minutes past four afternoon.

The nearest Money Order Office is at AUCHTERMUCHTY.

TORRYBURN WITH LOWER TORRY,

CARNOCK, OAKLEY, CAIRNEYHILL, AND SALINE.

TORRYBURN is a parish and village—the latter 17 miles S. W. from Kirkcaldy, 6 E. from Kincardine, 4½ W. from Dunfermline, and 2 E. from Culross; seated on Crombie point, a promontory on the Firth, and two miles and a half from the Oakley station, on the North British Railway. The situation of the village is pleasant and salubrious, and the inhabitants, who are remarkable for their peaceable disposition and industrious habits, are chiefly employed in weaving, and some of the females are engaged in embroidering sewed muslins. From the rocky state of the shore it has been found impossible to form a harbour here; but a pier has been erected at Crombie point, where passengers and goods are landed, and at which steamboats touch in going to Granton, Alloa, and Stirling. The parish lies at the south-west corner of the county, and extends along the shore of the Frith of Forth, between the parish of Dunfermline on the east, and that of Culross on the west, and measures from four to five miles in length, by about two in breadth. The parish, which is formed by the union of the baronies of Torry and Combie, derives its name from the Gaelic word Torry, signifying the 'King's Height,' and burn, the Scottish term for rivulet. Within the boundary of the parish and adjacent to Torryburn village is that of LOWER TORRY, which for trade or otherwise demands no particular notice. The places of worship are the Established and Free Churches, and a Parochial school. A fair is held at Torryburn on the second Wednesday in July. Population of the parish in 1861, 1215.

CARNOCK parish lies to the north of Torryburn—the village being situated 4 miles W. from Dunfermline; there is no business of consequence carried on here, but the parish contains coal in abundance. A church of the Establishment, and a Free Church, are the places of worship.

OAKLEY and CAIRNEYHILL are two villages in the parish of Carnock—the first named, which is about a mile from Carnock village, has sprung into existence since the year 1846, owing to the establishment of the 'Forth Iron Works.' The ore and fuel are raised at the works, and seven furnaces are continually in operation in smelting; and two engines employed, of the power respectively of two hundred horses. Schools have been opened by the proprietors for the children of their workpeople. The railway before mentioned passes close to the works. CAIRNEYHILL village is situated on the road between Alloa and Dunfermline, 3 miles west from the latter town; and the majority of the inhabitants are employed by the manufacturers of that place. The places of worship are the Established and Free Churches at Carnock, and a United Presbyterian Chapel at Cairneyhill.

SALINE is a parish and village, the latter two miles west from Oakley, and six from Dunfermline; the parish, which extends to the borders of Perth and Clackmannanshires, is about five miles in length and four in breadth. The principal pursuit of the inhabitants is agriculture. The places of worship are an Established Church and a Free Church, both situated in the village; and there is a Parochial and a Subscription school.

WEMYSS (East & West), BUCKHAVEN & METHIL.

East Wemyss, in the parish of its name, is five miles from Kirkcaldy, and four from Dysart; situated on the Frith of Forth, and consists principally of a single street. In this village the manufacture of linen fabrics is carried on extensively, both by hand and power, a new factory having just been built by the Messrs. G. and J. Johnston, containing between two and three hundred power looms; a brewery and a malting-house are the other branches. Free and Established Churches are in the village; also Parochial and Free Church schools.

About one mile westward is the village of West Wemyss, a burgh of barony, having a harbour at its western extremity, and several vessels belonging to it employed in the exportation of coal, which is wrought close to the harbour. A short way east of the village, on the brink or face of an eminence, and surrounded on the land side by beautiful plantations and pleasure grounds, is Wemyss Castle, the seat of Randolph Gordon Erskine Wemyss, Esq.; and within the parish is the ancient castle of Macduff, now a ruin. This massive structure crowns the height above the shore, commanding a most extensive view seaward; it has the reputation of being one of the castles of the Macduffs, Earls of Fife. Near the castle are several extensive excavations at the base of the bank, partly natural and partly artificial—one of these caves is called the 'King's Cave.' A chapel of Ease is the only place of worship.

Buckhaven is a village one mile east from Wemyss: here a harbour has been constructed for the accommodation of boats engaged in the fishing station, which is considerable on this coast, at an expense of £16,000. There is here the extensive flax-spinning mill and net and twine manufactory belonging to the Messrs. John Ireland and Sons, giving employment to a number of the inhabitants. Coal is also extensively worked in the neighbourhood; and at the village of Methil, a little further east, a company is engaged in the manufacture of paraffin oil; both are noted for their brisk pursuit of the fishing trade and fish curing. A fair is held at Wemyss on the second Wednesday in September.

FORFARSHIRE,

OR ANGUS.—This county is bounded on the east by the German Ocean, on the west by Perthshire, on the north by the counties of Aberdeen and Kincardine, the latter lying also on its north-eastern verge; on the south, the Frith of Tay is its boundary, as likewise is Perthshire for a short distance: its extent from north to south is about thirty-seven miles, and from east to west nearly forty. The figure of this county is, perhaps, the most uniform of any in Scotland; and but for an indentation on its western side, caused by the intrusion of a part of Perthshire, it would describe almost a perfect square. The contents of its area has been variously estimated; it is stated to contain 889 square miles, or 568,750 statute acres; of these there are about three hundred thousand cultivated, and two hundred and sixty thousand uncultivated; the portion occupied by lakes is inconsiderable.

EARLY HISTORY.—The district of ANGUS (now Forfarshire), with the contiguous county of Kincardine on the north, anciently formed the country of the Horesti, and a portion of the Pictish kingdom. On the dissolution of that government by Kenneth II. about the end of the ninth century, he is said to have divided it between his two brothers, Angus and Mearns, from whom the two counties derived their appellation. The district gave the title of Earl to two different families: on the extinction of the first, the earldom was conferred on a relation of King David Bruce; and in 1477 it merged in the family of the Douglasses: it has since devolved on the Duke of Hamilton. There are a number of old ruinous castles in this county, most of which have fallen to decay, in consequence of the baronies on which they stand having passed into the hands of the proprietors of other estates.

SOIL, SURFACE, AND PRODUCE.—The great level valley of Strathmore runs through the centre of the county from east to west; and the lines of hills which flank this extensive and fine tract of country, with the Grampians on the north, and some minor ranges on the south, may be said to form this district into a series of continuous ridges, generally pursuing a direction from west to east, interrupted occasionally by the different rivers and streams coursing to the sea. The eminences of greatest altitude in this shire are—Hill of Dundee, 525; Dunnichen Hill, 720; Belmont, 759; Sidlaw, 1,406; Craigowl, 1,600; Oathlaw, one of the Grampians, 2,264; and Mount-Battock, 3,465 feet above the level of the sea. The portion of the Grampian mountains in this shire is diversified by many beautiful valleys; and from the summit of these elevations to the ocean on the east, and the Tay on the south, the surface of the land may be considered an inclined plain. From the ærial region of the highest Grampian an extensive and well-varied prospect is presented, not only of almost the whole country adjoining the Tay, and of the ocean, but of the eastern part of the peninsula of Fife, the coast of East Lothian, and the heights of Lammermoor. The capabilities of Forfarshire for agriculture continued for centuries in that dormant state which characterised most other parts of Scotland; but it cannot escape observation, at the present day, that this district is completely emancipated from the reproach of inattention to husbandry; that it now exhibits a lively spirit and practically enlightened system of farming, and consequently a just appreciation of the advantages of this most useful of all sciences. Within the last seventy years, the farmers of this county have kept at least equal pace, in the improvements adopted, with those of similarly situated divisions of the country; and the wealth of Forfarshire has been steadily increasing both from its agricultural and its manufacturing products. The general drainage of the land has been proceeded in to a great and beneficial extent; and several lochs, particularly that of Rescobie, have been drawn off, for the purpose of obtaining shell-marl, which has long been in high repute with the agriculturists in their respective neighbourhoods; the introduction of bone manure has been followed by the most profitable results. The sowing of permanent pasture grasses and turnips is persevered in to a broad and lucrative amount; and the quality of ground appropriated to tillage is annually augmenting. The improvement of live stock has been in proportional advance with that of cultivation, and has been materially facilitated by the zealous co-operation of the various agricultural societies. In traversing the lower parts of the shire, beautiful enclosures and plantations meet the eye in every parish; and by the formation of excellent roads, in all directions, a pleasing inducement is now held for travelling through this progressively prospering county. The planting of waste lands in this county seems to have made very little progress till about the middle of the last century, and when, at length, this sure source of future profit suggested itself, Scotch firs were the only sort of trees planted in such situations. More recent planters introduced the larch, as a more valuable species of timber, and adapted, as they thought, to every variety of soil and situation, but experience has now exploded this latter notion; for, it has been profitably proved that, by the operation of draining, the moors and waste lands produce excellent oak and beech, of which a number of proprietors have planted extensively. From the mouth of the Tay to near the Westhaven, the coast is sandy—having, from thence eastward, many sunken rocks. Within a mile to the east of Arbroath the shore becomes bold and rocky, presenting dreadful precipices to the sea, perforated with caverns by the incessant and insidious workings of the waves: the 'Redhead,' a promontory upwards of two hundred feet in perpendicular height, is the most striking feature of this rocky front; it forms the south point of Lunan Bay, and exposes a beautiful beach to the ocean for nearly three miles. The fisheries of Forfarshire are of great importance; those of the North and South Esk, and the coast of the county, are at the present time very valuable; and the mode of packing salmon in boxes of ice, for the London market, is a practice which has proved of peculiar advantage to those connected with that branch of the fishery.

MANUFACTURES AND MINERALS.—The manufactures of Forfar are of very high consequence; and as Fifeshire is celebrated for the production of the finer linen fabrics, so is this county noted for the manufacture of the coarser hempen goods, wrought up from foreign materials: the spinning of yarn in large mills is carried on to a prodigious extent. Dundee, Arbroath, and Montrose, are its principal trading ports: the two first named enjoy pre-eminence in the making of sailcloths, osnaburghs, sackings, dowlases, and other linen textures; Brechin participates largely with other places in the preparation of flax; and the towns of Forfar, Montrose, and Kerriemuir, are seats of material manufacturing importance. Exclusive of these particular stations, the inhabitants of all the little towns and villages are industriously employed in weaving the already prepared materials into cloth and in the process of bleaching. This county is not distinguished for its mineral treasures. Of limestone, which is found in various parts, there are immense tracts in the Grampians; but, from the expense of conveying coal to burn it, this natural product, so valuable under other circumstances, is not wrought to any extent, except in the neighbourhood of Montrose, at Buddin (on the north side of Lunan Bay), and in the vicinity of Brechin. Freestone is plentiful in almost every parish; the colour is various, but in no instance so white and beautiful as the stone of Fife or Mid-Lothian. The Arbroath paving-stone is well known, and has a ready sale in London and Ediburgh. Lead has been found in several places, and was at one time wrought to a limited amount in the parish of Lochlee. But, unfortunately for its local interests this county is destitute of coal—at least no vestige of this invaluable fossil has yet been discovered; the whole district is, therefore, dependant on the Fife and Newcastle collieries for this essential article of domestic comfort and manufacturing facility.

Rivers, Lochs, and Railways.—The principal rivers are the North and South Esk, which rise near each other on the northern confines of the county; the former originates from Loch Lee, which is filled by the water of the Lee, after being joined by the Unich, which latter forms several beautiful cascades. The tributaries of the North Esk are the Luther, the Cruick, the West Water, the Tarf, and the Mark; enriched with these streams, it falls into the sea three miles from Montrose. The South Esk passes through the centre of the county, receiving in its progress the contributory waters of the Noran, the Lemno, the Carity, and the Prosen; and enters the ocean at Montrose. The third river in point of size is the Isla, which rises near the sources of the Esks: it receives, near Meigle, the Dean—the Carleet, a little above Glammis—and the romantic burn of Glammis, near the castle; and, turning westward into Perthshire, it joins the Tay at Kinclaven. There are also two lesser rivers, the Dighty and the Lunan: the former proceeds from some small lakes in the parish of Lundie, and falls into the mouth of the Tay, east from Broughty-ferry; the latter conveys the water of the lakes of Rescobie and Balgives to the sea, at Lunan bay: the Lunan is famous for its eels, and the other rivers abound with different variations of trout and salmon. In the enumeration of rivers yielding wealth to this county, the Tay must not be omitted (though this district cannot claim its origin), being by far the most valuable from its adaptation to the purposes of commerce: it has its source in the western extremity of Perthshire, and after winding through delightful scenery, the beauties of which are heightened by its sparkling waters, it becomes an estuary or firth; and about eight miles below Dundee it expands into the bay of St. Andrews, and loses its distinction in the wide reservoir of the German Ocean. The lakes of most consequence are Loch Lee, in the parish of its name; Loch Brandy, in the parish of Clova; the Loch of Forfar, near that town; the Lochs of Roscobie, of Lundie, and Lentrathen, in the respective parishes so denominated; and of Belgives, in the parish of Aberlemno. None of these are of great magnitude—indeed few, if any, are more than a mile in extent; and there is nothing peculiar in their qualities or situations. Forfarshire is included in an extensive line of railway communication—and it may be said that every town of note in the shire is visited by a main line or branch from it.

Divisions, &c.—Forfarshire comprises fifty-two complete parishes, and four parts of parishes; in which are five royal and parliamentary burghs, namely, Dundee, Arbroath, Montrose, Brechin, and Forfar: the four last-named burghs, with Inverbervie (in Kincardineshire), unite in sending one member to the senate; the town of Dundee also returns one, and the county at large another.

ARBROATH,

WITH THE PARISHES AND VILLAGES OF ST. VIGEANS, ARBIRLOT, MARYWELL, AUCHMITHIE, COLLISTON OR GOWAN BANK.

FORMERLY called Aberbrothock, is a royal burgh, a sea-port and the seat of a presbytery; 60 miles N.N.E. from Edinburgh, 18 N.E. from Dundee, 15 S.E. from Forfar, and 12 S. from Montrose; situated on a small plain, on the coast of the German ocean, and surrounded on the north, west, and east by eminences in an amphitheatric form. This is a town of early origin, owing its rise to an important monastic institution, founded here by William the Lion, about the year 1178: the remains of this edifice are strikingly picturesque, and consists of ruinous towers of the most solid construction, columns overthrown and broken in pieces, Gothic windows, cloisters, staircases, &c., all exhibiting the ravages of time. The church of this abbey has been a most magnificent fabric; a part of the abbot's lodgings, which stands a little distance from the church, still remains. The monks first came from Kelso, and Reginaldus (a monk of Tyron), was its first abbot. It was very extensively endowed with lands and other gifts by Kings William I., Alexander II., and Robert I., and their nobility. It possessed four parishes in Forfarshire, and tracts of land equally large in the neighbouring counties, with privileges of regality, &c. The abbots of this foundation had privileges which others did not enjoy—they were exempted from assisting at the yearly synods, and had the distinction of making use of, and wearing the pontifical ornaments. King John conferred on the inhabitants of the place the same privileges that his subjects enjoyed throughout all England, except in his city of London. The town consists of one main street, nearly a mile in length, running north and south from the sea, and several parallel ones that intersect others at right angles. Northward and westward of the town, and locally in the parish of Saint Vigeans, there are several elegant streets, with churches, flax mills, and numerous factories. In 1812 a town-house was erected, and in 1855, at the rear of it in an open space, a very handsome and commodious market house was built by the magistrates and town-council, at an outlay of about £7,000: these, together with several other buildings, numerous new churches and places of worship, add much to the appearance of the town; the streets have also been greatly improved, and are daily improving, by superior paving and sewerage, and by the addition of elegantly fitted and well supplied shops. At the commencement of the eighteenth century Arbroath had no other trade than that of fishing, nor did it claim any notice as a place of manufacture. Nothing was then directly imported, except a small cargo of wood occasionally from Norway; flax, iron, and other useful commodities were purchased from the merchants of Dundee and Montrose. About the year 1738, the manufacture of coarse linens was introduced by the following accident:—a weaver in the town having a small quantity of flax, unfit for the kind of cloth then usually brought to market, made it into a web, and offered it to another of the inhabitants at a price by which he was willing to be a loser; the purchaser, who had previously been in Germany, remarked a similarity between this piece of cloth and the manufacture of Osnaburgh, and prevailed upon the weaver to make trial of other webs of the same texture; the experiment succeeded—a company was established, and other parts of the county soon availed themselves of the discovery. The staple of Arbroath, at the present day, is the manufacture of sail cloth, canvas, and other coarse linens; the preparation and spinning of the yarns for these productions of the loom is carried on extensively, and chiefly by steam power, by many firms, and individuals of the first respectability. In consequence of the financial pressure, which swept over Europe and America in the latter end of 1857 and in the early part of the following year, the manufacturing interest in this town was severely crippled; and several extensive failures took place in it, paralizing its trade to an incredible extent; but this evil is happily disappearing fast, and indications of increasing prosperity are being steadily developed. The trade and manufactures of the town have greatly increased since the commencement of the late civil war in America, and the place never was in a more prosperous condition than at the present time, 1866. In addition to these important branches, there are various other concerns of magnitude, including ironfoundries, a ship-building yard (a patent slip), extensive tanneries, roperies, several breweries, &c.; and a considerable trade exists in the exportation of grain. The number of vessels belonging to the port in 1850 was 122, with an aggregate tonnage of 13,509. In 1854 the number of vessels was 81, tonnage 11,856. In 1858 the number was 103, with a burthen of 13,919 tons. In 1864 the number of vessels was 82, tonnage 12,300. The number and tonnage of vessels bear no adequate proportion to the real trade of the town, owing to the shallowness of the water, which prevents large vessels from entering the harbour, although, in 1841, it was much enlarged at a cost of £50,000, which sum was chiefly raised amongst its merchants and spirited inhabitants. The Customs revenue of the port, for the year ending 1863, was £13,010. It is provided with a neat signal tower for communication with the Bell (or Inch Cape) Rock, rising from the German Ocean, about twelve miles in a south-eastern direction from Arbroath. Of this rock, and the tradition attached to it, a most entertaining account will be found in Chambers's 'Gazetteer.' On 'the rock' is a lighthouse, the first stone of which was laid in July, 1808, and the beacon first gleamed over the deep on the 1st February, 1811. At the lighthouse there are a principal light-keeper and three assistants; each, in his turn, goes on shore at the end of every six weeks, with liberty to remain a fortnight. In the town are buildings erected, where each keeper has apartments for the accommodation of his family; and connected with the establishment is a very neat signal tower situated near the harbour; this structure, about eighty feet in height, is furnished with an excellent telescope; and signals are arranged with the persons at the lighthouse on the rock, by the light-keeper on shore, daily, at nine morning, weather permitting. There is an attending vessel from Arbroath engaged to and fro in the summer time in charge of a master, but in winter it is by steamer from Granton. The monetary transactions of the town are facilitated by five banking establishments—branches respectively of the 'British Linen Company,' the 'Clydesdale Banking Company,' the 'Commercial Bank of Scotland,' the 'Royal Bank,' and the 'Bank of Scotland,' all accommodated in handsome new buildings; there is a bank for savings, well sustained by many provident depositors. There are numerous inns, and several news-rooms and libraries. A large public hall, with subsidiary rooms, &c., in the High-street, is (1866) in course of erection by an incorporated company; and the parishes of Arbroath and St. Vigeans are also erecting a handsome combination poorhouse in an elevated and healthy suburb of the town. Arbroath is a very ancient burgh of regality, being founded at the same time with the abbey. It was then made a free burgh, and ultimately a proper burgh royal by crown charter in 1599. It is governed by a provost, three bailies, a dean of guild, treasurer, and thirteen town councillors, and it has seven incorporated trades, viz., hammermen, glovers, shoemakers, weavers, tailors, wrights, and bakers, besides two incorporations of seamen, and brewers, and the Guildry Incorporation. It unites with Forfar, Montrose, Brechin, and Inverbervie, in sending one member to the imperial parliament: W. E. Baxter, Esq., Ashcliff, Dundee, is the present member. Number of registered electors in 1865-6, 691. A burgh or bailie court, a justice of peace court, and a police court, are held weekly, and a sheriff's court every alternate month, for the recovery of debts not exceeding £12. The annual valuation of the parliamentary burgh amounts to £46,190 17s. 8d. There are no fewer than eighteen places of worship in the town and suburbs of Arbroath; their names, denominations, and respective sites, with the ministers officiating, are given at a subsequent page. An elegant steeple, one hundred and fifty feet in height, was, a few years since, added to the parish church. There are several excellent public educational establishments in Arbroath, including the 'Arbroath High School,' a burgh school, several charity schools, and some private academies, for either sex, of great respectability. The local charities of the town include the infirmary and dispensary, a neat handsome stone building situated on the high common, and two destitute sick societies; also four mortifications, viz., Carmichael's, founded 1738, out of which the widows of seven shipmasters get a division half-yearly; Colvills, founded 1812, out of which £60 annually is expended on the education of ten poor children; £10 to the Scotch Episcopal clergyman; £10 to the poor of Arbroath; the like sum to the poor of St. Vigeans, and the residue to twenty poor householders; Dove's, founded in 1841, for the education of 'native born boys' of poor parentage; and Mrs. Renny Strachan's, which amounts to £50 yearly, to be expended in purchasing coals and oatmeal for distribution at Christmas amongst the most necessitous poor. John Macdonald, Esq., is clerk to Carmichael's, Colvill's, and Mrs. Renny Strachan's, and James Keay, Esq., clerk to Dove's mortifications. The market is held on Saturday, and the fairs on the last Saturday in January, for general business and hiring servants; on the first Saturday after Whit-Sunday for hiring; July 18th (if it fall on a Saturday, if not, on the following Saturday), for general business and hiring; and the first Saturday after Martinmas for hiring.

St. Vigeans is a parish, extending 8½ miles from east to west, by 4½ in breadth, and contains the small villages of St. Vigeans, Marywell, Auchmithie, and Colliston or Gowan Bank, also a part of the town of Arbroath. The first-named contains the Parish church, situated about one mile from Arbroath, the others varying in distance from two to three and a half miles from the same town. The parish is bounded on the north and east by Inverkeillor: on the west by Arbroath, Arbirlot, and Carmyllie; and on the south by the German Ocean. Originally it included the parish of Arbroath, disjoined after the Reformation. It was itself formerly termed Aberbrothock, and now bears the name of a famous hermit who had his chapel and hermitage at the Grange of Conan in the 10th century, near to which was a baronial castle, named Gory or Gregory. The stream of the Brothock flows through the parish and passes through the town of Arbroath, entering the sea at its harbour.

Arbirlot parish is contiguous to that of St. Vigeans at Arbroath on the north, and bounded on the south-east by the German Ocean, extending for miles in length by three in breadth. The village is about three miles west of Arbroath, situated on the east bank of the Elliot stream, from whence the name is derived, which was formerly Aber-elliot. Along the sea coast the land is sandy; inland the soil is a rich loam, capable of producing various crops. About a quarter of a mile south-west of the village stands Kelly Castle, which originally belonged to the family of Auchterlony. Arbirlot contains a parish library, a savings' bank, and a Parochial and Free Church school. It also contains a Free Church and manse, which were erected several years ago, at a cost of about £1,300.

AUCHTERHOUSE,

LIFF AND BENVIE, FOWLIS-EASTER, LUNDIE, MAINS, STRATHMARTIN, AND TEALING.

THE parish of AUCHTERHOUSE lies in the south-west corner of the county, about 7 miles N.W. from Dundee (its post town), and on the south of the Sidlaw hills. The road from Dundee to Meigle (in Perthshire) passes through the parish, which comprises four thousand acres, chiefly of arable land.

LIFF and BENVIE is an united parish, the latter incorporated with the former in 1758. The district, which lies immediately west of Dundee, with a portion touching the Tay, is generally well cultivated, and beneath the surface freestone and slate abound. There are within the parishes the villages of LIFF, BENVIE, BULLIONFIELD, CAMPBERDOWN, and LOCHEE, and part of INVERGOWRIE. The Scottish central section of the Caledonian Railway runs through the parish. The greater part of the population of this parish is included in the west of Dundee.

LUNDIE parish lies in the western part of the county; the parish of Foulis-Easter, in Perthshire, was united to it in 1618. Conjunctly the district forms a well-cultivated and productive tract of country, embellished with plantations and irrigated by several small lakes, of which Lundie loch is one. The church of Foulis, which was founded by Sir Andrew Gray for a provost and some prebendaries, is still perfect entire, although it was built in the year 1143.

MAINS, formerly called Strathdighy, is a parish lying immediately north of that of Dundee (its post town), about four miles therefrom, and chiefly in the vale of the river Dighty, which intersects the parish into two nearly equal parts in its course to the Tay. From the banks of the stream the ground rises gently to the north and south; the soil is fertile and well cultivated, and the country has a most pleasant aspect. On the Dighty are several mills; and near the north bank of the river is the extensive bleachfield of Claverhouse—at no great distance from which was the seat of General Grahame, whose title of 'Claverhouse' (applied from this patrimonial estate) once sounded such alarm in Scotland. The Grahames of Fintry were one of the oldest families in this part of the country. Freestone and slate quarries supply some occupation in this parish. The small parish of STRATHMARTIN is now united to that of Mains. An asylum for the treatment of imbecile and idiot children was founded at Baldovan in 1853, by Lady Jane Ogilvy.

TEALING parish, situated five miles north from Dundee (its post town), lies on the south side of the Sidlaw chain; is about six miles in length, and about three in breadth, and is watered by the small river Fithie, a tributary stream to the Dighty. In this parish are found grey slate, moorstone, and freestone. John Glass, founder of the sect appropriately denominated 'Glassites,' was minister of Tealing anterior to his open separation from the church of Scotland.

Post Receiving Houses—At Auchterhouse, Lundie, Fowlis-Easter, Tealing and Mains, and Strathmartin.—Letters are received from, and are despatched to, Dundee from these offices.

Letters should be addressed near Dundee, which is also the nearest Money Order Office and Savings' Bank.

BRECHIN

AND THE PARISH OF FARNELL AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

BRECHIN is a royal burgh, the seat of a presbytery, and the capital of its parish; 70 miles north from Edinburgh, 27 N.N.E. from Dundee, 25 S.S.W. from Stonehaven, between 12 and 13 N.E. from Forfar, and 8 W. by N. from Montrose; situated at the side of a hill, the foot of which is washed by the South Esk, and on a branch line of the Scottish North-Eastern Railway, for which there is a station here. The town consists of one main street, with several smaller ones diverging; the principal is about a mile in length, extending from the north part to the picturesque bridge of two arches. Some of the streets, particularly about the Cross, are remarkably steep. Brechin more than once suffered by the incursions of invaders and the broils of civil war; it was burnt by the Danes in 1012, and in 1645 it was subjected to a similar calamity by the Marquis of Montrose; two years afterwards it was nearly depopulated by that dreadful scourge the plague. Formerly the town was walled; but the gates have been long removed, and in the present day it exhibits the appearance of a well-built thriving place. It has been greatly improved during the past two years, and it may now be said that Swan-street, when fully completed, will be the chief thoroughfare. Flax spinning and the manufacture of linens, and a paper mill, employ numerous hands. There are two manufactories for tobacco, and two distilleries on a large scale; malt is the basis of the spirit produce from the latter. Branches of the 'Royal Bank of Scotland,' 'British Linen Company's Bank,' the 'City of Glasgow Bank,' the 'Clydesdale Bank,' and the 'Union Bank of Scotland,' are established here; and there are also three Savings' Banks. There are excellent inns in the town. A newspaper, established in 1848, published on Tuesday morning, entitled the 'Brechin Advertiser,' is conducted with much talent. The antiquity of Brechin as a royal burgh is of remote date; it is governed by a provost, two bailies, a dean of guild, treasurer, hospital master, and seven councillors, who are also police commissioners. The burgh joins with Forfar, Montrose, Arbroath, and Inverbervie, in returning one member to parliament; the present is W. E. Baxter, Esq., Ashcliffe, Dundee. A burgh or bailie court is held on every alternate Wednesday, and oftener when necessary—the bailies are the judges. A justice of peace court is held on the first Wednesday in every month; and a sheriff court on the Third Tuesdays of January, March, May, July, September, and November; the two last-mentioned courts are for adjudicating small debt claims. In ancient times an Abbey of Culdees existed here; and in 1150, when Brechin was constituted an episcopal see by David I., it is supposed that the site of this establishment was that selected for the foundation of the cathedral. An interesting fragment remains of the ancient chapel of the Maison Dieu. The Cathedral of St. Ninian, which now forms the parish church, stands on the north verge of a precipitous ravine, which separates the burgh lands from those of Brechin Castle; it was originally a stately Gothic structure, but its architectural symmetry has been materially injured by the injudicious taste displayed in modern repairs; the length is one hundred and sixteen feet, and the breadth sixty-one; the steeple is a square erection, seventy feet in height, surmounted by a hexagonal spire of fifty feet. The cathedral of Brechin was one of the few places of worship in which the service of the liturgy was for some time performed without interruption after its promulgation in 1637. The bishop was a man of singularly strong and daring character, and ascended the pulpit with a pair of pistols under his gown, determined to carry the behests of royalty into execution at whatever risk. The other places of worship are two handsome Free Churches, three United Presbyterian, a chapel of Ease, and a Scotch Episcopal. Contiguous to the cathedral stands the tall slender tower of Brechin, which, like its prototype at Abernethy, and numerous others in Ireland, has puzzled so many antiquaries as to the object of its erection. It is an unadorned turret of freestone, eighty-five feet in height to the cornice, and fifteen feet more to the pinnacle of the modern spire on its top; it has several windows (four in particular, at the top, facing the cardinal points), but, like the tower of Abernethy, has no stairs within. The entrance to the tower is by a door near the ground, on the outside, which was built up, but has lately been re-opened, and the whole edifice repaired by the Commissioners of Woods and Forests, when new wooden ladders were erected. Numerous figures in an antique style of carving, and a rude representation of the crucifixion, are the surrounding ornaments of the door. The diameter of the tower at the bottom is sixteen feet. Formerly there were two small bells in it, which were removed to the large steeple where they now hang. Between the town and the river, and only separated from the former by the ravine before-mentioned, stands Brechin Castle, the ancient seat of the Maules of Panmure, now the property and residence of the Right Hon. the Earl of Dalhousie; it is built on a precipitous rock overhanging the stream, and was formerly a fortress, having sustained a siege of twenty days, in 1303, from the English army under Edward I., but Sir Thomas Maule, its proprietor, being killed, it surrendered. The south front, towards the river, consists of some remains of the original structure, with some more recent erections, including a handsome square tower; the west front is formed with regularity, in the style of the seventeenth century, with round towers at the angles. Brechin has the advantage of numerous educational seminaries, and these have stimulated even the humble elasses to the acquisiton of knowledge, which is ministered to them by means of several excellent public libraries, the volumes of which are in active demand. One of the chief architectural ornaments of the town is the elegant building containing the principal schools, and the mechanics' institution. The front is in the Tudor style, with castellated parapet, ornamented with pinnacles; a fine tower rises in the centre to the height of eighty or ninety feet, from the summit of which there is an enchanting prospect. This elegant structure was erected at the sole cost of the late Lord Panmure, who also presented to the institution numerous valuable paintings, which grace the fine hall of the mechanics' institution. His lordship's munificence granted also £1,000 to be invested at interest, which yields about £40 a year, and is appropriated to enriching the library with books and the support of courses of lectures; and the subscribers are entitled to the benefit of the whole, for a very small payment annually. This town has given birth to several individuals of genius and literary distinction, among whom may be enumerated—Maitland, the laborious historian of Edinburgh and London; Dr. Gillies, the historian of Greece; and James Tytler, an eccentric and unfortunate person, well known for his contributions to the first edition of the 'Encyclopædia Britannica.' Trinity Muir, one mile north of the town, besides being the site of several great fairs, is resorted to by cricket and golf players during the summer, and the spectators would enjoy both the games and the fine prospect much more if a few seats were provided for them. The market is held on Tuesday, and the fairs (held on Trinity Muir) the third Wednesday in April, the second Wednesday in June, the second Thursday in August, and the Tuesday before the last Wednesday in September. The great sheep, cattle, and horse fair (on Trinity Muir) commences on the second Wednesday in June, and continues for three days—this is one of the largest in Scotland. 'Croft' markets, for cattle, are held in the town, and horse markets, also, towards the end of February and beginning of March.

FARNELL, anciently written Fernell, is a parish, said to be of ancient origin. Fern, signifying a den, and nell a swan, from which it would appear that the name had been taken from a den near the church, which was the abode of swans. The parish is about three miles in length and two miles in breadth; bounded on the north by Brechin, 4 miles S.E. from that town, and 6½ miles S.W. from Montrose. Kinnaird Castle, the family seat of the Earl of South Esk, is an elegant and spacious modern building of a square form, with towers of various dimensions: it has a very imposing and princely appearance, with its beautiful grounds and other ornamental appendages, and is considered one of the most beautiful seats in this part of the country.

BROUGHTY-FERRY,

WITH THE PARISHES OF MONIFIETH, MURROES, AND THE HAMLET OF NEWBIGGING.

BROUGHTY-FERRY is a considerable modern village, seated on the Frith of Tay, about four miles east from Dundee, nearly opposite to Ferry-port-on-Craig, or Tayport, and on the Dundee and Arbroath Railway. The place takes its name from the old ruined castle of Broughty or Burgh-Tay ('the defence of the Tay'), situate at its eastern extremity, on a rocky eminence jutting into the water; the only remains of this castle are the fragments of a tower and some vestiges of the battlements. Broughty is divided into two districts, EAST FERRY and WEST FERRY—the former is in the parish of Monifieth; the latter in that of Dundee: it is regularly built, and has improved very considerably during the last few years, having become the place of residence of many of the principal bankers and merchants of Dundee, whose pleasant houses and cottages are thickly scattered on the hill side, and along Monifieth road, many large and good shops have lately been built, and branches of the Royal Bank of Scotland, and the City of Glasgow Bank, and a Penny Savings' Bank are established. Sixty years ago, the East Ferry comprised only a few fishermen's huts, built along the beach; the population is now considerable, while people from the North of Scotland, Perth, and other parts of the country visit here during the summer months to enjoy its pleasant scenery, pure air, and for the sake of its excellent bathing accommodation. There are no public works here, the inhabitans being chiefly engaged in fishing, except a few tradesmen, and those who are independent of manual labour. About half a mile to the north of Broughty-Ferry is Fort-hill, where were lately some remains of the fortifications erected by the English, in 1548, during the reign of Henry VIII, and regency of the Earl of Arran, when they ravaged Dundee and the surrounding country; in 1550 the works on this hill, being surrendered to an allied army of Scots, Germans, and French, under M. Des Thermes, were dismantled, and at the present day they present merely shattered relics, the plough having occasionally been driven over a part of the ground which they once covered. There are six places of worship, and several schools in the village. The East Free Church, built in 1865, is a very handsome Gothic structure.

The parish of MONIFIETH lies on the shore of the Frith of Tay, extending inland about four miles and a half from south to north, and the breadth from one and a half to three and a half miles; it is bounded on the south by the Frith of Tay, on the east by the parishes of Barry and Monikie, on the north by Monikie, and on the west by Murroes and Dundee. The name is understood to be derived from the Gaelic appellation of Monifuith, or the 'stag moss.' The village of Monifieth is situated about two miles east from Broughty-Ferry, on a brae with a southern exposure, at no great distance from the sea; it contains two manufactories of machines, and a flour mill. It has a Parish, and a Free Church. The Parish Church, though plain in appearance, is a conspicuous edifice, surrounded by a burying ground, containing a variety of finely carved antique tombstones, executed with a taste rarely seen in the cemetery of a humble village.

NEWBIGGING is a small hamlet, in the parish of Monikie, and about 7 miles north of Dundee (its post town), it contains an United Presbyterian Church, a very neat building, lately erected, also a school of the same denomination, and a public school.

MURROES parish is in the southern part of the county, three miles in length by two in breadth, bounded by Dundee and Mains on the south, and Monifieth on the east, Mains and Tealing on the west, Inverarity and Monikie on the north, lying on the road from Brechin to Dundee, its post town, from which latter it is about five miles distant. The greater part of the parish is arable, and it is now adorned with some plantations. Thre are also quarries producing quantities of pavement and other kinds of stone.

POST OFFICE, Gray Street, BROUGHTY-FERRY, Martha Barclay, Post Mistress.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Dundee) at half-past six morning, and one afternoon, and are despatched thereto at half-past nine morning, and half-past one and four afternoon, and nine night.

Money Order Office and Savings' Bank.

Post Office, MONIFIETH, David Barrie, Receiver.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Dundee) at five minutes before eight morning, and five minutes before two afternoon, and are despatched thereto at eleven morning, and ten minutes past past three afternoon.

The nearest Money Order Office is at BROUGHTY FERRY.

Post Office, Newbigging, MONIKIE, David Matthews, Receiver.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Dundee) at a quarter before nine morning, and are despatched thereto at two afternoon.

The nearest Money Order Office is at DUNDEE.

Letters for the Parish of MURROES are received from and are despatched to DUNDEE by runner daily.

—Letters for the above places should be addressed near DUNDEE.

CARNOUSTIE,

WITH THE PARISHES AND VILLAGES OF BARRY, MONIKIE, PANBRIDE, MUIRDRUM, NEWTON OF PANBRIDE, EAST AND WEST HAVENS.

CARNOUSTIE is a thriving village, post town, and station on the Scottish North Eastern Railway, in the parish of Barry. It is a pleasant sea bathing place, situated on the coast of the German Ocean, about ten miles E. from Dundee, and 7 S. by W. from Arbroath, and is much resorted to in the summer months by visitors from Dundee, and other parts of Scotland. On the extensive links or downs in the neighbourhood of the village is a battery, where the naval reserve have weekly exercise with heavy guns. The village is well supplied with gas, and an additional gasometer has recently been erected. There are several handsome villas in and near the village, and many respectable lodging houses; also the large linen manufactory of Messrs. Smieton and Sons, who employ upwards of 400 hands. The Taymouth Linen Works of Messrs. Fairweather, Brodie & Co, an extensive vitriol works belonging to Messrs. Tennant & Co., of Glasgow; a Savings' Bank, and a branch of the City of Glasgow Bank. The places of worship are an Established Church, a Free Church, and chapels for the United and Reformed Presbyterians.

BARRY or BARRIE is a parish, bounded on the north by Monikie, on the south by the same and Monifieth, on the west by Panbride, on the east by the German Ocean and the Frith of Tay; extending about three miles from east to west, and four miles from north to south. The village is situated 9 E. from Dundee, and not quite that distance S.W. from Arbroath, on the road from the latter town to Broughty. The southern half of the parish is generally sandy, and used principally for the grazing of sheep and cattle, the northern half contains many large farms, all of them in the highest state of cultivation. At BUDDONNESS, on the southern extremity of the parish are two lighthouses to guide vessels on their entrance into the Tay.

MONIKIE is a parish seven miles in length by five in breadth, bounded on the south by the parishes of Barry and Monifieth, nine miles north from Dundee, six miles N.W. from Broughty Ferry, and about five miles from Carnoustie (its post town), and contains the village of NEWBIGGING. The land is well cultivated, much of the produce being required for the Dundee market. Whinstone, freestone, sandstone and pavement stone abounds in the parish; it contains the Parish Church, Free Church, and a church at Newbigging for the United Presbyterians. About half a mile east of the Parish Church stands a monument of stone, on the Hill of Camestone, which was erected during the lifetime of the late Lord Panmure, by his tenantry as a testimonial for the many favours they had received at his hands.

PANBRIDE is a parish which joins Barry and Monikie on the west, Carmylie on the north, Arbirlot on the north east, and a detached part of St. Vigeans on the south east: it runs about four and a half miles inland from the German Ocean, in width it is about two miles. It contains the villages of MUIRDRUM and NEWTON OF PANBRIDE, the last may be considered as a continuation, east of Carnoustie, from which it is divided by the Lochty burn. A mile further to the east are the Panbride Bleach Works, belonging to Mr. J. F. Dickson; in the northern part stands the house of Panmure, with its extensive enclosures and plantations. The parish is watered by a streamlet that runs through a valley called Batties Den, over which is thrown a high bridge on the turnpike road from Dundee to Arbroath. The inhabitants are principally engaged in fishing and agricultural pursuits. The coast is flat and rocky, but has two open harbours at the fishing villages of EAST and WEST HAVENS, where small vessels discharge their cargoes in mild weather.

POST OFFICE, CARNOUSTIE, James Black, Post Master.—Letters from the South arrive at one morning, and twenty minutes before twelve forenoon, and are despatched at two afternoon.

Letters from the North arrive at twenty minutes before three afternoon, and are despatched at twenty minutes before one morning.

Money Order Office and Savings' Bank.

Post Office, MUIRDRUM, Thomas Smith, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Carnoustie) at twenty minutes before eight morning, and half-past four afternoon, and are despatched thereto at six morning, and one afternoon.

Post Office, MONIKIE, Alexander Sturrock, Receiver.—Letters all from parts arrive (from Carnoustie), at twenty minutes before ten morning, and are despatched thereto at twenty minutes before twelve morning.

Station, EAST HAVEN — James Scott, station master

DUNDEE,

WITH THE VILLAGES OF INVERGOWRIE, BULLIONFIELD AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

DUNDEE is an important royal burgh and seaport, ranging along the north bank of the Firth of Tay, about twelve miles from its mouth. The parish extends along the river about 6 miles, and about 5 miles in a northerly direction; bounded on the south by the Tay; on the north by the united parishes of Mains and Strathmartin; on the east by Murroes and Monifieth; and on the west by the united parishes of Liff and Benvie; it is 43 miles N. from Edinburgh, 66 S.S.W. from Aberdeen, 29 S.W. from Montrose, 23 E. by N. from Perth, 17 S.W. from Arbroath, and 14 S. from Forfar. The length of the parish from east to west is about 6 miles, its breadth varying from 1 to 4 miles. Several railway companies have their stations in the town, viz., the Caledonian, the Scottish North Eastern, and the North British. The Caledonian, connecting with Perth, Stirling, and the west, has its station at the west end of Dock-street; and that of the Scottish North-eastern connecting with Arbroath and the north, is situated at the east end of Dock-street. The North British has running powers over both lines, for certain distances; and has a joint right in part of the station of the Scottish North Eastern Company on the east, which is used for carrying on its traffic by the coast line to Edinburgh and the south. The situation of this busy port is very beautiful: the noble river here forms a bay two miles broad, from the margin of which the town spreads itself over a gradual acclivity, ascending towards the base of a lofty and sheltering eminence, called 'Dundee Law;' the picturesqe coast of Fifeshire forms the southern border of the Tay, and a steam ferry-boat effects an hourly communication between the opposite shores of the estuary. Early accounts of Dundee do not satisfy the inquirer as to the origin either of its name or its existence; tradition ascribes the latter to a vow of David Earl of Huntingdon, in the latter part of the twelfth century, which caused a church to be erected on the site occupied by the present edifice, in the Nethergate, to testify his gratitude for a signal deliverance from the perils of the sea; though there are accounts to show that even before this there was a hamlet of considerable size on the site. Be this as it may, the town was of sufficient consequence during the gross usurpation of Edward I., to be made the station of an English garrison; and in the course of the fierce struggle for the Scottish crown between that prince (nominally on behalf of Baliol) and Robert Bruce, Dundee was taken and retaken twice; in these operations the patriot Wallace took a conspicuous part; here impelled to retaliate the atrocities of Edward's officers, he put to death the son of the English governor. This celebrated patriot received his education at the Grammar School of Dundee. On killing the governor's son, he had to fly, and we do not hear of him again making the town his residence. The castle of Dundee becoming so formidable an annoyance when in possession of an enemy, an occurrence but too frequent, Bruce deemed it expedient to demolish it, and not a vestige of it now remains; its site was that of the present Castle-street. The town was destroyed in the reign of Richard II. of England, and it suffered a similar infliction when Edward VI. sat upon the English throne; but on each occasion it arose from its ashes, and resumed its rank among the principal Scottish towns—several times being pledged as a security for ransoms, and for the fulfilment of treaties. It was also a place of royal residence, there being a palace to the south of the Nethergate, and a mint at the foot of Overgate, the site of which is still pointed out by the name of "Mint Close," given to an entry in that quarter. The oldest charter Dundee, can boast of is one granted by Robert Bruce, recognising the burghal privileges conferred by William the Lion, brother to the Earl of Huntingdon mentioned above. In this place the reformed religion found some of its earliest and warmest defenders; so zealous was the town in its cause, as to be honoured with the appellation of 'the second Geneva;' in 1544 the prophetic victim of Cardinal Beaton's ferocity, George Wishart, preached here; and in 1559 the provost, attended by a multitude of his townsmen, hastened to Edinburgh to assist in the siege of Leith, then in the possession of the French. In April, 1645, the notorious Duke of Montrose took Dundee by assault; it is affirmed that, during the pillage and slaughter which ensued, Montrose ascended to the top of the 'Law,' in order that his revenge might be satiated by witnessing the carnage that was being perpetrated below. The last calamity that befel this town was its capture and plunder by General Monk, soon after the battle of Worcester had placed Scotland within the gripe of the victorious Cromwell; but, as this dismal catastrophe is noticed hereafter, we shall close this brief narrative with the enumeration of a few eminent names that have conferred honour on Dundee, from its being the place either of their birth or education:—Sir William Wallace, the uncompromising patriot and heroic soldier; John Blair; Goldman and Ferguson, the poets; Sir George Mackenzie, the scholar and lawyer; and, in more recent days, Drs. Small, Willison, Davidson, and Smith, and Professor Lawson (botanist), each distinguished for literary talent and profound learning—and the naval victor, Admiral Duncan.

COMMERCE AND MANUFACTURES.—The stranger, approaching Dundee by the Newport Ferry, is soon made aware of its commercial character by its fine harbour and its extensive docks, crowded with shipping, and its noble quays; on the other hand, the volumes of smoke, issuing from a forest of towering chimnies, render it equally apparent that Dundee is likewise a great manufacturing town. The rapid increase, both of its productions and shipping, is indeed amazing. When the memorable sacking of Dundee was perpetrated by Monk, in 1651, sixty vessels were found in the harbour, so richly laden as to afford a booty to the captors exceeding in value the whole of their spoil 'in the wars throughout the three nations;' but this illgotten plunder was no sooner obtained than lost, for the ships sunk in passing the bar; so that, although those inhabitants who deposited their valuables on board were ruined, their plunderers were not enriched. The subsequent massacre of the brave defenders of the town, and the decapitation of its governor, Lumsden, are well known historical facts. This heavy blow crushed its rising commerce, and for several years few vessels floated in the deserted harbour: however, in 1669, thirty-seven vessels arrived in this port; in 1673, forty-nine; in 1680, eighty-five; but in 1731 the number had considerably decreased, and the trade continued to dwindle till this once flourishing port was resorted to chiefly by fishermen and smugglers, as before mentioned. But the happy situation of Dundee, the commodiousness of its harbour, and the enterprise of its inhabitants, formed a too felicitous combination of circumstances to allow the extinction of her trade to be perpetual: the tide of commerce turned, and once more set into the forsaken haven; and the following official statement will exhibit the commercial eminence to which progressive prosperity has enabled this port to attain:—In 1745 the port dues scarcely amounted to £1,200; but in 1792 the number of vessels belonging to the town had increased to 116, measuring 8,550 tons; and about the same period the foreign clearances outwards and inwards, were nearly 12,000 tons; and the coasting trade about 61,000. This augmentation of its shipping gave an impulse to improvement; new sea walls and quays were built, the tide harbour was extended, wet docks and a graving dock were constructed, and such undertakings were effected that there are only two or three ports in Great Britain which now afford greater facilities and accommodation for shipping. In 1864 the number of foreign vessels which entered inward amounted to 531, with a registered tonnage of 104,750. The number of vessels in the coasting trade (including the river Tay trade), in the same year which entered inwards, amounted to 2,557, whose aggregate register amounted to 231,263 tons. In 1815 the management of the harbour was placed in the hands of commissioners, appointed annually under an act of parliament; but by a new act, passed in June, 1830, the management was transferred to trustees to be elected annually; the provost, bailies, and dean of guild to be perpetual trustees, in virtue of their office. The total expenditure for constructing and maintaining the harbour from July, 1815, to May 31, 1865, inclusive of interest on debt and sinking fund, was £1,182,582 3s. 4d.; the total receipts during the same period in ordinary and extraordinary revenue, amounted to £851,898 14s. 4d., exclusive of other amounts, accruing from sinking fund, interest, &c. The state of debt by the Dundee Harbour on the 31st of May, 1865, amounted to £210,797 5s. 10d. The progressive increase of revenue will appear from the following statement:—

The number of the vessels belonging to the port in 1866 was 208, of the agregate register of about 46,000 tons. The whale fishery employs several ships from this port, which have all of late years been fitted with screw propellers. Some of these, having only been built or purchased for 1866, as well as a number of large vessels for the jute carrying trade—are not yet included in the registered tonnage returns. Steam navigation is successfully conducted by the Dundee, Perth, and London Shipping Company, whose vessels ply to London twice a week and to Hull weekly. These steam ships have obtained a high character for swiftness and excellent accommodation. There is also steam communication during the summer months on the Tay from Dundee to Newburgh and Perth daily. The earliest articles manufactured in the town seem to have been soap and glass, which engaged a great number of hands; and the brewing of ale was carried on to some extent. A soap works has been again established (Mr. D. Bruce, manager), which bids fair to become a permanent branch of industry. The glass manufacture has died out, as also has the sugar refining, which was once carried on. In 1866, however, a new branch of manufacture—that of linseed crushing—was established by Messrs. Gellaty, Mitchell, and Co., in a mill at Craigie, to the east of Dundee. The manufacture of shoe uppers by the sewing machine has been introduced by Messrs Henderson a few years ago, and has been so successful that they have built a very large factory of four storeys for its accommodation. Young women are chiefly employed to tend the machines, which turn out some thousands of uppers per week. The factory is the second largest of the kind in Britain, and when some contemplated additions shall have been made, will be the largest. The business of building ships flourished here at an early period, and such an occupation soon led to the manufacture of cordage, which remains still a branch of commerce. The manufacture of cotton was once tried here, and had the appearance of forming an important branch in the trade of Dundee, having, at one time, seven companies engaged in it; but at length it declined, and finally died away, in favour of Glasgow. The manufacture of woollen cloths was next attempted to be established, but met with no success. Out of these failures arose a spirit for manufacturing goods from flax; and, as an encouragement to this branch, in its infancy, a bounty was given by government on all linen exported, and a heavy duty laid on the importation of foreign linens. By these enactments the trade of Dundee increased to a great extent, and has kept pace with that of its shipping. The following shows the amount of flax, hemp, &c., imported at several periods:

Forty years ago, there were only four steam spinning mills; there are now upwards of fifty. The various productions from flax, hemp, and jute form the staple of the town: the raw material is imported chiefly from Russia, Prussia, and Holland; this is spun by steam power into thread, which, after being bleached, is woven into osnaburghs, sheetings, baggings, sailcloth, sacking, dowlas, &c. During the year 1850, the trade of Dundee became animated by augmenting briskness showing that free trade had increased the prosperity of this important port: the apparent declension during the year 1849 was owing to a considerable portion of the coasting trade being transferred to the railways—this was conspicuous in the transport of salmon to the extent of three thousand boxes. At the commencement of the civil war in America the trade of Dundee increased to a most extraordinary extent, fabrics of jute and linen being in great demand to take the place of cotton. Almost every mill has received additions, and a number of new mills have been erected and are still being erected. The manufacture of machinery, steam engines, boilers, and millwright work is in a flourishing conditon and carried on extensively by several eminent firms, among whom may be mentioned Messrs. Carmichael & Co., Ward Foundry; Kerr & Co., Douglas Foundry; Gourlay, Brothers, & Co., Dundee Foundry; Pearce Brothers, Lillybank Foundry; and Robinson and Orchar, Wallace Foundry.

Ship building is also an important feature in the general prosperity and industry of the town, and gives employment to a large number of artizans; several iron steamers have also been built by the Messrs. Gourlay, Brothers, & Co., at their works on the Marine Parade; and there are several extensive saw mills and timber yards, the principal of which belong to Messrs. W. Kirkland & Sons, Mr. J. Kirkland, and Mr. George Jessman.

Descriptive Sketch of Dundee.—Although Dundee is not conspicuous for beauty, and has not enlarged its dimensions in proportion to its increased population, it contains several handsome streets. The town is illuminated with gas, furnished by two companies, and is also supplied with water, under the direction of an efficient company, formed a few years ago. The greater part of the mansions of the opulent are ranged on the lofty bank of the Tay, westward of the town. This situation commands a view of the majestic river, and the beautiful scenery on the opposite coast. The delightful lawn, which forms the margin of the northern bank of the river, called 'Magdalen Green,' is much frequented as a promenade, and in summer it is appropriated to cricket and other athletic sports. The central point of the river is a wide oblong area, called High-street, on the south side of which stands the town-house, comprising the guildhall, the court-room, and appropriate offices, together with repositories for the town records. The town-house was finished in 1734, from a plan of the elder Adams. The front is very handsome, beneath which is a piazza; and from the centre of the building rises a lofty spire, 140 feet high. The Trades' Hall ornaments the eastern end of High-street; it has recently been sold to the Clydesdale Banking Company, who have considerably improved its appearance. Castle-street (the site of the ancient castle), which runs from High-street towards the quay, contains a Congregational chapel and the theatre. Reform-street diverges from High-street in a northern direction, and is composed of very handsome houses and shops. The Public Hall, in Bank-street (for which the inhabitants of Dundee are mainly indebted to Lord Kinnaird), was an excellent addition to the public buildings of this town. The building is from a design by Mr. Charles Edward, architect, Dundee, and is highly suitable for the double purpose to which at first it was intended to be applied, viz, a corn exchange and public hall. It is in the anglo-Italian style of architecture, and its exterior is plain, but bold and massive in detail. The principal entrance is from Bank-street. Above the entrance lobbies, and projecting into the hall, is a gallery capable of accommodating about 200 people, seated comfortably. On the right and left of the entrances are small retiring rooms, used as committee-rooms. The gallery is entered by projecting passages in the inside of the hall, from plats on the stair, which also lead to retiring rooms on a level with the gallery—one on the east and another on the west side. The hall itself is a spacious apartment, 130 by 60 feet, and 42 feet 6 inches high, and capable of accommodating about 2,500 people. It was found that the farmers would not use it as an exchange, but preferred to remain on the street. A movement was made in 1864 for a public organ to improve the hall, and £1,500 was subscribed for the purpose. The organ was inaugurated on the 5th October, 1865, by a grand performance of Mendelsohn's "St. Paul," by the Dundee Cecilia Society. The orchestra in front of the organ can accommodate some 280 performers. Looking up Castle-street, the elegant edifice called the 'Seminaries,' with its chaste Doric portico, forms a graceful terminating object. This tasteful structure was completed in 1834, at a cost of £10,000. It comprehends the burgh grammar school, and an academy patronised by the corporation, designed to impart a liberal education to the pupils, including instructions in literature, science, and the ancient and modern languages. In addition to the above, there are numerous public schools, and many private educational establishments. A large new building, to be called the "Albert Institute," is now being erected to the south-east of this school, from designs by Mr. Gilbert Scott, at a cost of some £15,000, exclusive of the site, which cost £8,000. The building is intended to comprise a public hall, library, reading room, and museum; and some £25,000 have been subscribed for it by voluntary contributions. The design is in decorated Gothic, and will harmonise well with the church and the exchange to the north. It will occupy the centre of the square, and have a grand staircase on the west front. The principal church of Dundee rears its huge and lofty tower westward of High-street. The church of which this tower is the remnant was destroyed by fire some years ago, but was rebuilt; and the dimensions of the block are so capacious as to comprehend three distinct Parochial churches within its walls. At the foot of the church tower, on its western side, was placed for a long time the ancient market cross, removed from High-street. It is a carved pillar, supporting an unicorn which holds an armorial shield between its knees; but it has been removed and placed inside the tower to preserve it from decay by the elements. Adjoining the fine church of St. Andrew in the Cowgate is a meeting-house for the 'Glassites'—a section of the religious world founded by Mr. John Glass, who, it appears, was made a freeman of Dundee by the town council in 1753. Besides the burial-grounds attached to several of the religious edifices, there are three extensive cemeteries, the inspection of which cannot fail to interest a stranger. The Western Cemetery, which is situated to the west of the Perth road, has a beautiful site, and is gracefully planted with shrubs and flowers. A new Parish Cemetery has been opened to the east of the town on a field in the estate of Craigie, which is grandiloquently styled the "Eastern Necropolis," though it is more commonly called the Eastern Cemetery. Dudhope Castle, originally the seat of the Scrymgeour family, standard-bearers to the Scottish kings, one of whom, after the Restoration, was elevated to the peerage, by the title of Earl of Dundee—stands on the face of the hill to the north of the town and in front of the Law. This mansion subsequently became the property of the reckless persecutor of the rebels, Graham of Claverhouse, Viscount of Dundee; it is now converted into a barrack. From the approach to this ancient mansion is a fine view of the new gaol, the plan of which admits of the classification of offenders. Adjoining the entrance to the barrack is the public bleaching green. The new Royal Infirmary, erected in 1853, near to the military barracks, Dudhope, furnishes an attractive evidence of the benevolent efforts of the wealthy for the amelioration of human suffering and misery. It is from designs by Messrs. Coe and Goodwin, of London; and has, with its wings, central tower, and embattled parapets, a very noble appearance. At the east end of Cowgate is the only fragment remaining of the ancient town wall. It is an arch which bestrides the street, and is, perhaps, indebted for its continuance to a feeling of grateful veneration for the memory of the amiable martyr, Geo. Wishart, who, from this gate, during the plague of 1544, preached to the infected assembled on the outerside, and to the healthy on the inner: his text was Psalm 107, verse 20, 'The Lord sent his word and healed them.' The Royal Lunatic Asylum, in the Forfar road, both for elegance and accommodation, will not suffer from a comparison with any kindred establishment in Scotland. The Royal Orphan Institution, founded in 1815, is an admirable charity; and so are many others which are enumerated in the list of 'Public Buildings.' In close proximity to the asylum, a commodious building has been erected for the poor, capable of holding about 300 inmates. It was opened for their reception in November, 1856, and cost about £10,000. Since that time wings for hospital purposes have been built at the sole expense of Mr. Molison, chairman of the Parochial Board, at a cost of upwards of £1,000. At the western termination of the fine terrace, called Dock-street, overlooking the docks and harbour, is an elegant building, in the Grecian style, named the 'Exchange Coffee-rooms.' It was erected at an expense of £9,000, and contains spacious coffee and reading rooms, besides apartments for the transaction of mercantile business. Access to these rooms is liberally permitted to every respectable stranger. Contiguous to this is a gorgeous arch, or rather a structure surmounting three arches; a capacious central one, and two of smaller dimensions at the sides. The style is Norman, and each front is richly sculptured with countless intersections of circular arches; two octagonal turrets rise from the summit. This costly monument was raised to commemorate the landing near this spot, of Queen Victoria. Near this arch is the fish market, amply supplied with the various species of the finny tribes in season; the Dundee haddock is a peculiar favourite. From this locality, Union-street forms a communication with the Nethergate; it contains excellent shops, and the 'Thistle Hall,' much used for public meetings. The various banking establishments occupy buildings which likewise contribute to the embellishment of the town, as well as to the facilities of its trade. At the top of Reform-street, and corner of Ward road, is the Post-office—a handsome and convenient building in the Italian style of architecture. Nearly £5,000 was expended in erecting this useful establishment, which is well laid out, and is an elegant and commodious building. It is in immediate contiguity to the Royal Exchange and Chamber of Commerce; and its admirable situation gives it the additional advantages of nearness of access to the members of those institutions, besides placing it in a healthful locality where it may be seen to advantage. The Royal Exchange and Chamber of Commerce, Panmure-street, was erected in 1852, at a cost of about £10,000. It is a handsome building, in the Flemish-Gothic style of the 14th century. In 1863 a splendid public park of upwards of 30 acres was presented to the town by Sir David Baxter, Bart., and endowed with funds necessary to maintain it. The park, which is at the east end of the town, was beautifully laid out by Sir Joseph Paxton; and, with the endowment, has cost Sir David not less than £50,000. Five newspapers issue weekly from the press of Dundee, and maintain an increasing circulation. The 'Dundee Advertiser,' published daily; and a semi-weekly edition on Tuesdays and Fridays, the market days. This is the leading paper; and has an extensive circulation in the county and district, as well as in the town. The 'Dundee Courier and 'Argus' also published daily; the 'Northern Warder' on Tuesdays and Fridays; and the 'People's Journal' and 'Weekly News' on Saturdays. The 'People's Journal' has the largest circulation of any provincial paper, being above 100,000 weekly. A subscription by its readers recently raised upwards of £800 for the National Lifeboat Institution. The Municipal government of Dundee is exercised by a provost, four bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, an hospital master, a kirk master, and twelve councillors. There are six courts held within the town—the burgh or bailie court, the sheriff's court, the commissary court, the guild court, the police court, and the justice of peace small debt court. The town is divided into three districts, and subdivided into eleven wards, for the convenience of the registration of the burgh electors. Dundee sends one representative to parliament. Sir John Ogilvy, Bart., of Baldovan House, is the present member. The principal market days are Tuesday and Friday; and there is a cattle and sheep market held every Monday. Fairs—Stobb's fair, for cattle, sheep, and horses, on the 11th July, or the first Tuesday following (O.S.;) Dundee first fair, for cattle, sheep, and horses, on the 26th August—if that day falls on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, or Friday, if not, the first Tuesday after the 26th of August (N S.); and the second Dundee fair on the 19th September (the same rule observed as that regulating the first fair). Feeing markets for servants are held on the 25th of May and on the 22nd November, or on the first Friday thereafter.

The number of inhabitants by the census of 1861, was 94,000, The proximate number now (1866) is probably 100,000.

INVERGOWRIE is a village singularly situated, being partly in Perthshire and partly in Forfarshire, one portion being in the parish of Lonforgan, the other in that of Liff. It is three miles from Dundee. There is a very neat Free church, to which is attached a school. A fragment of an ancient church, said to be the oldest in Scotland, forms an interesting object, as a graveyard surrounds it, in which are deposited the remains of several highly respectable persons; among others the Very Rev. Heneage Horsley, M.A., Dean of Brechin, and Prebendary of St. Asaph, son of the renowned Dr. Horsley, Bishop of St. Asaph. He died in 1847.

BULLIONFIELD, contiguous to the above, is in the parish of Liff, and contains the only paper mill in the county. Milnfield extensive stone quarry is in the vicinity, and gives employment to a great number of hands. Adjoining it is the Invergowrie railway station, upon the Dundee and Perth line.

DUNNICHEN WITH LETHAM.

DUNNICHEN parish extends four miles in length, having Forfar (its post town) on the north-west, Inverarity on the south-west, Rescobie on the north, and Kirkden on the east. The land, which is nearly all arable, is productive, and has been much improved by the use of marl, artificial manures, and draining. The principal village is LETHAM, situated on the north-east portion of the parish, five miles from Forfar, and 1¼ miles from AULD BAR STATION, on the Scottish North-Eastern Railway; it is a modern little place, having been erected some years ago on the estate of Mr. Dempster; and thrives by the manufacture of considerable quantities of linen cloth, a branch which gives employment to a large proportion of the inhabitants. Fairs are held on the 26th May (unless that day should fall on a Saturday, when it is held on Monday), and November the 23rd.

POST OFFICE, LETHAM, George Strachan, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Forfar) at two afternoon, and are despatched at forty-five minutes past seven morning.

EDZELL, LETHNOT, AND STRACATHRO.

EDZELL is a large parish, chiefly in this county, with a small portion in Kincardineshire; it is fourteen miles in length, and contains a neat and well-built village, having ones main street, with several other smaller one diverging therefrom. The village is 6 miles N. from Brechin (its post town), on the banks of the North Esk; it is well supplied with gas by a company, who have their works at the south side of the village. The ruins of the ancient castle of Edzell is the chief object of interest, and is considered one of the finest ruins of the kind in Scotland. It was formerly the residence of the Lindsays of Glen Esk. The North Esk on the east, and the West Water on the west, are the only streams which flow through the parish; it is very healthy, and the scenery around is of a very beautiful description, and much resorted to by summer visitors. The Grampian Hills, running east and west, are in the immediate neighbourhood. One mile south of the village, where the North Esk takes its course a most striking and imposing sight presents itself. The scenery here is truly magnificent, the river forming in some parts cascades or waterfalls. There is a Parish Church and also a Free Church in the village, and a school in connection with each. Fairs, the third Thursday in February, first Monday in May, fourth Friday in July, fourth Wednesday in August, and in October, for cattle and sheep.

LETHNOT and NAVAR, is a joint parish, fifteen miles in length, and about five miles in breadth, having Edzell on the east, and Menmuir on the south. The stream called the West Water runs through the middle of the parish, or between Lethnot proper and Navar. The hills in the parish form part of the Grampian range. There is a Parish Church and a school in connection.

STRACATHRO, anciently written Strickathrow is a parish about seven miles long and two broad, and contains the small village of INCHBARE, situated 1½ miles from Edzell; corn and black cattle are the principal products. The churchyard, which is about four miles N. from Brechin (its post town), is said to have been the scene of the surrender of the crown of Scotland, by John Baliol, to Edward I., in 1296; in the same cemetery are three tombstones, said by tradition to mark the graves of three Danish generals. In the north-western part of the parish rises the conspicuous hill of Lundie. There is a Parish Church and school in connection.

POST OFFICE, EDZELL,, Robert Buchan, Post Master—Letters from all parts arrive (from Brechin) every morning at half-past eight, and in summer an additional mail at half-past four afternoon, and are despatched thereto at thirty-five minutes past ten morning, and in summer an additional mail at six evening.

Post Office, LETHNOT, William Bryce, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Brechin) through Edzell at eleven morning, and are despatched thereto at seven morning.

Post Office, INCHBARE, STRACATHRO, William Jaffray, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Brechin) every morning at eight, and in summer an additional mail at five minutes past four afternoon, and are despatched thereto at five minutes past eleven morning, and in summer an additional mail at half-past six evening.

FORFAR,

WITH THE PARISHES OF INVERARITY, KINNETTLES, AND RESCOBIE.

IS a royal burgh, the seat of a presbytery, the county town, and the capital of the parish of its name; 57 miles N. from Edinburgh, 15 W. from Arbroath, 14 N. from Dundee, 13 S. W. from Brechin, and 5 E. by N. from Glamis; situate in the lowest part of a country sloping towards it on all sides; and on the Scottish North Eastern Railway, on which line there is a station adjacent to the town. Forfar is now of pleasant appearance, though strict regularity has by no means been observed in the formation of the streets, which contain many well-built houses and handsome shops. A large number of beautiful suburban villas have been built to the south and west of the town. Some years since were erected in Castle-street, at the general expense of the shire, a handsome suite of county buildings. The town-house, which was rebuilt previously, besides the requisite offices, contains a spacious upper-room for public meetings and amusements. The inhabitants support an excellently conducted newsroom and library, the latter comprising upwards of three thousand volumes. The original charters which constituted Forfar a royal burgh are lost, but the privileges were confirmed in 1669, in virtue of which the burgh is governed by a provost, three bailies, and nineteen councillors, a third of whom are elected annually. A sheriff's court is held for the trial of civil and criminal cases generally; and a police court for the determination of local, civil, and police affairs—the latter department confided to constables. The burgh unites with Montrose, Brechin, Bervie and Arbroath in sending one member to parliament. The present member is W. E. Baxter, Esq. (of Kincaldrum), Ashcliff, Dundee. The revenue of the burgh, arising from lands, customs, &c. may be averaged at about £2,000 per annum. The chief trade of this town, and of its vicinity, is the weaving of osnaburgs, and other coarse linens. There are now several power-loom factories and bleachworks, in full operation, employing about 2,000 hands, besides others of considerable extent in the course of construction. There are also several breweries, and these, with the tanning and currying of leather, comprise the other principal establishments of business. There are several respectable inns, and six general banking establishments—they are branches respectively of the 'Commercial Bank of Scotland' the 'Royal Bank of Scotland' (which has two branches), the 'National Bank of Scotland,' the Union Bank of Scotland,' and the 'Bank of Scotland.' There are likewise a branch of the 'National Security Savings' Bank,' and a 'Penny Savings' Bank,' in the town.

The places of worship are two churches under the establishment, two Free, an Episcopal, an Independent, and an United Presbyterian. In the steeple of the Parish church is a very fine bell, presented to the town in the 17th century, by a native named Strang, who is said to have been brought up from the parish funds, but having gone to Stockholm amassed a large fortune, and took this manner of showing his gratitude, besides bequeathing a large sum of money for behoof of the poor of the town. There are also a Poor Home and an Infirmary for the accommodation of the town and neighbouring parish: the former contains 85 beds, and the latter 40. There are several public and private schools of repute, for pupils of either sex; the Forfar Academy, an excellent institution, commenced its instructive course in 1815—this comprises the usual routine of a liberal education, and includes, among other accomplishments, perfection in the classics, mathematics, the languages, music, &c. Three burgh schools, for the benefit of the poorer classes, have been built at the different ends of the town; they are very commodious, and ably conducted by their respective masters. In 1850 a public cemetery was formed, it occupies nine Scotch acres on the south side of the town, and is laid out in tasteful walks, with ornamental shrubs, &c. forming a pleasant promenade. On a mound at the top of the cemetery, which occupies one of those gently sloping hills for which this part of the country is so noted, a fine monument was erected in 1852 by public subscription to the memory of Sir Robert Peel. The figure stands upon the centre of a large pedestal, covered by a dome, which is supported on eight pillars. From its site the town and surrounding district may be seen to great advantage, while the monument is seen on its elevated position at a considerable distance. On the west side of the town is a fine loch, nearly a mile in length by half a mile in breadth; it is a beautiful sheet of water, abounding with pike, perch, and trout. Upon a small artificial island, near the north end of the loch, anciently stood a nunnery, founded by Queen Margaret, as a separate establishment from her husband Malcolm. At the partial drainage of the lake, about seventy years since, for the purpose of obtaining its fertilizing marl, some weapons and instruments were found at the bottom; these were conjectured to have been the implements used by the murderers of Malcolm II. at Glamis, on the ground of a tradition which asserts that the assassins, in attempting to cross the lake upon the ice, went down and perished. The date of the erection of Forfar Castle, which stood upon an eminence to the north of the town, cannot be certified, but it is said to have been the place of meeting of the first parliament convened by King Malcolm Canmore, and his occasional seat of residence after the recovery of his throne from Macbeth. The magistrates of the burgh some years since removed the market cross from the street to the site of the old castle, to mark the spot where the monarch sojourned, as but few remains of the edifice are now extant. A castle tower is here erected as an observatory, whence is obtained the best view of the town and surrounding neighbourhood. The Rev. John Bruce, the intelligent author of the 'Statistical Account of the Parish of Forfar,' furnishes a number of particulars illustrative of the rise of the town, its tastes and appearances. He says that about the middle of the last century there were not above seven tea-kettles, seven pair of bellows, and as many watches in Forfar; now (in 1793), he adds, every house in town has a tea-kettle and bellows, and every menial servant must have his watch. At the same not distant period an ox, valued at forty shillings, supplied the flesh market of Forfar for a fortnight. The steady advancement of population, trade, and agricultural improvements, both before and since 1793, when this gentleman wrote, have in this district, as elsewhere, revolutionized the prices and consumption of articles, and now Forfar is one of the most thriving and comfortable towns in the county. The market is held on Saturday; and cattle markets are held every Wednesday during the winter season, from November to April, on the large open space in the East High street. A fair is held on North moor for horses and cattle on the second Wednesday in each month from April to November.

INVERARITY is a parish about three miles square, bounded on the north by the parish of Forfar, its post town, four miles distant therefrom. Free stone and grey slate stone abounds in the parish, the soil is various. The turnpike from Forfar to Dundee passes through the parish.

KINNETTLES, a parish, said to have derived its name from the Gaelic word signifying the head of a bog, is about two miles in length, with an equal breadth, three miles east from Forfar its post town, and two miles from Glamis. Although the parish cannot boast of any river yet it is beautifully diversified, a large rivulet called the Kirbet, which at KIRTON is crossed by a chain bridge, and a stone bridge of three arches at DOUGLASTOWN (these places are small villages in the parish) this stream after a circuitous course of 72 miles and 10 miles southward of its source, finally joins the Tay. The land is fertile, and beneath the surface an abundance of sandstone, whinstone, and slate abounds. The Parish Church was built in 1812. There is now a very handsome parish school built at Douglastown, to replace the old one at Kinnettles.

RESCOBIE is a parish about three miles east from Forfar, its post town, and is about six miles in length and from one to two and-a-half in breadth, situated between the hills of Dunnichen and Turin. The soil is various, and mostly in cultivation, with some thriving plantations and very little waste ground, it has no river nor considerable stream, but it is sufficiently watered for domestic and agricultural purposes, it is intersected by the Loch of Rescobie, which is a mile in length. From the Loch of Balgavies, in the parish of Aberlemno, on the north and east of Rescobie issues the chief branch of the Lunan waters, which gives name to a bay in the German Ocean, into which it falls about twelve miles from Rescobie. These lakes abound with marl, a manure which is very good if skilfully used; extensive stone quarries of various qualities are wrought. There is the Parish church and school, the latter containing a very valuable and extensive library for the use of the inhabitants.

FRIOCKHEIM,
WITH THE PARISHES OF CARMYLIE AND KIRKDEN.

FRIOCKHEIM is a modern village in the parish of Kirkden, six miles from Arbroath, its post town, situate on the right bank of the Lunan, and near the line of the Scottish North-Eastern Railway. It owes its origin to Mr. Andson, who laid out the ground on a regular plan, and feued it into small lots, in order to encourage the settlement of weavers, &c.; and by far the greater proportion of the inhabitants are employed in the spinning of flax and the weaving of linen cloth, and also at the neighbouring quarries. Altogether the situation of this place is peculiarly eligible for the seat of manufactures, being nearly equi-distant from most of the towns in the county, and in the immediate vicinity of a railway. In 1835 upwards of £700 was collected by public subscription, and the proceeds applied to the erection of a handsome chapel, in connection with the Established Church. There are several good schools in the village and its vicinity, in which are taught the ordinary branches of education. It also contains a Free Church, and an Independent Chapel. There is no municipal government, the hitherto exemplary conduct and contented habits of the inhabitants rendering such description of superintendence unnecessary, but there is a resident police officer.

CARMYLIE is a parish and village, six miles in length by three in breadth, and bounded by parts of eight parishes, viz.: Panbride, Monikie, Guthrie, Dunnichen, Kirkden, Inverkeilor, St. Vigeans and Arbirlot. The parish is hilly, and contains much land that is unproductive; but there are considerable quarries, from which good pavement stones are obtained, and exported in great quantities. The small river Elliot runs through the whole length of the parish.

KIRKDEN is a parish between six and seven miles long and two broad, bounded on the north by Rescobie and Guthrie, on the south by Carmylie, Kinnell and Inverkeillor, on the east, and by Dunnichen on the west, and is watered by the Lunan (on which are some mills, one of them a large spinning mill), and one of its tributaries, the Vinny. A small patch of Dunnichen parish lies in the western division of Kirkden, which latter is tolerably fertile, and the lands well enclosed and planted. In this district are some remains of antiquity, including an obelisk, bearing some rude characters, the meaning of which cannot now be deciphered. The village of Friockheim is in this parish.

GLAMIS,

WITH THE JOINT PARISH OF EASSIE AND NEVAY.

GLAMIS (formerly Glammis) is a rich and fertile parish—the village, a small one, is 12 miles N. from Dundee, 12 N.E. from Coupar Angus, 5 W. from Forfar, and the same distance S. from Kirriemuir; situated in the vale of Strathmore, which is watered by the river Dean, and is one of the best enclosed, drained, and farmed districts in Scotland. The principal object of interest in this district is Glamis Castle, which stands in a park near the village. This is an edifice of princely and antique appearance, consisting of an irregular congregation of tall towers, some of which are of remoter date than others. It was anciently a royal residence, and the scene of the death of Malcolm II., in 1034; it afterwards became the property of Macbeth, after whose death it fell to the crown. Robert II. gave it to John Lyon, his favourite, who on marrying the king's second daughter became the founder of the present noble family of Strathmore; and the eldest son of the earl bears the title of Lord Glamis. On the conviction and execution of the young and beautiful Lady Glamis for witchcraft, in 1537, the castle once more became royal property, and was a residence of James V. but it was afterwards restored to the family. It contains a valuable collection of pictures. Near the castle stands a remarkable curiosity, namely, a great number of dials, thus disposed—on a pedestal stand the figures of four lions rampant, life size, each holding a dial in their fore paws, facing the four cardinal points. From their heads rises a huge mass of stone, something like a pine-apple in shape, with the protuberances upon it formed into dials, making the number of these ancient time-pieces eighty-four. The castle, with its historic associations; the pedestal, and Malcolm's gravestone—a huge stone of rude design, standing in the garden of the Manse—form the chief attraction to tourists in the county of Forfar. The castle is open to visitors on Tuesdays. The inhabitants of Glamis are principally employed in the weaving of linen fabrics. There is a society of Freemasons established here, who hold their meetings in a neat building erected for the purpose, and which is also used for lectures and other purposes. Fairs are held on the first Wednesday in April, first Wednesday in May, first Wednesday after the 26th of May, first Saturday after the 28th of October, and first Wednesday after the 22nd of November.

EASSIE and NEVAY is a joint parish 3 miles west from Glamis, 7 from Forfar, and 7 S.W. from Kirriemuir, about four miles in length and three in breadth, bounded on the east and south by Glamis—the small river Dean forming the northern boundary. The land to some extent is quite flat, much of which affords excellent pasturage for sheep and cattle. The Scottish North-Eastern Railway passes through the parish, joining the Dundee and Coupar-Angus about a mile north of Newtyle. The Parish church, a neat building; was erected in 1833.

POST OFFICE, (sub) GLAMIS, John Langlands, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Forfar) at a quarter before nine morning, and half-past three in the afternoon: and from Meigle at nine morning. Letters for all parts are despatched (to Forfar) at a quarter before twelve morning and to Meigle at one afternoon.

Letters for EASSIE should be addressed near Meigle, Perthshire.

INVERKEILOR.

WITH THE PARISHES AND VILLAGES OF LUNAN, KINNELL, AND GUTHRIE, ETHIEHAVEN, LEYSMILL, CHAPELTON, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

INVERKEILOR parish presents a front of five miles to the sea at Lunan bay, near which, on an eminence, at the mouth of the Lunan river, stands an old venerable rain, named 'Red Castle,' which is said to have been built by William the Lion, and used by him as a hunting seat; the parish is of an oblong form extending W. about seven miles. The parish church stands inland, on the Lunan water, at the distance of five and three quarter miles from Arbroath, its post town, and seven from Montrose. The Keilor rivulet runs through the parish to the sea; and the small fishing village of ETHIEHAVEN is situated at the mouth of that river. LEYSMILL and CHAPELTON are also small villages in the parish; CHANCE INN is also a place in this parish. There are an Established church and a Free church, the latter erected in the year 1843. It likewise contains several schools, in which are taught the ordinary branches of education. There are in the parish several fine seats, particularly 'Ethie House,' the seat of the Earl of Northesk, about a mile from which eastward, near the sea, stand the remains of St. Murdoch's chapel, at one time a cell of Aberbrothock; and a short way to the south is the promontory of Redhead.

KINNELL parish lies on the north side of the Lunan, upon which stream are several flax spinning mills; and the church stands on the bank of the river, at the distance of six miles N.W. from Arbroath, its post town, and about four miles W. from Inverkeilor. The parish extends about four miles in length, by three in breadth, and is separated from the sea by Lunan parish, it is bounded on the north by the parishes of Farnell and Maryton, on the east by those of Craig, Lunan, and Inverkeilor, on the south by the latter; and on the west by those of Kirkden, Guthrie, and Aberlemno. The surface of this district is mostly flat, and in a good state of cultivation; and there are some plantations in a thriving condition. Within the parish are several tumuli; and tradition points out the spot where a battle was fought between the rival clans of Lindsay and Ogilvie, in the year 1443.

GUTHRIE parish is divided into two parts, lying nearly six miles asunder, it is a junction on the Scottish North Eastern Railway and about six miles N.W. from Arbroath, its post town. The land slopes from the hill of Guthrie to the south and south-east, a part only being arable. Prior to the reformation this parish had a Collegiate church, with a provost and three prebendaries. The patronage of the parish belongs to the family of Guthrie, one of whom was slain at the battle of Flodden. There is a Parochial school in the parish.

LUNAN is a small parish situated about seven miles from Arbroath, its post town, and four from Montrose, two miles in length by two in breadth, bounded on the east by the German Ocean, on the south by the Lunan water which divides the parish from Inverkeilor, on the west by Kinnell, and on the north by Maryton and Craig; the Parish church is situated at the south-east extremity of the parish.

KIRRIEMUIR

WITH THE PARISHES OF AIRLIE, CORTACHY AND CLOVA, KINGOLDRUM AND LINTRATHEN.

KIRRIEMUIR is a large town, one of considerable antiquity, a burgh of barony, and capital of its parish, 62 miles N. from Edinburgh, 18 N. from Dundee, 6 N.W. from Forfar, and 5 N. from Glamis, situated near the foot of the braes of Angus, on the south west side of a hill, along the northern brow of a beautiful glen, through which flows the small rivulet Gairie. The prospect from the lower part of the town is bounded by the southern braes of the glen, but from the higher part almost the whole of the delightful vale of Strathmore is brought into view, displaying one of the grandest panoramic scenes it is possible to conceive. The town consists of several streets, diverging from each other — fancifully described as resembling the shaft and arms of an anchor; its appearance has much improved of late years. A branch line of railway from the Scottish North Eastern, unites it with other cities and towns. For a long period Kirriemuir has been the thriving seat of considerable manufactures, comprising about twenty varieties of linen: it is celebrated for the excellent fabric of its cloth, and the ingenuity and industry of those employed in producing it; some idea may be formed of the importance of this trade from the fact that the looms of Kirriemuir have furnished, in one year, upwards of one hundred thousand pieces, varying in length from one hundred to one hundred and seventy yards, giving employment to more than two thousand weavers. The date of the barony of Kirriemuir is at the present day unknown, and it is only certain that the jurisdiction of its bailie once extended over a large tract of country; the Countess of Howe, the heiress to the lands of the late Lord Douglas, is superioress of the burgh, and appoints the bailie. There is a superintendent of police, and a sheriff's court is held six times a year, for the recovery of small debts. The places of worship with the ministers are given at a subsequent page—they comprise edifices for the Established church, the Free church, United Presbyterians, Original Seceders, and Episcopalians. There are four banking establishments, branches respectively of the British Linen Co., the City of Glasgow Bank, the National Bank of Scotland, and the Union Bank of Scotland. There are also several respectable hotels, including a temperance hotel. The inhabitants of this respectable little town are not more notable for their ingenious and persevering industry, than for their general intelligence and benevolence. There is a Mechanics' Library, in connection with which, popular lectures are delivered during the winter months, and besides there are libraries connected with the several religious denominations. Besides the Parochial school, which is well endowed, there is a Seminary, erected and endowed from a bequest made in 1829, by Mr. John Webster, writer and banker, and managed by the Parochial minister and his Kirk session, with the baron bailie, Sir Charles Lyell, of Kinnordy. The acreage of the parish is 35,658; the valuation for 1864-5 amounted to £29,501 15s. 3d. A little to the east of the town is the Cemetry, situated on the sloping side of an eminence, the grounds beautifully laid out and terraced, commanding a most extensive view of the valley of Strathmore; the Sidlaw hills, and the Grampians in the distance; all uniting to form one of the most picturesque landscapes within the compass of Scottish scenery. Three miles to the north-east, within the boundary of the parish, over the small river Carity, stands the castle of Invercarity, a large Gothic edifice, in a state of good preservation; and two miles west are the ruins of Castle Balfour, erected by Cardinal Beaton. The surface of the parish, which extends some twenty miles by six, is much diversified; to the east and west of the town it is almost level: but the greater proportion of the district is beautifully varied with hills and dales, rivers, woods, and arable fields—some parts embellished with thriving plantations; and it is intersected by roads in all directions. The weekly market is held on Friday; and the fairs on the second Wednesday after the 26th May, the 24th of July or the Wednesday after: 19th of October or the Wednesday after; the second Wednesday after 22nd November; and on the first Friday after the 26th May, and the 22nd November.

AIRLIE (formerly Airly), is a parish about 6 miles w. from Kirriemuir, its post town, situated in the western part of the county, on the borders of Perthshire, its length is about six miles with a breadth varying from a half to four miles Within the parish is situated "Airlie Castle" (now a ruin), the ancient seat of the Ogilvies, Earls of Airlie, and now much frequented in the summer months by visitors.

CORTACHY AND CLOVA, a joint parish about 6 miles from Kirriemuir, the post town. It is about 19 miles long and from about 1 mile to about 6 miles in breadth, bounded on the north by the parishes of Lochee and Crathie, on the east by Tannadice and Lethnot, on the west by Crathie, and on the south by Kirriemuir. Within the parish of Cortachy, is Cortachy Castle, the summer residence of the Earl of Airlie KINGOLDRUM, is a parish and small village, about four miles distance from Kirriemuir, its post town. Its length is about 6½ miles, and its average breadth is nearly 3 miles. It is bounded by the parishes of Kirriemuir and Cortachy on the north and east, by Airlie on the south, and by Lintrathen on the west. Catlaw, the highest hill in the parish, rises to the height of 2,264 feet above the level of the sea, from its summit one of the most extensive views of Scotland may be obtained.

LINTRATHEN, is a parish about 12 miles in length, and 5 in breadth, it contains the hamlets of BRIDGEND and PITMUDIE. It is bounded on the south by Airlie, on the west by Glenisla, on the north by the Grampians, and on the east by Kingoldrum. The district in which the parish is situated is termed the Braes of Angus, lying between the Grampian range, and the valley of Strathmore. The loch of Lintrathen lies about a quarter of a mile from the church, at Bridgend; the streams which intersect the parish are the Melgam and the Isla, the latter divides the parish on the west side from Glenisla, and on which there are two beautiful waterfalls, the Reeky linn, and the Slug of Achrannie, from the former of which arose the name of Lintrathen.

Post Office, John Stivens, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive at ten minutes before seven morning, and at twenty minutes before twelve forenoon, and are despatched at five minutes before nine morning, and at a quarter past five evening.—Letters are also despatched to Cortachy and Airlie at half-past seven morning—and to Lintrathen a quarter past twelve noon; to Glen Prosen on Tuesdays and Saturdays at half past seven morning, and on Tuesdays and Fridays to Clova at the same time—A despatch on Sundays to all parts at one afternoon

LOCHEE AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

LOCHEE, an important and thriving village, on the east border of, and in the united parish of Liff and Benvie, situated 1½ miles N.W. from Dundee (its post town), and included within the parliamentary boundaries of, and under the municipal powers of that town. It occupies a large space, being incontinuous and dispersed, and presents the appearance of being a busy seat of manufactures. It contains several mills for the spinning and manufacturing of flax, jute, &c. goods, the principal of these being CAMPERDOWN LINEN WORKS, belonging to Messrs. Cox Brothers; they occupy a space of about 15 acres, and give employment to upwards of 4000 persons in the different processes of spinning, dyeing, bleaching, power and hand-loom, linen, hemp, and jute carpet weaving. In the immediate neighbourhood are several quarries of excellent freestone, which have been wrought for a long period; the stone from one of these was used in the construction of the Dundee harbour. The greater part of the inhabitants are employed in the different mills alluded to. The places of worship are a Chapel of Ease, a Free Church, United Presbyterian, Episcopalian, and a handsome edifice just completed for the Roman Catholics. Population in 1861, 6683; in 1866 supposed to be from 11 to 12,000.

POST OFFICE, HIGH STREET, John Robertson, Post Master.—Letters arrive from Dundee, and are despatched thereto.

Letters for LOCHEE should be addressed, near DUNDEE.

MENMUIR, FEARN, AND CARESTON.

MENMUIR is a parish about five miles long and two broad, and lies about five miles north-west from Brechin (its post town.) It is bounded on the north by Strickathrow and Lethnot, on the south by Brechin and Careston, on the west by Fern, and on the east by Brechin and Strickathrow. The southern part is flat, and forms the vale of the Cruick water; to the north it is hilly and healthy.

FEARN (or Fern) is a parish, 7 miles W. from Brechin (its post town), and 10 miles N.E. from Forfar, situated at the foot of some of the Grampian hills, is intersected by the Cruick water, and bounded on the south by that of Noran. Its form is nearly elliptic; on the south-west is the parish of Tannadice, on the north the united parish of Lethnot and Navar, and on the east Memuir and Careston. The surface presents rich pastoral hills, and low grounds finely cultivated and enclosed, with extensive plantations of fir and other timber. Near the Noran stands the formerly celebrated "Vane Castle," now a ruinous skeleton; it is about seven miles west of Brechin.

CARESTON (or Caraldston) is a small parish 4 miles W. from Brechin (its post town), and the same distance from Tannadice, situated between the two latter, and on the north bank of the South Esk, and to the east of the Noran water, which flows through and unites in this parish, which is bounded on the north by Menmuir, on the east by Brechin, on the south by Aberlemno, and on the west by Tannadice and Fearn. The land is composed of beautiful and well cultivated braes, sloping to the south. The only object of immediate interest in the parish is the Castle of Careston, one of the residences of the Earls of Crawford. Above the mantel piece in what is called the old drawing room are depicted the royal arms of Scotland, under which is an inscription, one of the family having married King Robert II's eldest daughter. The main part of the building is supposed to have been erected about the early part of 1400; although it cannot boast of much ornament in its construction, yet it carries in its appearance an aspect of grandeur well suited to a baronial castle.

POST OFFICE, Tigerton, MENMUIR, Andrew Garvie, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Brechin) at forty minutes past eight morning, and are despatched thereto at two afternoon.

Post Office, CARESTON, James M'Connachie, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Brechin) at ten minutes past eleven morning, and are despatched thereto at a quarter past eleven.

Post Office, FEARN, Alexander Cameron, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Brechin) at five minutes past ten, and are despatched thereto at half-past ten morning.

MONTROSE,

WITH THE PARISHES AND VILLAGES OF CRAIG, DUN, FERRYDEN, HILL-SIDE, LOGIE-PERT, MARYTON, AND USAN.

MONTROSE is a royal burgh and sea-port, the capital of its parish, and a branch station of the Scottish North-Eastern Railway, 72 miles N.N.E. from Edinburgh, 29 N.E. from Dundee, 23 S.S.W. from Stonehaven, 21 E. by N. from Forfar, 13 S.S.W. from Inverbervie, 12 S. from Arbroath, and 8½ E. from Brechin. The German Ocean, the rivers North and South Esk, and a large expanse of water designated 'Montrose Basin,' so nearly encompass the town as to constitute its site a peninsula. It was anciently called Celurea, but the derivation of its modern appellation, Montrose, has been controverted by etymologists. Camden derives the name from the Latin Mons Rosarum, the 'Mount of Roses,' which is countenanced by the seal of the town bearing the ornament of roses, with the motto Mare didat, Rosa decorat —'the sea enriches, and the rose adorns.' Montrose is connected with many important events in Scottish history; it is mentioned as the port from which Sir James Douglas embarked in 1330, with a numerous and splendid retinue, on a pilgrimage to the Holy Land, carrying along with him the heart of Robert Bruce. It is distinguished as the first place in Scotland where the Greek language was taught, and as having sent forth from its seminary the celebrated scholar Andrew Melville; it was the birth-place of the warlike Marquis of Montrose, and the house in which he was born was occupied as an inn not many years ago. It is also celebrated as the birth-place of Joseph Hume, the distinguished statesman, who represented Montrose for a great number of years in the British Senate, and to whose memory a beautiful monument has been raised in High-street. Montrose bestows the title of Duke upon the chief of the family of Graham. This was the first port made by the French fleet, in December, 1715, with the Chevalier on board; and that prince embarked at the same place in the month of February of the following year. The High-street of Montrose is of great width, the houses are lofty, many of them having their gable towards the street, which gives to the town an ancient aspect; and not only are the main streets strikingly clean, but the secondary ones also are neat and gas-lighted. About the centre of the High-street is the Town-house, a neat plain building of two storeys, with an arcade below, where the Post-office is situated. The South Esk is crossed by a magnificent suspension bridge, on the precise site of the former wooden one. The foundation-stone of the masonry was laid in September, 1828, and the bridge declared opened in 1829. It was designed by Captain Brown, R.N., patentee, and finished at an expense of upwards of £20,000. It stretches across the river in a noble span—the distance between the points of suspension being 432 feet, and, together with its approaches, the structure extends 800 feet. It forms a roadway of 26 feet in breadth, having a footpath on each side railed off. This structure is a great ornament to the town, and Bridge-street forms a very handsome approach to it. The river at the bridge is very deep, having 35 feet of water at spring tides, and 20 feet at low water in ordinary tides; and so rapid that during ebb it frequently runs at the rate of six miles an hour. The harbour, formed by the river and an arm of the sea, is very commodious, and a safe asylum for vessels in tempestuous weather. Two lighthouses have been erected at a very great expense. They are a most valuable improvement, as they enable ships to enter the port in the darkest of nights. A larger house, in which the keeper of the lights resides, is provided with accommodation for the reception and recovery of persons who have suffered shipwreck; and attached to this praiseworthy establishment is a life-boat. The quays in the harbour are very judiciously planned—built in the most substantial manner, and there is a wet dock and a patent slip. The port has a custom-house belonging to it, which comprehends within its bounds the coast from the Red-head on the south, to Bervie-brow or the Todhead on the north. The number of vessels belonging to the port in 1864 was 124, with an aggregate tonnage of 17,697. The Customs' revenue of the port for the years ending March, 1863, was £18,413; in 1864, £11,844; in 1865, £9,590. The shipping trade includes flax, corn, timber, coal, and cured fish. The principal manufactures of Montrose comprise flax spinning, linen yarns, sheetings, and sail-cloth, which are carried on extensively; but there are various other branches of trading industry of considerable importance, among which may be enumerated rope and sail making, ship-building, iron-founding, tanning, and two starch manufactories. The extent of the wood trade at this port deserves special mention, as it is believed to be second only to that of Greenock. There are eight branch banks and a savings' bank—the latter with government security. Several commodious inns afford the necessary accommodation to visitors; the principal are the 'Star,' the 'Crown,' and the 'Railway.' The Downs or Links are situated between the town and the sea, and are the most extensive of any in Scotland, comprehending a circuit of several miles, finely formed by nature for the favourite and healthful Scots' game of golf, and the popular game of cricket, both of which are much practised. The railway passing through the Links has a little curtailed their dimensions. Montrose has its assembly-rooms and other places of amusement; and numerous institutions, charitable, educational, scientific, and social. Three admirably conducted newspapers issue weekly from the Montrose press—the 'Review' (liberal), the 'Standard' (conservative), and the 'Penny Press, or Everybody's Paper' (independent). The erection of Montrose into a royal burgh has generally been referred to the year 1352, in the reign of David II.; but there is good reason for believing that the first charter emanated from David I. The municipal government is vested in the provost, three magistrates, dean of guild, hospital master, treasurer, and twelve councillors. The town is protected by a body of police, under the superintendence of commissioners. A burgh or bailie court is held every Thursday in the court-room; a justice of peace court on the first Monday of every month, and a sheriff's court on the third Friday in the months of January, March, May, July, September, and November; the two last mentioned courts are for adjudicating small debt claims. The burgh is united with those of Forfar, Brechin, Arbroath, and Inverbervie, in returning a representative to parliament. The present member is W. E. Baxter, Esq., Ashcliff, Dundee. There are three volunteer corps in Montrose, viz., Artillery, and the first and second companies of Rifles. Theparish church is a large building, elegantly finished, measuring 98 feet long by 65 over walls. This church has two galleries, and is capable of holding 2,500 people; the steeple is lofty, surmounted by a towering spire, which can be seen at a considerable distance. There are two handsome Free churches and two Episcopalian chapels; and various other places of worship are in the town (for which see the end of the 'Directory' of this town.) The public charities of Montrose are very numerous; among these are the ancient Hospital Fund, under the guardianship of the town; the relief from this charity is distributed among about 144 persons, not paupers; the Royal Lunatic Asylum, incorporated by royal charter in 1810, now occupies a handsome building on an elevated site at Hill-side, about a mile and a half from the town, and from which there is an extensive prospect of the surroun ing country; an Infirmary and Dispensary, originally incorporated with the Lunatic Asylum, is still under the charge of the directors of that institution; and Dorward's House of Refuge, all of which occupy capacious and ornamental structures. There are also several Mortifications, which afford assistance to the deserving and indigent poor of the town. The Academy, situated on the Links, is a handsome erection, surmounted by a neat dome; the establishment comprises a rector, and six teachers in the various branches of mathematics, the Greek, Latin, and modern languages, writing and arithmetic, English grammar, drawing, &c. Many other educational establishments are supported; and the numerous societies, both religious and benevolent, maintained in the town, are highly creditable to the munificence of its residents. Several libraries and reading-rooms are supported, and an interesting museum is contained in a very tasteful building in Panmure-place. The market is on Friday; and great hiring fairs are held on the Fridays next after Whit-Sunday and Martinmas (old style), 26th May and 22nd November.

CRAIG parish occupies the peninsular corner of land between the sea and the Montrose basin. The islet called INCH BRAYOCK, or ROSSIE ISLAND, in the neck of water connecting the basin with the sea, belongs to the parish; and there are also within its limits the two small fishing villages of USAN and FERRYDEN. The land is generally arable, and beneath the surface nature has deposited abundance of limestone.

The parish of DUN lies between Montrose and Brechin, on the north bank of the South Esk. The land is generally fertile, and the surface for the most part level. In the parish is a small lake, called Dun's Dish.

MARYTOUN (or Maryton) is a parish, lying on the south side of the South Esk, and the west side of the Basin of Montrose, bounded by Craig parish (before-mentioned) on the south. The land is arable and well cultivated, and the parish derives considerable advantage from its proximity to the town of Montrose.

LOGIE-PERT, or LOGIE MONTROSE, as it was formerly called, was annexed to the parish of Pert about the early part of 1600; it is situated about five and a half miles S.E. from Montrose, extending five miles from east to west, and three miles from north to south. The Parish church is situated on the banks of the North Esk, commonly termed the North Water. HILL-SIDE, which forms a suburb to Montrose, is partly in this parish, the remainder in the parish of Montrose. There is a flax-spinning mill and a bleach works in the parish.

NEWTYLE.

IS a parish and village—the latter situated on the road from Dundee to Meigle (in Perthshire), 11 miles north-east from the former town, and somewhat above two south from the latter. It is a station on the Dundee and Newtyle Railway. The neighbourhood is very pleasant and picturesque, and the village itself respectable. In the summer season it is a resort for visitors, especially from Dundee. It presents inducements to manufacturers from Dundee and other towns to establish works in this district, land being comparatively cheap and wages low; the locality of Newtyle is likewise considered most eligible as a depot for grain and other agricultural produce. The inhabitants of the village are occupied in agricultural pursuits and in weaving; the articles produced from the loom are chiefly coarse cloths used for packing. The village is well supplied with gas from works in connection with Mr. Robert Thomas' artificial manure manufactory. The places of worship are Established, Free, and United Presbyterian Churches—one of each, and there are schools connected with the former. The parish, which lies in the south-west part of the county, extends two miles in length by one and three-quarters in breadth, including a portion of the Sidlaw hills, from which the lands decline into the rich flat exposure of Strathmore. Near the village are the remains of the castle of Hatton, built by Lawrence, Lord Oliphant, in the year 1575; and contiguous to these ruins some vestiges are visible of the still more ancient castle of Balcraig.

TANNADICE, ABERLEMNO,

AND OATHLAW.

TANNADICE is a parish, situated nearly in the centre of the county, extending about twelve miles in length by from four to eight in breadth: 5 miles E. from Forfar (its post town), and 8 miles W. from Brechin. Along the western border of the parish passes the South Esk river, and on the eastern side courses the Noran water; on the banks of these streams the land is finely enclosed, cultivated and planted, and exhibits a variety of romantic scenes. The village of Tannadice is pleasantly situated on the north bank of the river Esk, seven miles and a half W. from Brechin.

AMBERLEMNO parish lies on the banks of the South Esk, and about 12 miles from the sea-coast; 5 miles E. from Forfar, its post town, and 6 miles W. from Brechin, bounded on the N. by Tannadice and Caresston, from which it is separated by the Esk; on the N.E. and E. by Brechin, on the S.E. by Guthrie, and on the S. and W. by Rescobie. The land is undulating and fertile, and agriculture is pursued with spirit and success There are several quarries in the parish, from which are obtained good pavement stones and gray slates, and which employ a good many inhabitants. In the parish churchyard, which is about 6 miles S.W. from Brechin, is an antique obelisk, covered with hieroglyphics, and also a little to the north of the parish church are three antique obelisks, two of which are also covered with hieroglyphics, which are supposed to have been erected to commemorate a signal victory obtained over the Danes near this place. Antiquarians, however, are not agreed as to the design for which they were erected. A little to the eastward of the church are the ruins of the Castle of Flemington, and about 2 miles N.E. from the church are also the ruins of Melgund Castle, which is supposed to have been erected by Cardinal Beaton. The "vitrified Fort of Finhaven," is about a mile W. from the parish church.

OATHLAW or FINHAVEN, is a parish 4 miles N. from Forfar its post town, situated on the south bank of the South Esk; its length from east to west is about 6 miles, and its greatest breadth about 3 miles; it is bounded on the north by Tannadice, and on the east by Aberlemno. The hill of Finhaven with its vitrified fort is about 3 miles from the parish church; it has much attracted the attention of antiquarians of late, but the mode of its construction and the use for which it was designed, and the era to which it belongs, still remains a mystery. Situated about 1½ miles east of the church is the castle of Finhaven, now in ruins, once the residence of the Earl of Lindsay and Crawford. David G. Gardyne, Esq. of Finhason, is now building a handsome mansion near the ruins of the ancient castle. There are quarries of excellent free stone in the parish.

POST OFFICE, TANNADICE, Margaret Gray, Post Mistress.—Letters from all parts arrive from Forfar, at twenty-five minutes before ten, morning, and are despatched thereto at five minutes before eleven.

POST OFFICE, ABERLEMNO, John Davidson, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Forfar) at twenty minutes before ten, morning, and are despatched thereto at half-past eleven.

Letters for OATHLOW PARISH are received from and despatched by runner from Forfar, at same time as Tannadice. Letters for the above places should be addressed near FORFAR.

CONVEYANCE BY RAILWAY.

Station at ALDBAR ROAD, on the Scottish North-Eastern Line, about 3½ miles from Aberlemno

HADDINGTONSHIRE,

OR EAST LOTHIAN, lies in the south-eastern part of Scotland; bounded on the north by the Frith of Forth, on the east by that strait and also by the North Sea, on the south by Berwickshire, and on the west by Edinburghshire, or Mid Lothian: from east to west it extends twenty-five miles; from north to south, at the middle, sixteen—at the east end it is not more than ten miles across, and at the west end about twelve: its surface presents an area of about two hundred and seventy-two square miles, or 174,080 statute acres.

The EARLY HISTORY of this county is so intimately connected with that of Edinburgh, as to render unnecessary a lengthened recurrence to this subject. The Saxons denominated the whole country, lying along the sea and the forth, Lothian; afterwards it was divided into three parts, called, from their relative situation to each other, East Lothian, Mid Lothian, and West Lothian. In 1020, this district, with other parts of the Lothians, was ceded to Malcolm II. In succeeding centuries the shire suffered the horrors of pillage and conflagration on all occasions of the armies of England being sent to invade the country, or to molest or punish the capital. In 1296, and again in 1650, the sanguinary battles of Dunbar were fought within the county; and in the critical year of 1745, it was the scene of the conflict at Prestonpans—since which period it has enjoyed almost uninterrupted repose and tranquillity.

SOIL AND SURFACE, PRODUCE AND MANUFACTURES.—In point of soil, cultivation and produce, this county holds the first rank in Scotland; and in some of these respects, particularly the mode of husbandry, it will bear a comparison with the most favoured districts in England. The greatest elevations in East Lothian, above the level of the sea, are Traprain Law, 700 feet; North Berwick Law, 940; and Shartleton Hill, 1,615. During the reigns of David I., Malcolm IV., and William the Lion, the acreage of this county was in the possession of only a few barons, who, at their pleasure, disposed of not only the lands, but the men who lived upon them, without hindrance. In these times the kings, the nobles, and the churchmen, were all tillers of the soil; and in this district every manor had its hamlet, its church, its mill, its kiln, and its brewhouse. The monks, indeed, were indefatigable husbandmen, and by their labour and skill gave the county its first character for agriculture. In this point of view, it may be divided into four districts. The first is a sloping tract of land, with a fertile soil. The second is a ride of ground north of the Tyne, descending partly towards that river, and partly towards the coast-land; it comprehends a great proportion of the arable land of the county. The third consists of a tract varying in breadth, elevated above the midlands, and continuing along the base of the mountains nearly the whole extent of the county. The fourth comprises an extensive range of mountains, which commences at the south-west extremity of the shire, and terminates in a high promontory called St. Abb's Head; the greater part of this is moor, but some spots between the hills are kept under a regular rotation of crops. Having nearly two sides begirt by the sea, the county derives a great part of its beauty and opulence from this circumstance. So commodiously has nature disposed the surface of East Lothian into ranges of hills and fertile dales, that some tourists, from topographical retrospection, have declared Haddingtonshire to be the Northampton of Great Britain. Excellent gardens and orchards flourished in this county as early as the twelfth century; and pulse seems to have been cultivated here in the thirteenth—the latter circumstance is attested by the fact of the English soldiers, during their siege of Dirleton castle, having subsisted on the pease which grew in the adjacent fields. The thriving state of the agriculture of this county in the fourteenth century is noticed by Fordun. He says, in 1336 East Lothian was embroiled in warfare, and its field operations impeded by the outrage committed by Alan of Wyntown in carrying off, by violence, one of the daughters of the Earl of Seton; and he adds, that so great was the ferment upon this occasion, that the labour of a hundred ploughs was suspended during a whole year. The fertility of East Lothian in the seventeenth century is ascertained by a passage in 'Whitelock's Memoirs,' where it is stated that the soldiers who accompanied Cromwell in his expedition into Scotland, in 1650, where astonished to find in that district 'the greatest plenty of corn they ever saw, not one of the fields being fallow.' But it is since the period of the union that, in this district particularly, agricultural improvements have manifested themselves extensively and beneficially, and called forth the exertions and science of spirited individuals, proprietors of the soil: they have introduced the best systems of husbandry, and employed the most approved implements and machines—have drained, planted, and enclosed, until East Lothian has become one of the most beautiful and productive shires in North Britain. The application of steam power here to the laborious operations of threshing, &c., present to the eye the aspect of a manufacturing district, from the number of tall chimneys which rise in every direction. Exclusive of farming, which is the chief pursuit of the inhabitants, many on the coast are employed in fishing, fish-curing, salt-making, and commercial occupations; but manufactures are not extensive in any part of the county: linen and woollen manufactories once existed, but have been long discontinued; the principal articles now exported from East Lothian are corn, whisky, ale, porter, coal, earthenware, soap, and fish. The west of the shire abounds with coal; besides which, limestone and red granite constitute the chief mineral substances.

RIVERS, &c.—Several streams intersect the county, but none of them merit the title of river except the Tyne, which, passing Haddington, falls into the sea at Tynninghame, where it forms a bay. The shire is destitute of natural lakes, but this deficiency seems no way injurious to the district, and is amply made up by the Frith of Forth, which yields a large supply of fish. The North British Railway passes through the county, and possesses stations in all the principal towns; there are also one or two branches diverging from it.

Haddingtonshire comprises twenty-three complete parishes and two parts of parishes, and three royal burghs—Haddington, Dunbar, and North Berwick: these join with Lauder (in Berwickshire), and Jedburgh in (Roxburghshire), in sending one member to arliament, and the county at large returns another.

ABERLADY AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

THE parish of Aberlady lies S.E. on the south coast of the mouth of the Frith of Forth; it is very fertile, and contains an area of six square miles. It is bounded on the south by Gladsmuir and Haddington, and on the east also by the latter parish and Dirleton. The beach here presents such facilities for the disembarkation of an invading force, that in the course of the last war, when Britain was menaced with invasion by France, serious apprehensions were entertained, in all the southern districts of Scotland, that the enterprising Bonaparte might have thought proper to select it as one of the chief points of attack, in order to divide the operations of the British. The village is situated 15 miles W. from Edinburgh, 5½ W.N.W. from Haddington, and 4½ S. from Dirleton, at the head of a long flat sandy beach, and at the mouth of the small river Peffer. James VI., by charter, erected this parish into a temporal barony, which grant it was said was confirmed by Charles in 1633, but the privileges or immunities conferred thereby are not manifest in the present day. The Earl of Wemyss and March is patron of the parish. The seat of this nobleman, Gosford House, stands nearly a mile south-west of the village. The edifice, which is surrounded by beautiful enclosed grounds, contains a valuable collection of rare paintings, which are shewn, in a liberal and courteous manner, to visitors. About a mile from Aberlady, on the north-east, is Luffness House, a mansion belonging to the Hon. Caroline Hope, built in 1549, as a fortification by the French general, de Thermes, for the purpose of awing the garrison of Haddington, then in possession of the English. The parish church is a neat structure, and the parochial school is a well-conducted institution.

To HADDINGTON, Jas. Dawson

ATHELSTANEFORD AND DREM.

ATHELSTANE parish lies on the north-east boundary of Haddington, and is separated on the north by Dirleton, from the mouth of the Forth; the small village lies within 5½ miles s. from North Berwick, 5 s.e. from Aberlady, and 3 N.E. from Haddington. DREM, 2¾ miles distant is a station on the North British Line. It contains a neat and modern church, a parochial school, and a brewery. This parish possesses considerable interest from the circumstance of having for its ministers successively, in the early part of the last century, two men of eminent poetical genius—Blair, author of 'The Grave,' and Home, author of 'Douglas,' to whose memory the inhabitants, assisted by the subscription of others, have erected a handsome monument in the centre of the village. The manse occupied by the first mentioned, stood opposite the present modern manse, near the west end of the churchyard. The site is now comprised in the minister's garden, where an apple tree is pointed out as having stood close to the window of the poet's study. On the author of 'Douglas' leaving his pastoral charge, which he did from disgust at the proceedings instituted against him by the presbytery and the kirk in general for the publication of so secular a work, he built and retired to an elegant mansion, in the neighbourhood, still exhibited as a pattern of his taste.

DIRLETON, WITH GULLANE, FENTON, KINGSTON,

AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

DIRLETON, one of the neatest rural vilages in this county, and perhaps in Scotland, is 20 miles E.N.E. from Edinburgh, 7 N. from Haddington, 4½ N.E. from Aberlady, and nearly three W. form North Berwick; charmingly seated at the head of a low meadow, extending about a mile and a half towards the sea—the houses, which for the most part are built in a plain, neat, Gothic style, having tastefully arranged gardens, nearly surround an extensive triangular green, interpersed with trees. On the south side of this space, stands the venerable and magnificent ruin of Dirleton castle embosomed among evergreens, and its massive towers richly clothed with ivy. The origin of this castle is lost in the darkness of the middle ages—it is ascertained, however, to have belonged to a noble family, the in ninth century, named DeVallebus or DeVaux, from whom it was taken, after a tedious seige, by Edward I, in 1298. In 1650 it was reduced and dismantled by the parliamentary general, Lambert. About the middle of the 15th century, this castle and the estate bestowed the title of Earl of Dirleton on the Halyburton family.

From ancient documents, it would appear, that a Collegiate church was founded here in 1444, by Sir Walter Halyburton; but little is known of its character or site. The present parish church, which stands a little below the green, is a handsome erection, bearing date 1661, and considerably enlarged in 1825—it has a substantial square tower; in 1864 a handsome new Gothic open roof was constructed, and the whole woodwork stained and varnished, adding much to its beauty. The parish school stands near the church. The parish, which extends about six miles in length, by four and a half in breadth, is low, and with the exception of a sandy stripe along the shore, which is used as a rabbit warren, is fertile to a degree not surpassed by any district in East Lothian, yielding excellent green crops and pasture. Besides Dirleton, the parish contains three other villages, namely—GULLANE, FENTON, and KINGSTON.

GULLANE, is a small but respectable village, of rather ancient aspect, two miles south-west from Direton. At one time this was the capital of the parish to which it gave its name; but in 1612 the seat of worship was removed by act of parliament, to Dirleton, and at the same time changing the name of the parish to its present appellation. On the east side of the Links, stand the ruins of the ancient kirk, which was dedicated to St. Andrew, and was well endowed. It it mentioned by Grose, that the last vicar of the church of Gullane, before its abandonment, was deprived of his living by James VI, for no other misdemeanour than that of smoking tobacco, a custom which the king, it is said, held in abhorrence. On the small bleak island of Fidra, lying off this coast, was an ecclesiastical structure, which served the purpose of a lazaretto in times of severe plague; and its windows acted as beacons to the mariner at night, in warning him of the dangers of an unsafe shore. The Links in the vicinity of Gullane are the habitation of vast numbers of rabbits, and are farmed as a warren at a considerable rent; the markets of Edinburgh are supplied with great quantities annually from the burrows here. The downs of this neighbourhood have been long celebrated for rearing and training race or fine riding horses. Within the last few years, the Links of Gullane have become a favorite resort of the lovers of the ancient game of golf, and it is also rising into importance as a resort for summer visitors.

DUNBAR,

WITH BELHAVEN, EAST BARNS, WEST BARNS, SPOTT AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

DUNBAR is a royal burgh and sea-port, the seat of a presbytery, and the capital of its parish and of the eastern part of the district of East Lothian; 28 miles E. from Edinburgh, 11 E. from Haddington, and 30 N.N.W. from Berwick-upon-Tweed; occupying a slightly elevated piece of ground on the shore of the North Sea, and the North British Railway passes on the south side of the town, where there is a handsome station. Dunbar, at a very early period, was considered a place of strength and commercial importance; but there was no harbour, until Oliver Cromwell, by a grant of £300, began or promoted the construction of one, which now forms the east pier of the present harbour; in 1820 it was improved, with the addition of a good dry and graving dock. About twelve years ago, a new harbour, called by the permission of her Majesty 'Victoria harbour,' was built at the joint expense of the town and fishery board. It occupies a space of about five acres, and affords ample accommodation to the vessels and boats frequenting Dunbar for fishing purposes. On the west side of the harbour, and within high-water mark, stands the venerable ruins of a castle, which in former ages must have been very extensive and formidable; it is based upon rocks, but the date of its erection cannot be conjectured: it was always considered a station of great defensive consequence, as a key to Scotland on the east border; and it has often been beseiged, and as often bravely defended. In this castle Edward II. took refuge, after his defeat at Bannockburn; and to this secure asylum Bothwell fled, and left the unfortunate Mary in the hands of the associated lords, after the disastrous rencontre at Carberry hill; it was subsequently demolished by order of the Scottish parliament, and nothing but dilapitated fragments of this once almost impregnable fortress are now visible, and these have have been much reduced by the excavations for Victoria harbour. On a columnar rocky projection, between these ruins and the harbour, was the battery; this has been abandoned by government, and it is now used as a storehouse.

The town is built upon a gentle rise from the beach; the principal street is wide and spacious, and the chief thoroughfares are macadamised; the streets and shops are lighted with gas; and a good supply of soft water is conveyed to the town, from a distance of two miles by means of pipes. In High-street are branches of the 'Commercial Bank of Scotland' and the 'City of Glasgow Bank' and several insurance agency offices, and there is on a prominent site at the south end, a handsome place of worship in connection with the Free church of Scotland. In Westport is a branch of the 'British Linen Company's Bank,' and at the shore is a custom house. The houses are generally large and of pleasing exterior, and few towns present to the stranger a more agreeable and respectable appearance. Dunbar House, the mansion of the Earl of Lauderdale; stands at the northern end of the main street; its grand front faces the sea, and consists of two extensive wings, with a circular centre, forming an elegant elevated portico, supported by handsome corresponding pillars; on the top of the centre, at the back of the edifice and facing the street, is a finely executed large proportional figure of that ideal animal the spynx, in a couchant position, and the wings erect; the house is now used as a barracks for the militia.

The herring fishery has long been a very considerable source of wealth to Dunbar. Frequently five hundred boats are at the station, and since the opening of the railway, large quantities are sent, in a green state, to the inland counties—sometimes to the extent of from two to three hundred tons a day. A great weight is also cured into white or red herrings, and are then exported to the Baltic, the Mediterranean, the West Indies, and to Ireland; as many as ten thousand barrels have been cured here in one season. Cod-fishing is likwise a profitable pursuit here; the produce is mostly despatched to meet the London demand; and Edinburgh is also a market for white fish, lobsters &c., in great supply from this port. The district around Dunbar is one of the richest and best cultivated in Scotland, and produces a much greater supply than is required by the inhabitants. The chief exports are corn and fish, and the imports coal and timber. The manufactures of Dunbar were at one period numerous and extensive: the most important branch now in operation is fish-curing, comprising several extensive concerns. The domestic trade furnishes all the necessary articles of life, and the shops exhibit a respectable display of useful and fashionable productions. Dunbar was elevated to the rank of a royal burgh by David II., and its burghal privileges were confirmed and extended by James IV. and James

VI.: it was governed by a provost and three bailies, a treasurer, town clerk and chamberlain, with fifteen members of council. An act of parliament for reducing the number of the municipal corporations in Scotland, has now limited the number of corporate officers in Dunbar to a provost, three bailies, a treasurer, and seven councillors. This burgh joins with Jedburgh, Lauder, Haddington, and North Berwick, in returning one member to parliament.

At the southern end of the High-street stands the elegant parish church, the erection of which commenced (on the site of the old kirk) in the summer of the year 1819, and it was opened on the 16th September, 1821; its achitectural style is the modern Gothic, and the body of the edifice is very commodious, containing eighteen hundred sittings; a very handsome square tower, with a pinnacle at each corner, embellishes the structure: the entire of the building is of a rather dark red stone, not unlike brick when seen at a distance; but the quality of the material is considered of superior excellence and durability: the completion of the fabric cost upwards of £8000. The interior is enriched with a beautiful marble monument to the memory of George Home, lord high treasurer of Scotland in the reign of James VI.; the height of this fine memorial is 26 feet, and its breadth twelve: while the church was re-building, the most judicious care was taken not to injure or disturb what is deemed the finest piece of tomb sculpture in Scotland. The Seceders have two places of worship here; the Free church, the Wesleyan Methodists and Baptists each one. The town has the advantage of a good grammar school, wherein all the useful branches of education are taught: a commodious building was erected in 1823 (on the beach, near the church), consisting of two wings, with a house for the master in the centre; it is an addition of great utility and convenience to this excellent establishment. There are several other excellent private schools in the town, one under the management of the Free church. Other institutions, belonging to the burgh and parish, of a praiseworthy nature are well sustained—amongst these are the burgh school, the parochial schools, and a charity, and an infants' school for children of the humbler classes.

The country about Dunbar is exceeedingly pleasant and the prospects from the high grounds, which rise gradually from the sea coasts, are expansive, and present a variety of delightful objects; the most striking of these are the North Berwick Law and Tantallan Castle, the Bass, the Isle of May, the Frith of Forth, and the mountains of Angus. The parish of Dunbar extends about eight miles along the coast; the soil is rich and dry, and produces all kinds of crops as early as any in Scotland. The market, a bulk one, is held on Tuesday, the grain is all weighed, and delivered immediately on being sold. There are two annual fairs—one on the first Tuesday after the 26th of May, the other on the first Tuesday after the 22nd of November.

Belhaven is a remarkably neat village, included within the jurisdiction of the burgh of Dunbar, situated about a mile west from that town, at the head of a small bay of the sea, which in former times formed a good harbour. It gives the title of lord to a branch of the family of Hamilton. Belhaven is the principal watering place of Dunbar, and is fast rising into importance not only on account of the great extent and beauty of the sands for bathing purposes, but also from the erection of villas for the accommodation of vistors. A magnificent and unique building has just been erected by William Brodie, Esq., on a commanding site near the village, and is intended as the first of a series of similar structures which will, when completed form a very fine crescent, having a view of the surrounding country almost unequalled. At a short distance from the village is the remains of an ancient British cemetery, and near the beach is a valuable mineral spring which at one time was a source of great attraction and is again about to be restored to its former consequence; there is also a school in the village especially directed to the training of females for industrial occupations in addition to all the useful branches of education. Between Belhaven and West Barns are the Seafield Brick and Tile Works; a large quantity of drainage tiles, bricks, and roofing tiles are manufactured here and on account of their superior quality find a ready market, not only in this district but are also sent by rail to the extremity of Berwickshire, and shipped extensively to the northern ports of Scotland.

East Barns is a village in Dunbar parish, about three miles south-east from that town, and a little to the right of the road leading thence to Berwick. In this village there is a school for the eastern district of the parish.

West Barns another part of the royalty of Dunbar, is about half a mile west from Belhaven. In this village, on the river Biel, are extensive corn and flour mills, there is also a brewery, a manufactory for agricultural implements, and the extensive paper mills of Messrs. A. Annandale and Sons. Here also is the parochial school of Dunbar, an excellently conducted and numerously attended institution.

Spott is a a small rural village in the parish of that name, situated two miles south from Dunbar. The parish is of an irregular figure, being about five miles in length by two in breath; the low country is well enclosed and cultivated, and the higher grounds afford good pasture. Spott House, in this parish, is romantically perched upon a rock, rising from a low glen, surrounded with beautiful pleasure grounds. In this neighbourhood was fought, on the 3rd of September, 1650, the battle of Down-hill (so decisively unfortunate to the royal cause), in which the Scotch forces were totally routed by Cromwell.

FALA & SOUTRA, WITH HUMBIE, & BLACKSHIELS.

FALA and SOUTRA, is an united parish; the first of which is within the eastern border of Edinburghshire, the other in the county of Haddington. The villages of Fala and Fala-Dam are situated on the road from Edinburgh to Lauder, about 14 miles from the former, and 11 from Haddington. The parish comprehends part of the Lammermoor ridge, of which Soutra hill is the north-west point. From the foot of the hill the surface is nearly level, having a tolerably fertile soil; and the lands are in a high state of cultivation. The kirk of Fala stands on an eminence over-hanging the road. The parish of HUMBIE lies in the south-western part of Haddingtonshire; bounded by Salton and Ormiston on the north, part of Bolton and Gifford on the east, and Fala and Soutra on the west. It is five miles in length, by rather more than three in breadth, lying chiefly on the Lammermoor range of hills near Berwickshire. The high lands are pastoral, but the low grounds are well enclosed and cultivated. Ironstone and coal are said to lie under the surface of some parts, but neither has been wrought. A church of the Establishment, a Free church and a Parochial school are in the parish.

POST OFFICE, BLACKSHIELS, Mitchell Alexander, Post Master. Letters from all parts arrive (from Edinburgh), at half-past eight, morning, and are despatched thereto at half-past five, evening.

THIS, an united parish, is bounded by Morham and Whittingham on the north and east, and by Gifford on the west, extending from near the centre of the county southward, among the Lammermoor hills, to the borders of Berwickshire. Within the parish are fine arable lands and also sheep walks; and the district contains a number of remains of antiquity. Among the latter are the ruins of Nunraw, a nunnery, once of great importance, now the residence and property of Robert James A. Hay, Esq. J.P. (of Linplum). The village of Garvald, a nice sequestered rural little place, is seated in a fertile valley, on the banks of the small river Papana, which a little lower is called Biel water, 22 miles E.S.E. from Edinburgh, 8½ S.W. from Dunbar, 5 S. from Linton, and nearly 6 S.E. from Haddington.

POST OFFICE, GARVALD, John Anderson, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Prestonkirk), at half-past one afternoon, and are despatched thereto at half-past three afternoon.

GIFFORD AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

GIFFORD is a respectable village, and the capital of the parish of Yester, 20 miles E.S.E. from Edinburgh, 9 S.E. from Tranent, and 4 S. from Haddington; charmingly situated on a rivulet, tributary to the Tyne. The village, which is well built, consists of two spacious streets, of unequal length, one end of the longest being ornamented by a fine avenue of lofty trees, which extends for a mile in a southerly direction and terminates at Yester House, the noble family mansion of the Marquis of Tweeddale—whose example and fostering influence has accomplished so much in advancing the agriculture of Scotland. The parish church stands at the eastern end of the shorter street, and the parochial school at the north end of the longer one: the former, which was erected in 1708, contains a pulpit of oak, of much greater antiquity than the building itself, called Knox's pulpit, so called from this celebrated preacher having been, it is said, born in Gifford, but which circumstance is denied by very creditable authorities, and the honour bestowed upon Haddington. The scenery around here is very romantic, and few places can boast of more picturesque or beautiful prospects than are presented to the eye in the neighbourhood of Gifford. Fairs are held here on the last Tuesday in March, the third Tuesday in June, and the first Tuesday in October: and the 'United East Lothian Agricultural Society' hold a meeting here annually, on the first Tuesday in October, for the show of rams.

POST OFFICE, GIFFORD, Janet Colston, Post Mistress.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Haddington) at ten morning and are despatched thereto at four afternoon.

HADDINGTON,

WITH THE VILLAGE OF BOLTON AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

HADDINGTON is a royal burgh, the seat of a presbytery, the county town of East Lothian, and the capital of the parish of its name; 17 miles E. from Edinburgh, 38 N.W. from Berwick-upon-Tweed, 11 W. from Dunbar, and 9½ S. from North-Berwick; eligibly and pleasantly situated on the left bank of the river Tyne, and is the terminus of a branch line from the North British Railway. Haddington is unquestionably of very ancient origin; for in a charter granted by Ada, the widow of Prince Henry (and mother of Malcolm IV and William the Lion), dated 1178, she styled it Meum Burgum de Haddington. The suburb of the town, called Nungate, derives its name from a nunnery founded by Ada, which stood about a quarter of a mile from the town; it was in this abbey or nunnery that a parliament was convened on the 7th July, 1548, during the seige of Haddington, when consent was given to the marriage of the unfortunate Mary with the Dauphin of France, and to her being educated at that court. At the east end of Nungate is seen the roofless ruin of St. Martin's Church, which has been but little used since the reformation. The town has suffered severely, at different periods, by conflagrations and inundations; in 1216 it was burnt by King John, and in 1244 it shared the same fate by accident. In 1358 whole villages were swept off by the overflow of the Tyne, the waters of which approached the monastery, 'when' (it is related by a monkish chronicle), 'a nun seized the statute of the Virgin, and threatened to throw it into the flood unless she (Mary) protected her house from destruction—whereupon the waters gradually retired within their ordinary banks.' The last great conflagration which was accidental, occurred about two hundred years ago by the carelessness of a nurserymaid. The 4th of October, 1775, is memorable for the rising of the Tyne 17 feet, at which height it continued for several hours; a plate recording this occurrence is fixed at the east corner of High Street.

Considering the great antiquity of this burgh, it may be justly styled handsome. The streets, which are spacious, are gas lighted by a company formed in 1835, whose works are erected at the west end of the town, in which quarter conspicuously stand the County Buildings; the architecture of which is of the old English style; they contain sheriff and justice of peace court-rooms, with appropriate offices, and jury and witness rooms; the erection of this building cost £5,470. The Town's Buildings, to which was added, in 1831, a fine spire, one hundred and seventy feet in height, at an expense of about £1,500, may be recognised as another feature of improvement to the burgh; they comprise the burgh council-room, assembly and public reading-room, and the gaol; this pile, which evidently has been erected at different periods, forms the extreme western end of that long range of buildings separating the spacious High-street from the equally wide Market-street. In the Corn Exchange (opened 29th September, 1854), is held one of the most animated grain markets in the kingdom. The county Lunatic Asylum (opened in 1866), stands a short distance from the town, and is a spacious edifice. The suburb of Nungate is approached across the Tyne by the Waterloo-bridge, of one arch, built in 1817; as also by another bridge, ancient and narrow, of three small arches. The corporation of this burgh consists of a provost, three bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, and eighteen councillors; they hold a court every Monday; a sheriff and commissary court sits every Thursday; one for small debts every alternate Thursday; a justice of peace court the second Tuesday of each month; a quarter sessions is held on the first Tuesdays of March, May and August, and on the last Tuesday of October; and an adjourned quarter session on the second Thursday in January. Haddington unites with Dunbar, Jedburgh, Lauder, and North Berwick, in returning one member to parliament.

The trade of Haddington consists principally in corn; on the market days immense quantities are brought for sale, and it is considered one of the leading grain marts of Scotland. The present manufactures comprise sacking, fire-grates, coach building, and agricultural implements; there is also an extensive brewery, three iron foundries, two tanneries, and three corn mills. Five banking establishments diffuse monetary accommodation—a branch of the 'British Linen Company's Firm,' the 'Bank of Scotland,' 'Commercial Bank of Scotland,' the 'City of Glasgow Bank,' and the Royal Bank of Scotland.' An agricultural society was instituted in Haddington long since, and another at Salton; they were united in 1819, and now form one of the most flourishing local associations in the kingdom, annually distributing in premiums nearly £300; the Marquis of Tweeddale is patron.

The Parish Church is a venerable and capacious structure; it was in former ages the place of worship of the Franciscan monks, to whose extensive religious establishment it was attached; from its architecture and some traditionary records it is supposed to have been erected about the twelfth or thirteenth century; the west end is the only portion now used, in the repair and improvement of which nearly £6,000 were expended in 1811; the east end of the ancient monastery and the old square tower, are now a ruin; in a corner of the edifice is the burial place of the Lauderdale family, who for many generations possessed Lethington, or 'Lennox Love,' at present the seat of Lady Blantyre; and in the aisle there are many statues of the Lauderdale succession, large as life, reclining on beds of state. The designations of the other structures for divine worship, with their respective localities and ministers are given in a subsequent page. The charitable institutions are numerous, and highly creditable to the burgh, as are the educational establishments; and several societies and clubs are established on the most respectable footing, for various laudable objects. Haddington lays claim to the honour of being the natal place of that unbending reformer John Knox, and the house where it is contended he was born was not long since generally pointed out in Gifford-gate; the village of Gifford, however, contests this claim.

The weekly market is held on Friday: the sale of oats commence at twelve, barley at half-past twelve, beans and peas at a quarter to one, and wheat at one. Fairs or trysts are discontinued in Haddington, but the United East Lothian Agricultural Society hold their meetings here, for the show of stock, implements, seeds, &c., for the show of seed, corn in February and October, of stock in March, and roots and poultry in December.

BOLTON is a parish and village—the latter a small one, is situated on the road from Haddington to East Salton, three miles south-west from the former. About the close of the 15th century the lands of Bolton were wrongfully seized by the Hepburns, one of which infamous family, John Hepburn, was executed as the associate of the Earl of Bothwell, his chief in the murder of Darnley. The Church and the Parochial School are both in the village: the former is a handsome substantial erection, in the modern Gothic style, ornamented with a square tower; the latter is a well-built and judiciously conducted institution.

INNERWICK AND OLDHAMSTOCKS.

THE parish of INNERWICK is bounded by Oldhamstocks on the east, Spott and Dunbar on the west, the sea on the north, and Cranshaws and Longformacus (in Berwickshire) on the south. It measures ten miles in length, by a breadth varying from two to three. The land towards the sea coast is level, and very fertile; inland it rises into gently swelling hills, which are ornamented with a variety of plantations, and the fields are all well enclosed. The village of Innerwick is 30 miles E. from Edinburgh, 14 E. from Haddington, and 4 S.E. from Dunbar, lying rather more than a mile to the west of the road leading from the latter town to Berwick.

The Established church, which was built in 1782, is a neat edifice, and stands on a judiciously selected site, close by the village; there is also a Free church, situated about half a mile from the village, about a mile west of which is the modern and handsome mansion of Capt. James Hunter, of Thurston; and about three-quarters of a mile to the south-east of Innerwick are the remains of the castle of that name. The situation of the ruins is rather secluded; they stand on the summit of a rocky eminence, overhanging a woody glen, which divided the castle from the fortlet of Thornton. The castle, which originally belonged to the Hamiltons, of Innerwick, was besieged, taken, and destroyed, after an obstinate resistance by the troops under the Duke of Somerset. There are likewise the remains of several military encampments in the neighbourhood.

OLDHAMSTOCKS parish is between seven and eight miles in length, by a breadth of about two. The parish of Innerwick bounds it on the north-west, west, and part of the south, and Cockburnspath lies on its east. The soil is dry and fertile on the sea coast, and the land rises gradually towards the Lammermoor hills, which are chiefly pastoral. The village is situate three miles south-east from Innerwick, in a valley on the road from Dunbar to Dunse. Dunglass, the elegant modern mansion of Sir James Hall, Bart. ornaments that part of the parish near the coast. Dunglass castle is occasionally noticed in Scottish history; it was originally one of the many strongholds of the Earls of Home, and still gives its title to Lord Dunglass. In 1640 the Earl of Haddington, with several others who had joined the covenanters, took possession of Dunglass castle, for the purpose of watching the garrison of Berwick. While here the Earl received a letter from General Leslie, and was standing in the court yard reading it to the company there assembled, when the powder magazine blew up, which, throwing down one of the side walls, overwhelmed his lordship, together with his auditors, who all perished in the ruins. The deed is said to have been perpetrated by one of the Earl's faithless attendants, who ignited a barrel of gunpowder with a hot iron.

Two fairs are are held at Oldhamstocks, one on the first Thursday after the 20th of July, and the other on the last Thursday in September.

LINTON IN PRESTONKIRK,

STENTON, WHITEKIRK, AND TYNNINGHAME, AND WHITTINGHAM.

LINTON, or EAST LINTON, is a village in the parish of Prestonkirk and a burgh by the adoption of the Police (Scotland) Act, 1862; 22 miles E. from Edinburgh, 8 S.S.E. from North Berwick, 6 W. from Dunbar, and 5 E. from Haddington; eligibly situated on the left bank of the Tyne.

The parish church is at PRESTON, about half a mile north-east from Linton; in the latter are United Secession and Presbyterian chapels and parochial and Free Church schools. The parish of Prestonkirk measures about four miles each way; the surface is agreeably varied, and the soil fertile and well cultivated. The North British line of Railway passes through the village and has a station here. A handsome and commodious Combination Poorhouse has recently been erected. About a mile southwest of Linton are the ruins of Hailes Castle, noted as having been one of the residences of Mary and Bothwell; and one mile north of the village is the elegant mansion of Smeaton. From the southern part of the parish rises the mountain of Traprain Law to the height of seven hundred feet above the level of the sea. A market or meeting is held at Linton every Monday during the harvest season, for hiring reapers.

STENTON is a parish and small village—the latter situated four miles and a half east from Linton. The principal object of attraction in the parish is a beautiful artificial serpentine piece of water, about a mile south of the village; it is nearly two miles in length, and averages about four hundred yards in breadth, though in some places it is double the latter proportion, and in others much narrower; and its course is so sinuous that the stranger can form no just idea of its length, its banks are high, steep, and well clothed with wood, and the scenery throughout the meanderings of the lake is of a delightful and picturesque character; by the urbanity and kindness of the proprietress, Lady Mary C. N. Hamilton, of Archerfield and Biel, parties are allowed to ramble through the grounds and plantations, or make excursions upon the lake, the accommodation of boats for that purpose being provided.

WHITEKIRK is a very small village in the united parish of Whitekirk and Tynninghame, four miles north from Linton; it consists of but a few humble dwellings, the ancient parish church and manse, and the parochial school.

Two miles from Linton and the same from Whitekirk is TYNNINGHAME village, also inconsiderable both in size and population. Tynninghame House, the elegant family seat of the Earl of Haddington, is half a mile from the village, enchantingly environed by woods and walks of superlative beauty, at the head of a park sloping gently southward to the Tyne, near its mouth.

WHITTINGHAM is an extensive parish reaching from the borders of Berwickshire a length of eleven miles northward, but varying in breadth from six to four miles, and still narrower in the middle. In the northern division of the parish are the beautiful pleasure grounds and plantations surrounding the fine mansion of Whittingham, the seat of Lady B. Balfour. The village, a very small one, is three miles south from the village of Linton, and six east from Haddington.

POST OFFICE, LINTON, George Smellie, Post Master.—Letters from Edinburgh and the North arrive at eight morning, and evening at seven, and are despatched thereto at twenty minutes to ten morning, and evening at twenty minutes past seven.

Letters from Berwick and the south arrive at ten morning, and evening at eight, and are despatched thereto at twenty minutes past two afternoon, and twenty minutes past six evening, and to Ayton at fifty minutes past eight morning.

NORTH BERWICK AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

NORTH BERWICK is a parish, containing a royal burgh and sea port, 23 N.E. from Edinburgh, 11 N.W. from Dunbar, and 10 N. from Haddington; situated on a low sandy plain on the shore of the German Ocean, at the entrance of the Frith of Forth, and on a branch of the North British Railway. It consists principally of one long main street, running east and west—another proceeding in a contrary direction, towards the sea; and two or three small ones; and on the East and West Links are some houses of a superior kind. The chief trade of Berwick is the export of corn, potatoes, &c.; the imports are coal and bones for manure. The harbour, which is small, is formed by a tolerably good pier; but, although there is water enough for a large class of vessels, the rocks render the entrance so difficult that but small ones make the attempt; these can ride here in perfect safety, the harbour being boomed. Fidra roads, about two miles to the west, are considered perfectly safe. In the offing are several bleak islets, only of value as rabbit warrens; and three miles to the east within two miles of the coast, is the Bass Rock, the terror of seamen: it is a mile in circumference, and rises 350 feet above the surface of the sea; the channel betwixt it and the land is very deep, and is frequently taken by steam vessels to and from London and Leith. The Bass is inaccessible on all sides, except by a narrow pass on the south-west, towards the land. A fearful caverned passage penetrates through the rock from east to west, which may be explored at low water. Commanding the landing place are the remains of a small fortification, which at one time was of considerable strength, and could then could only be reached by ladders, or a bucket and chains; it existed as a stronghold for a long period; was a state prison during the reigns of the two Stuarts, and became distinguished in the early part of the reign of William III. for the persevering fortitude with which it held out against the new dynasty. The Bass is inhabited by myriads of sea fowl, especially solan geese, and it affords pasturage for about a score of sheep, the flesh of which is in great request by epicures. Nearly opposite the Bass, and about three miles east of Berwick, are the interesting ruins of Tantallan Castle, referred to by Sir Walter Scott as the parting scene of Angus and Marmion, in his poem of 'Marmion.' About a quarter of a mile south-west are seen the extensive remains of an abbey, said to have been founded by David I. for a sisterhood of Cistercian nuns; and not far distant rises North Berwick Law, a conical hill, the summit of which is six hundred feet above the level of the sea.

The date of the first charter, erecting Berwick into a royal burgh, is unknown—that instrument having been lost or destroyed; James VI., however, granted to it a writ confirmatory of all its former privileges, by which it is governed by two bailies, a treasurer, and nine councillors. The burgh joins with Haddington, Dunbar, Lauder, and Jedburgh, in returning one member to Parliament.

The Sheriff's Small Debt Courts are held quarterly, and the Justice of the Peace Courts when necessary.

There are four churches and several good schools in the town. The North Berwick Golfing Club meet at the 'Dalrymple Arms' inn and hotel on the first week in the months of May, June, July and September. This is the principal commercial hotel in the town; every accommodation may be had, and tourists, &c. can procure boats at all times to convey them to the rocks and islands.

Two annual fairs are held, one on the first Thursday after Whitsuntide, the other on the first Thursday after Martinmas, both old style.

POST OFFICE, HIGH STREET.—Peter Brodie, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Edinburgh) at five minutes past eight morning, and at twenty-five minutes past five evening, and are despatched thereto at nine morning, at two afternoon, and at six evening. There is a despatch to Berwick-on-Tweed at half-past three afternoon.

PRESTONPANS,

WITH THE VILLAGES OF PRESTON, COCKENZIE AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

PRESTONPANS is a market and post town, and burgh of barony; 9 miles E. from Edinburgh, 14 S.W. from North Berwick, 9½ W.N.W. from Haddington, and 3 E. from Musselburgh; situated on the shore of the Firth Forth; and the North British Railway passes about half a mile to the west. The town consists principally of one long street running parallel with the Forth, without any public building worthy of particular notice. It is much frequented during the bathing season by visitors from Edinburgh and different parts of the country. The harbour is situated a little to the westward of the town, and is called 'Morison Haven;' it has a quay for shipping coal and the manufactures of the place, which comprise earthenware, fire-bricks, and other articles made from fire-clay, common bricks and tiles, soap and salt; the latter originated here at an early date, having been made by the monks in 1189. There is also the extensive brewery of Messrs. John Fowler and Co., whose superior ales and beer have for a long time received a wide spread reputation. Oysters are taken in the Forth, near the town, and considerable quantities are sent to the markets of Edinburgh and Newcastle, and even to London. The mines of coal are very rich in this neighbourhood; a seam of this valuable mineral is now being worked by Sir G. G. Suttie, Bart., the proprietor, at Preston Grange Colliery, within two hundred yards of the quay at Morison Haven, which is eight to ten feet in thickness—beneath which it is ascertained there exists eight or nine other strata, making an agregate body of workable coal of full forty feet: the roof of this mine is composed of a stratum of fire-clay from two to three feet thick, and a band of ironstone of six inches in thickness. The mines extend a considable distance under the sea; that of the Preston Links Colliery, situated at the east end of the town, has already been driven two hundred yards beyond high-water mark. There are other collieries in the neighbourhood wrought successfully. Prestonpans received its charter as a burgh of barony in 1617, in favour of Sir John Hamilton, of Preston, which ancient village (Preston) is included with the eastern part of the town in the charter: a suburb called 'the Kuittle' or more properly Cuthil, the western portion, also enjoys a charter, which was granted originally to the abbey of Newbotle; this division is possessed by Sir G. G. Suttie, Bart., before mentioned, who is also patron of the parish, which is one of the smallest in the county.

The places of worship are the Parish church and a Free church. The Parochial school, a Free church schoool, and an Endowed school, and some benefit societies are in the town; the principal charity, however, is Schaw's hospital at Preston village—an extensive building, erected in 1831, in the old English style of architecture, at an expense of nearly £3,000, out of the funds bequeathed by its benevolent founder, Dr. Schaw, in 1781. This institution was first opened in 1784, in Preston House, which stood behind the present erection; it was founded for the education and maintenance of twenty-one boys, children of indigent parents—those of the name of Schaw, M'Neil, Cunningham and Stewart, having a preference of entry; the establishment is conducted by a governor and a matron. The principal seats in the neighbourhood are Preston Grange, Drummore, and Northfield. Preston Tower, in this vicinity, formerly the seat of the Hamiltons, of Preston, is an attractive ruin. At the distance of a mile and a half from the town, at a hamlet called Meadow Mill, was fought the battle to which the name of Prestonpans has been appended, on the 21st of September, 1745, between the adherents of the Stewart family and the English troops under the command of General Cope, in which the latter were routed. In this engagement fell Colonel Gardiner; to whose memory a handsome monument has been erected; the house (Bankton House) once occupied by this revered officer, and in which he expired after the battle, stands a little to the west of Meadow Mill, and is still pointed out to the enquiring stranger. Prestonpans is is the birth-place of two eminent and distinguished physicians—one is the late Thomas Alexander, C.B., director general of the medical department of the British army, to whose memory a handsome monument has lately been erected in the main street of the town. The other is Sir James Ferguson, Bart., physician to the Queen and the late Prince Consort, for whose ability and skill her Majesty has shewn her favour by conferring upon him a baronetcy. The markets were held on Wednesdays and Saturdays; but Friday is now acknowledged as the market day.

COCKENZIE is a fishing village in the parish of Tranent, one mile east from Prestonpans, situated on the road leading to North Berwick and the shore of the Frith of Forth. It has a small harbour, substantially constructed by Mr. Cadell, for shipping the salt made here by him, and the coal obtained from his mines. A very handsome school and schoolmaster's house the gift of a liberal donor has just been erected in the village. A fair is held here on the first Thursday in November.

POST OFFICE, PRESTONPANS, Catherine White, Post Mistress.—Letters arrive from Edinburgh every morning at a quarter to eight, and evening at thirty six minutes past six, and are despatched at eight minutes past seven morning, twenty minutes past three afternoon, five minutes to six evening, and ten minutes past seven night.

SALTON (EAST AND WEST), PENCAITLAND, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

SALTON parish lies chiefly in a fine fertile valley, on the north side of the Lammermoor hills; is well enclosed and cultivated, and various parts of the district are embellished with thriving plantations. The village of EAST SALTON, a respectable one, is situated 15 miles E. from Edinburgh, 5 S.W. from Haddington, and the same distance S.E. from Tranent. The parish church, which stands in the village, was almost entirely re-built in 1085, in the modern Gothic style, and cruciform, having a fine spire ninety feet high. The celebrated Bishop Burnet had Salton for his first benefice, and for some years performed the duties of parish minister; and it was here that he used the only book of common prayer known to have existed in the episcopal church of Scotland during the reign of Charles II. This eminent churchman and historian bequeathed a valuable library to the parish, besides a considerable sum for educating, clothing, and apprenticing thirty poor children; the proceeds of the bequests amount now to about £75 per annum. The small river Salton and the Tyne are boundary streams of the parish, which has abundance of excellent lime. WEST SALTON, in the same parish, is about half a mile from East Salton; between the two villages is Salton Hall, an elegant mansion, the residence of Andrew Fletcher, Esq. The united East Lothian Agricultural Society hold a meeting at Salton annually, on the last Saturday in May, for the exhibition of young breeding stock. In the village is a good school-house, errected in 1803, where one half of the children admitted under Bishop Burnet's charity are instructed, the remainder being taught in the parish school.

PENCAITLAND is a rural village and parish; the former is situated two miles and a half north west from East Salton, the latter is divided into two nearly equal parts by the river Tyne. This district forms the eastmost limit of the great coal range of the Lothians; the coal here is of an excellent quality, lying about fifty-six yards deep, in a nearly horizontal stratum of two feet nine inches thick; an inferior coal is, however, obtained at only sixteen yards below the surface. Besides coal, the parish abounds in good limestone and freestone; there is also a substantially-built Parochial school-house, and an ancient cross. About half a mile to the north-west is Winton House, an extensive pile, partly ancient and partly modern, formerly the residence of the Earls of Wilton, previous to the attainder of the Seaton family in 1715. Fountain Hall, the seat of Sir John Dick Lauder, Bart. and Tyneholm House, are also handsome mansions in this parish. On the eastern side of the river, which is crossed by an old stone bridge, stands the parish church.

TRANENT, GLADSMUIR WITH PENSTON, ORMISTON.

AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

TRANENT, a town or post-village in the parish of that name, is 10 miles E. from Edinburgh, 18 W. from Dunbar and 7 W. from Haddington; situated on the main road from the latter town to the Scottish metropolis, at the head of elevated ground; and the North British Railway passes about a mile to the east. The town consists of a street running from the west to east along the line of the public road, with another diverging from about the middle of it. Many of the inhabitants are engaged in the adjacent collieries, which have been wrought in this quarter from the very first discovery of coal in Scotland; others are occupied in agriculture, and on the coast which bounds the northern extremity of the parish. A branch of the City of Glasgow Bank is established in the town.

The church, which stands at the foot of the town, is a plain edifice, with a square tower; Colonel Gardiner, who fell in the battle of Prestonpans, was interred in it. There is also a Free church, erected in 1844; the United Presbyterians, have a handsome chapel, built in 1826; and there are three schools, one Parochial, one belonging to the Free Church, the other Subscriptional. Half a mile below the town, to the north-east, is Stiell's hospital, a neat and extensive structure, built in 1820; in it are educated one hundred and forty poor children, of which number ten receive clothing. Near the southern boundary of the parish is Elphinston Tower, once a baronial residence: and in another part of the parish are the ruins of Waterfallside Castle, Seton Castle, and the remains of a once Collegiate church. A county market is held in Tranent, every Monday during harvest, for hiring reapers.

GLADSMUIR is a beautiful arable parish, rising in a gentle acclivity from the south shore of the Frith of Forth. The Parish church and school stand on the main road between Haddington and Tranent, nearly four miles west from the former town and three east from the latter. The district abounds in coal, and several pits are wrought at PENSTON, which is the principle village in the parish, and chiefly inhabited by colliers; and there are also the extensive iron works of Messrs. Charles and Andrew Christie, who employ a great number of men. George Heriot, the founder of the hospital at Edinburgh, is said to have been a native of this parish; and Dr. Robinson was its clergyman, while engaged in writing the 'History of Scotland.' From the proximity of the hamlet of Gladsmuir to the scene of the battle of Prestonpans, that conflict was called, by the Jacobite party, 'the battle of Gladsmuir.'

The parish of ORMISTON lies in the western part of the county; it is chiefly level, under the best state of cultivation, and well enclosed and planted. The village is situated in the northern part of the parish, at the distance of two miles and a half north of Tranent, and consists of one spacious street, with a cross in the centre. The Parish church stands a mile and a half to the south west, and Ormiston Hall, one mile south of the village. One mile further, on the summit of an ancient eminence called Dodridge Law, are traces of a Danish Camp. Fairs are held here on the first Tuesday in July, and fourth Tuesday in October.

INVERNESS-SHIRE.

THIS is a very extensive county, being the first in Scotland in magnitude, though only ranking the tenth in population: it is bounded on the north by the counties of Ross and Cromarty; on the east by those of Nairn and Moray—the frith of the latter also touching it on this quarter: on the south are the shires of Perth and Argyll, with a small part of Aberdeenshire; and the Atlantic Ocean washes its western boundary: a small insulated district between the shires of Banff and Moray belongs to it, and several of the Hebrides are politically attached to it. The county (excluding the isles), extends in length, from the point of Arisaig on the west to that of Ardersier on the east, about ninety-two miles, and its greatest breadth is over fifty miles: the whole surface comprises 4,054 square miles of land, and one hundred and ninety of lakes. Taking the computed number of acres at 3,000,000, little more than one-tenth are cultivated. The shire comprehends a variety of districts of local importance—as Badenoch in its south part, Lochaber on the south-west, Moidart on the west, Glenelg on the north-west, Glengany in its central part, and others of less consequence, as Glengary, Glenmorison, Glenshiel, &c. The islands annexed to the county are Skye, Harris, North and South Uist, Benbecula, Barra, Eigg, Muck, Rum, and Canna; besides a number of islets.

SURFACE, SOIL, PRODUCE, &c.—The greater part of the surface of this county consists of lofty mountains, which, especially towards the west, tower above each other in stupendous magnificence. It would be vain to attempt a particular description of the scenery to be met with in this great county, comprehending, as already mentioned, so many mountains—between all which are deep glens of boundless variety and beauty, each having its stream and its lake, and many shrouded in woods. One of the mountains is, nevertheless, too conspicuous to pass over in silence—that is, the noble and celebrated Ben Nevis, the highest elevation of Great Britain, soaring to the height of 4,370 feet above the level of loch Linnhe. This remarkable eminence stands to the north-east of Fort William, near the shore of an arm of the sea; from its summit, in clear weather, a view can be obtained across nearly the whole of the north of Scotland, from sea to sea; it is generally enveloped, however, in a mantle of clouds, and is toilsome in the ascent: it consists principally of a fine brown porphyry, and contains red granite of a most beautiful grain—it is said also to possess veins of silver and lead. Being cleft, in many places to the very base, by ravines and glens, its precipices are of prodigious altitude; one of them, the inaccessible eyrie of eagles, is nearly five hundred feet perpendicular; and in the fissures, even in the warmest weather, snow remains unmelted. Around its southern base flows the Nevis streamlet, through the glen of that name: it was at the opening of this valley that the Marquis of Montrose achieved the brilliant victory of Inverlochy. The other remarkable eminences are Melfourvonie, 3,600; Scarsough, 3,412; and Craig-Phadrig, 1,150 feet respectively above the level of the sea. Inverness-shire is divided into two almost equal parts, by a valley running from south-west to north-east, parallel to the Grampians: this valley is called Glen-more-na-h' Alabin, or the 'Great Glen of Albion,' and appears to be a deep continuous rent between the chains of enormous mountains which range in the same direction; through the greater part of its length the glen is filled with water, or rather an almost connected succession of lakes, not rising very considerably above the level of the sea—a circumstance which suggested the comprehensive plan of forming the Caledonian Canal; of that stupendous undertaking we shall have occasion to speak hereafter. On the eastern side of the county, agriculture is conducted with as much skill, spirit, and success, as in any district northward of the Grampians; in the interior, and on the western coast, it languishes under the natural obstructions of soil and climate. Along the whole of the western division, the climate is much more rainy than on the eastern side of the island: it is seldom fair weather in the latter with a westerly wind. On account of these disadvantages, the principal employment of the farmer in this district is the management of black cattle and sheep, especially the former; numerous herds of goats are likewise to be found in almost every parish. The mountains and forests are widely inhabited by the red deer and roe, who roam in safety through seclusions, and lodge in recesses impenetrable to man; the alpine and common hare, and other species of game, are also abundant. The extensive plains which surround the lakes are in general fertile. The military roads in this county, made by the soldiers under General Wade, never fail to excite the astonishment of travellers. Additional roads have been formed, and bridges constructed, under the direction of Government, through every district of this extensive shire. On the confines of the county are extensive tracts of natural wood, evidently the remains of much larger forests; the fir woods of Glenmore and Strathspey, the properties of the late Duke of Gordon, the Earl of Seafield, and W. P. Grant, Esq., of Rothiemurchus, are supposed to be more extensive than all the other natural woods in Scotland if summed together. The trees that grow naturally are oak, fir, birch, ash, mountain-ash, holly, elm, wildgreen, hazel, and the Scottish poplar; those planted are chiefly larch, spruce, silver-fir, beech, plane, and fruit trees. Those districts in cultivation, along with those in the course of gradual adaptation to purposes of husbandry are in the north-east or Lowland quarter, where there are to be seen many fine fields yielding good crops of wheat, barley, and oats; potatoes, in several parishes, are produced in great abundance. In the district in the vicinity of Spey, near Castle Grant, a very improved system of cultivation has for many years been introduced. In this shire, as in other counties in the north, the removal of the poorer native classes, or small farmers, by the landlords, has thinned the population, expatriated thousands, and reduced to the lowest conceivable depths of human suffering those wretched families who have been permitted to remain in rude hamlets on the sea-shore. During the severe winters of 1836-7, and likewise 1846-7, the distress of the more indigent inhabitants of the Highlands (owing to the deplorable failure of their naturally limited crops, the extreme inclemency of the weather, and the almost total destitution of fuel), were of the most appalling description; in the islands, more particularly, this combination of calamities was experienced to a direful extent: in the Isle of Skye the want of fuel had reduced the unhappy occupants to such a state of desperation that, it has been asserted, lots were cast, among a certain number of poor families, to decide which should consent to the destruction of their hut, for the purpose of furnishing fire-wood for the general good. The case of these poor people excited universal sympathy throughout the kingdom, and subscriptions, headed munificently by London, poured in for their relief; the sum thus promptly raised was very considerable. Among the provincial towns of England, Manchester stood eminently conspicuous in the humane and benevolent work. We now return from this digression, to our more general and cheering account of the capabilities of this wide district. The exports of the county may be briefly enumerated in the articles of cattle, wool, and corn—the skins of goats, deer, roes, foxes, hares, and rabbits—salmon, herrings, dried and salted fish, and fir timber, with the produce of the labours of the hempen and thread manufactures; the spinning of flax and wool is the occupation of the females, in their respective families, over the whole county: the principal imports will be detailed under the head of INVERNESS. Limestone is everywhere abundant; and in many parts are to be found marble, granite (the latter said to be the most beautiful in the world), and silver, iron, and lead ores.

RIVERS AND LAKES, CANALS AND RAILWAYS.—The principal river is the Ness, which flows from Loch Ness to the Moray Frith; the next is the Spey, which, though a larger river in its lower parts, is about the same size while running through the shire: the smaller rivers are the Beauly, the Foyers, the Garry, the Coiltrie, the Glass, the Morriston, the Enneric, the Kinnie, with others of still minor note: the whole produce ample supplies of trout and salmon. On the Foyers is a celebrated waterfall, descending in one leap to the depth of two hundred feet; a dense mist is continually seen rising from the broken water, and the noise resulting from the fall may be heard at a considerable distance. The CALEDONIAN CANAL, before adverted to, is composed of a chain of lakes, connected with the sea on either side of the island by artificial water-courses and lochs; and stretches across Inverness-shire, in a south-westerley direction, from Inverness, on the Moray Frith, to Loch Eil, on the western coast—a distance of about sixty miles. To connect the several lakes by artificial navigation, and thereby the Western Ocean with the North Sea, by the Moray Frith, was an undertaking to which a great portion of the public attention had long been directed; and it was at length commenced by government in 1803-4. After a persevering labour of about eighteen years, and at an expense of upwards of £800,000, the line was opened for the admission of vessels in 1822: up to 1830, the total expense fell very little short of one million sterling. The canal part is twenty feet deep, fifty feet wide at bottom, and one hundred and ten feet wide at the surface—which affords sailing facilities to frigates of thirty-two guns, or merchant vessels of a similar size and draught; but it is mortifying to find that the facilities offered by this canal are so little appreciated by traders, that the annual dues fall far short of the sanguine calculations; but since the late improvements were executed, the route has become a favourite one, with large craft passing westward from the Baltic, &c. Besides the lochs which have been made subservient to this great line of canal navigation, there are others of greater or less magnitude scattered throughout the district; and several arms of the sea advance into the western shore of the county. RAILWAYS have extended their iron influence to this remote county by means of the Great North of Scotland Railway from Aberdeen to Keith, and the Highland Railway from Keith to Inverness, from Inverness to Bonar Bridge, and Inverness to Perth.

DIVISION, REPRESENTATION, &c.—Inverness-shire comprehends twenty-four complete parishes, and thirteen parts of parishes. The county is singularly destitute of towns—the only one it possesses being INVERNESS, which is a royal burgh; it joins with Fortrose (in Ross-shire), Nairn (in the county of its name), and Forres (in Morayshire), in sending one member to parliament; and the county of Inverness returns another representative.

BEAULY

IN KILMORACK, KILTARLITY, AND KIRKHILL, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

BEAULY is a village in the extensive parish of KILMORACK; 35 miles S.S.W. from Tain, 12 W. from Inverness, and 9 S. from Dingwall, standing on the south side of the river of the same name, as it pours into Loch Beauly, an inner branch of the Moray Frith. The situation of this place is beautiful, from the windings and falls of the river, and general appearance of the surrounding country—and thence its name, Beaulieu, that is 'fine place.' There is a small harbour, to which vessels of one hundred and fifty tons burthen can come up at high water. The exports chiefly consist of timber, grain, and wool; the imports coal (from England), and lime. In other respects its trade is of a local character. There are branches respectively of the Bank of Scotland, and the Commercial Bank of Scotland established here; and three miles north-east of the town is the Ord Distillery, adjoining the famed district of Ferintosh, where at one time, the privilege of distilling was permitted free of duty. There has been (within the last few years) erected a very handsome Roman Catholic Cathedral, which has added considerably to the appearance of this neat little village. A sheriff's court for small debts is held in the months of January, May, and September, in which claims are adjudicated to the amount of £8 6s. 8d. Verging upon the extremity of the frith stands the ruins of the priory, founded in the early part of the thirteehtn century, and peopled by monks from France, who gave to the place its present name: the venerable remains form an object of curiosity and interest to the tourist; but the falls of Kilmorack are pre-eminent in attraction, and present a scene of great natural beauty. The banks of the river are bold and rocky, and in the course of its windings it divides in such a way as to form the fascinating island of Agas. There is excellent salmon fishing in the Beauly, and at the falls, many are occasionally caught by their leaping on the dry banks, in their efforts to surmount the cataract. It is recorded that the late Lord Lovat, noticing the frequency of this mistake of that fish, once performed a curious experiment here: he made a fire on the brink of the river, and placed on it a large pot filled with water; speedily a salmon, making a leap in the wrong direction, tumbled into the pot, where it was soon boiled, and eaten by his lordship and his attendants: this was done that he might boast in the south of the wonders that existed in the highlands (which were then but little known), and to say that in his country provisions were so abundant that, if a fire were made and a pot set on it to boil, on the bank of a river, the salmon would of themselves leap into the pot to be boiled. Two miles further to the westward of the falls, may be contemplated the splendid scenery of the valley of the Dhrium, allowed to surpass any other view in Scotland. Fairs for cattle are held on the Muir of Ord, from the month of April to November, both inclusive; they generally occur on the second or third Wednesday in each month, but are regulated by the Falkirk trysts; the 'Edinburgh Almanac,' however, must be consulted with respect to the precise days on which they take place.

Post Office, BEAULY, Robert Hepburn, Post Master.—Letters from the north arrive at ten morning and at twelve noon, and are despatched thereto at nine morning, and three afternoon. BOLESKINE WITH ABERTARFF,

AND THE VILLAGES OF FORT AUGUSTUS, URQUHART, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

BOLESKINE with ABERTARFF is an united parish, lying on the south side of Lochness, 24 miles in length and from 10 to 12 in breadth. FORT AUGUSTUS, in this parish, stands on the western extremity of Lochness, and on the south bank of the Caledonian Canal, 30 miles N.E. from Fort William, and 35 from Inverness. This fort with Fort George on the Moray Firth, and Fort William, are within the county of Inverness, the three forming a line of fortresses which were erected to overawe the Highlands. Since the expulsion of the house of Stuart they are now almost, if not entirely, useless, though still kept in repair and answering as barracks for a few soldiers, and the residence of a barrack-master. In the village of Fort Augustus are places of worship for members of the Established and Free churches, together with a Roman Catholic chapel. There are also Established churches at BOLESKINE, GLENURQUHART, and INVERMORISTON.

POST OFFICE, FORT AUGUSTUS, James M'Leod, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Inverness) at twenty minutes to one morning; and are despatched thereto at half-past eleven night.

CAMPBELTOWN,

ARDERSIER, FORT GEORGE, PETTY, CROY, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

CAMPBELTOWN is a village in the parish of ARDERSIER, 31 miles w. from Elgin, 19 w. from Forres, 10 N. from Inverness, 9½ w. from Nairn, and about a mile from Fort George; situated on the coast of a picturesque bay, and at the foot of an eminence called Cromwell's Mount, on the summit of which are the remains of a fortification, and, behind, the view is very extensive, embracing parts of eight or nine counties. This place, which originated only from the residence of those connected with the garrison, is now a village of some pretensions, and possesses many facilities of improvement—has a strong chalybeate spring, which is much frequented by invalids, and it is well adapted as a bathing place. The inhabitants support a public library, and there are two friendly societies, one of which is called 'His Majesty's Friendly Pension Society.' Some inns are in the village, and several schools. A fair is held annually on the 12th of August.

FORT GEORGE, about a mile and a half from Campbeltown, was erected immediately after the year 1746, at an expense of £160,000 in order to keep the Highlands in check. It covers fifteen acres of a level point, projecting into the Moray Frith, the ramparts, on three sides, rising almost out of the sea; it is said to be one of the most regular fortifications in Britain; it was mounted by eighty cannons, on four bastions, and completely commands the entrance into the harbour of Inverness. The present garrison, which, as a work of offence or defence is now happily useless, consists of one officer and a few artillerymen. A small pier projects from the fort into the sea, for the use of the ferry boats, which here communicate with the opposite coast of Ross-shire.

FORT WILLIAM.

BALLACHULISH NORTH AND SOUTH, CORRAN-FERRY, CORPACH, KILMONIVAIG, AND LAGGAN.

FORT WILLIAM (formerly called Maryburgh and also Gordonsburgh), is a town and sea-port, in the parish of KILMALIE; 133 miles N.W. from Edinburgh, 106 N.W. from Glasgow, 65 S.W. from Inverness, and 40 N.N.E. from Oban; situated on the eastern shore and near the head of Loch Linnhe. The chief branches of business are agriculture and fishing, and it is a place of considerable resort for the tourist and the traveller in the summer months. A communication is maintained with Glasgow and Inverness by the Caledonian and Crinan Canals, five times a week during summer, and twice a week during winter. A substantial stone quay was erected here in 1834, by the Society for promoting the British fisheries, and by subscriptions at an expense of about £1,500. A very handsome suspension bridge of two hundred and fifty feet span was erected over the river Lochy, by Donald Cameron, Esq. of Lochiel, at a cost of about £2,000. The town consists of one tolerably regular street, which contains some good buildings, and the branches of the 'British Linen Company's Bank,' and the 'National Bank of Scotland'—these establishments affording facilities for monetary and commercial transactions in this remote part of the kingdom. Fort William is governed by a baillie, who is appointed by the proprietor of the place; and by the reform act it is appointed one of the stations for taking the votes of the county electors. The sheriff-substitute holds a court here every Thursday during the session at Inverness. The fort, from which the town derives its modern name, 'Fort William,' is a little distance north of the town, and was first founded in 1655, during the protectorate of Cromwell, by the advice and under the direction of General Monk; no part of what was then built is now standing; and the old barrack erected in 1692, from its ruinous state, has been condemned for some time. The fort was attacked by the Highland clans under Prince Charles, in 1745, and made a successful defence. In the river Lochy, to the north-east of the town, is a long established and sometimes very productive salmon fishery. A mile and a half north-east from Fort William is Invernochy Castle, said to have been founded anterior to the Christian era; tradition may err in this particular, but it was certainly rebuilt, on its present extensive site, by an order from the Scottish government, in the reign of Edward I. of England, by one of the Cumyn family, the western tower being still called Cumyn tower. It consists of four large round towers, thirty feet high, connected by a wall, or screen, twenty feet high and ten feet thick, forming a quadrangle of large dimensions: the wall is in a fair state of preservation, but the towers are much decayed; and in 1835, the then proprietor, the Marquis of Abercorn, with injudicious taste enclosed the whole structure at a considerable expense. In 1847 was erected at Fort William a handsome obelisk of granite, 30 feet high, by Sir Duncan Cameron, Bart. In 1852 a handsome monument was erected in High street to the late William Kennedy, Esq. M.D. in commemoration of his professional skill and unwearied benevolence. The most sublime object in this district, and one which attracts a crowd of visitors here in the summer, is the majestic Ben Nevis: the ascent to the summit is difficult, and even perilous; but should the intrepid adventurer be so fortunate as to attain the topmost region on a fine cloudless day, the contemplation of the almost boundless expanse of prospect spread out far beneath his ærial position will amply compensate him for his toil and perseverance. The whole country, indeed, between Fort William and Glasgow is perhaps unequalled in Europe for variety of scenery. Fairs are held on the second Wednesdays in June, July, and November.

LAGGAN is a parish in Badenoch district, measuring from north-east to south-west upwards of twenty miles, and from north to south a little over that number. It contains Loch Laggan, a large sheet of water eight miles in length and one in width. The village is situated on the great north road, by Dalwhinnie and Garvamore, about half way between both.

KILMONIVAIG is a very large parish, nine miles N.E. of Fort William. The places of worship are an Established and a Free church.

BALLACHULISH NORTH is situated on the north shore of Loch Leven, about twelve miles S. from Fort William. This place has a small neat church of the Establishment and a well-conducted Parochial school. In Ballachulish South is a productive slate quarry, wrought by Mr Tennant, the proprietor. Not far from the quarry is found valuable limestone, its product possessing superior adhesive qualities. About five miles east, near the margin of Loch Leven, is Callart, the elegant mansion of Mrs. Cameron Campbell, of Fassifern and Callart, and on the south shore, opposite to Callart, near the entrance of one of the most romantic glens in Scotland is Glencoe, formerly the property and residence of Ewen Macdonald, Esq., of Glencoe. Ballachulish North is united with Corran-ferry North (in Argyleshire), on the opposite side of Loch Linnhe, in one ecclesiastical parish; the latter is about three miles west from the former, and nine south from Fort William; it has a Parliamentary church—and an inn, affording good accommodation. About a mile west, not far from the border of Loch Linnhe, is Ardgower House, the respectable mansion and family residence of Alexander Maclean, Esq., surrounded with fine plantations, at the foot of the Ardgowan hills.

CORPACH is a widely spread, but not very populous village, on the north shore of Loch Eil (in the county of Argyle, but in the same parish as Fort William), three miles north from the Fort; though this village is in Argyleshire, the principal part of the parish of Kilmalie, in which it is situate, is in the county of Inverness, and is surrounded by that county and Loch Eil. Corpach is chiefly to be noticed as being the southern commencement of that great national undertaking, the Caledonial Canal, which here enters Loch Eil by four locks; a little above are eight others, called 'Neptune's staircase;' they are capable of admitting vessels of three hundred tons (not drawing above twelve feet water), and each lock rises eight feet. Kilmalie Parish church is situate about half a mile from the end of the canal, at Corpach; it was erected in 1784. Near the church stands a pyramidical obelisk, of considerable height, with a large tablet of white marble at its base, raised to the memory of Colonel John Cameron, who was slain at the battle of Waterloo, in 1815, while commanding the 92nd Highlanders. The road through Corpach leads to the district of Arisaig, about thirty five miles distant, and Moidart and Loch Shiel. At Borradale, in Moidart, Prince Charles Stuart landed on the 25th of July, 1745; he sailed up Loch Shiel on the 18th of August; the following day he landed and entered Glenfinnan, where he was met by Cameron of Loch Eil, and Macdonald of Keppoch, with their clansmen: commemorative of this circumstance, Macdonald of Glenalladale has erected a monument.

GRANTOWN, CROMDALE AND INVERALLEN.

GRANTOWN is a neat modern village in the parish of CROMDALE, the latter lying chiefly in this county and partly in that of Moray; Grantown being situate in that district of the parish called Inverallen, on the north bank of the Spey, rather more than a mile south from Castle Grant, one of the seats of the Earl of Seafield; and at the distance of 35 miles S.E. from Inverness, 22 from Forres, 8 N.E. from Duthill, and 6 N. from Abernethy. Grantown was begun about the year 1774, under the patronage of the Grant family, who have been its continued benefactors; and a large number of the inhabitants retain the name of Grant to the present day. The trade of the place is of a retail and domestic character, and there is a fair proportion of the ordinary useful shops and businesses which are usually found in a small country town. There are two distilleries in its vicinity, and in the village are established three banks, namely, branches of the National Bank of Scotland, the Royal Bank, and the Caledonian Bank; there is also a branch of the Inverness Savings' Bank. Besides the Parish church in Cromdale, there is a Royal bounty church, a Free church, and a Baptist chapel in Grantown. There are several schools noticed under their proper head, and also an Orphan institution. Fairs are held on the 13th and 24th of April, 15th and 24th of May, 19th of June, 24th of July, 1st and 21st of August, 23rd of October, and 13th, 16th, and 23rd of November.

INVERNESS, DAVIOT DORES AND MOY.

INVERNESS, the capital of the large county of that name, is 156 miles N.N.W. from Edinburgh, 103 W. by N. from Aberdeen, 162 N. from Glasgow, 125 N.W. from Dundee, 134 S. from Thurso, and 27 W. by S. from Forres; situated upon the northern extremity of the Great Glen of Scotland, and upon the banks of the Ness (near the confluence of that river with the sea), about a mile from the northern entry of the Caledonian canal. 'Inverness,' says Dr. Johnson, 'may be properly styled the capital of the Highlands;' and it is so usually esteemed. We learn from Richards' 'Itinerary' (one of the oldest documents extant relative to the affairs of Great Britain, and referring to the period between A.D. 138 and 170), that Inverness was one of the ten cities of Britain enjoying the Jus Latinitatis: only two others in Scotland are mentioned, Perth and Dumbarton. After the Romans withdrew, Inverness became the seat of the Pictish monarchy. Here Macbeth, the great Lord of Ross and Moray, had a castle, which Bœthius, and after him Shakspere, assigns as the scene of King Duncan's murder; Buchanan's relation is to the same effect. This castle, says the great poet—

"—hath a pleasant seat; the air
Nimbly and sweetly recommends itself
Unto our gentler senses."

Near to the site of this castle, a royal castle or fort was afterwards erected, which was in existence until 1746, when it was blown up during the rebellion; a new building (which will be hereafter noticed) now occupies the site of the old one

The situation of Inverness is so singularly beautiful as to have compelled a recognition of its claims to that character, even amid the dry technical details of its great charter; 'its good and pleasant situation' is there noticed as one of the reasons for its endowment as a royal burgh. The eminent lexicographer, Dr. Johnson, in speaking of Inverness, adds—'The language of this town has been long considered as peculiarly elegant,' a fact which he ascribes to the intermixture of Cromwell's soldiers with the inhabitants; this is a fanciful hypothesis in many ways, and at once appears hardly reconcilable with the fact that the Gaelic continues to be the prevailing language still spoken by the common people; the soldiers must have learnt the one when they taught the other. The greater part of the town lies on the eastern bank of the Ness—here a broad, clear, and equably flowing stream. The streets are well paved, provided with common sewers, and during the winter months suitably lighted with gas. In the summer months Inverness is much frequented by tourists and sportsmen from the south, to the greater number of whom it forms the northern limit of their excursions. Being the centre to which the principal lines of roads in the Highlands converge—having the Caledonian Canal on the one hand, and the Moray Frith on the other—it maintains a rapid, frequent, and easy entercourse, both by land and water, with all parts of the kingdom; being also a central terminus of the new Highland Railway Co., it is in regular communication by railway train from Bonar Bridge and Dingwall on the north, and Aberdeen, Dundee, Perth, Edinburgh, Glasgow, and London on the south. The environs of Inverness combine picturesque beauty in detail with magnificence as a whole—'uniting' says a tourist, 'two opposite qualities, and each in the greatest perfection—the characters of a rich open lowland country with those of the wildest Alpine scenery; both being also close at hand, and in many places intermixed; while to all this is added a series of maritime views not often excelled.' The walks near the town are deserving of a stranger's perambulation: whether along the banks of the river to the wooded islands of the Ness, or along the sea-shore, or by the margin of the canal; or to the singularly shaped hill of Tomnaheurich, or 'hill of the fairies;' or to the summit of Craig Phadrig (the vitrifications of which afford matter of speculation to the antiquarian); or to the druidical circles in the 'Leys;' in each and all of these directions there is much to please and interest the man of taste or science.

PUBLIC BUILDINGS AND WORKS.—Pre-eminent among these, as much for its architectural beauty as for its commanding position, is the Castle of Inverness, erected on the site of the old royal castle. The modern edifice was built in 1836 at a cost of £10,000, for the accommodation of the courts of justice in the northern circuit, and for the preservation of the records and transactions of the judicial business of the county; it is built from the design of Mr. Burn, architect, Edinburgh, after the old English castellated style and harmonises well, from its varied projecting and receding masses, its square and round towers, with the waning outline of the surrounding scenery; it contains a court-room, a commodious county hall, and various suitable apartments for judicial business and the convenience of the different functionaries connected therewith. Amongst the other public buildings, institutions, &c. exclusive of the edifices for divine worship, are, the Town Hall, in High-street; the Northern Meeting Assembly Rooms, in Church-street, with the Northern Meeting Pavilion and Park: the Northern Infirmary, a large well-constructed building, with an imposing exterior, a little way out of the town, on the bank of the river; the Royal Academy, a liberally endowed institution, in Academy-street; the United Charities' Building and the Observatory, above View-place; Raining's school, and High school—both prosperous institutions on Barnhill. Great improvements have taken place in Inverness within the last thirty years, upon the roads and walks along the banks of the Ness and principal thoroughfares of the town, in additional buildings, and in providing for more efficient sewerage. Several handsome new buildings have recently been erected, as the Railway Station, the Burgh Court-house and Railway Station Hotel, the West Parish church, the Free High church and spire, the Free East church, the Episcopal Chapel, and Union Street, are of this description. Private edifices, too, of tasteful models, and elegant villas, are constantly springing up in the town and suburbs. Two educational institutions must be noticed as highly efficient in the benefits they respectively confer—one of them, the Farraline Park Institution, or Bell's school, was established in 1842 by bequest of the late Dr. Bell, L.L.D. of Madras, for the advantage of the middle and humbler class of children, who are instructed in all the useful branches of an English education—their number is generally about five hundred. The premises form an elegant building in an open and airy situation on the east side of the town. The front is embellished by a beautiful row of fluted columns. The Free Church Institution, now called the High school—another excellent establishment for training youth, was opened in 1846 in a large and commodious building, occupying an elevated site contiguous to the observatory. Among the public works are those for gas and water, the quays or harbours; the Post-office erected in 1843, the bridges, &c. The old bridge, consisting of seven arches, erected in 1688, was, on the 25th January, 1849, carried away by the overflowing of the river; and that portion of the town, lying on the north side of it, was completely inundated, and the inhabitants compelled to make use of boats to pass through the street. A new and handsome suspension bridge has been erected at the joint expense of the government and the inhabitants—it is a very great improvement to the town.

COMMERCE, TRADE, &C:—At the quays and also at the Caledonian canal wharfs, within a mile of the town, vessels of considerable tonnage may receive or discharge their cargoes, while large ships have excellent anchorage in Kessock roads, just above the confluence of the river with the sea. Inverness possesses an extensive trade, carried on in very fine coasting and steam vessels. The exports from this port are chiefly grain, wool, timber, salmon, &c. The imports comprise timber, Archangel tar, guano and wheat. There are ship and boat building yards; a manufactory for woollen cloths, two breweries, three iron foundries, and other trades of a local nature. There are no fewer than six banking companies established in Inverness, and a National Security Savings'

Bank—these are noticed under their proper head in the Directory of the town. The premises of the Caledonian Bank, erected in 1849, form a very handsome building, on the north side of High-street: it is of freestone, having a row of elegant Corinthian columns in front, and is highly ornamental to the locality in which it stands. The shops in Inverness are well supplied with goods of every description; and are resorted to, not only by the inhabitants of the town and its vicinage, but also by those of the remoter vales of the shire, and by many from the contiguous counties. The press of Inverness publishes two newspapers weekly—the 'Courier,' and the 'Advertiser.' Inverness is a royal burgh of great antiquity, having it is said, received a charter in 1067 from Malcolm Canmore; and there are on record four charters in its favour from King William the Lion, besides various subsequent ones by several of his successors. The great charter of the town, however, was conferred by James VI, in 1591. The municipal government is vested in a provost, four bailies, a dean of guild, treasurer, and fourteen councillors, in all twenty-one; considerable charitable funds are under their management. The burgh in conjunction with those of Nairn Forres, and Fortrose returns one member to the imperial parliament. Being the seat of the sheriff of the county, the courts of that functionary are held here. The sheriff's small debt court is held every Friday during session time, for the recovery of sums not exceeding £12.; and a justice of peace court is held monthly for adjudicating claims not exceeding £5 in amount. This town is the appointed seat of the Inverness-shire Farming Society, and also of the Northern Meeting, composed of noblemen and gentlemen in the northern counties, associated for the purpose of fostering the games and sports peculiar to the Highlands. They have large and elegant rooms in Church-street set apart for the purpose. A Mechanics' Institution and a Young Men's Christian Association have also their supporters. There is also a Working Men's Club, liberally supported, and having an excellent library; a contribution of books having been recently received from Her Majesty, the Queen, by the club. Of the places for divine worship a list is appended to the Directory, with their localities and officiating ministers, and the educational establishments, parochial, endowed, or otherwise, will be found under their proper head.

MARKETS AND FAIRS.—The markets are held on Tuesday and Friday; and the fairs are, 'Candlemas fair,' held on the first Wednesday after the 12th of February (old style), on the 14th if it should fall on a Wednesday. Whitsuntide market, is held on the Wednesday after the 25th May; annual sheep and wool market on second Thursday in July; trysts for hiring servants, Friday before 26th May, and Friday before 26th November; St. Andrew's fair first Wednesday after 18th July; Marymas fair, first Wednesday after 15th August (old style), or the 26th (new style), if on a Wednesday; Martinmas fair, last Wednesday of November; a horse market is held in connection with each of the fairs.

We have extracted, with a few alterations, from 'Anderson's Guide to the Highlands' (an able, scientific, and well-got-up work), the following list of objects, in and about Inverness, worthy of being visited by the stranger:—

KINGUSSIE,

ALVIE, LAGGAN AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

KINGUSSIE, the Gaelic name of which is the termination of the 'Pine Forest' is the name of a parish and beautiful village, 44 miles S. from Inverness, and 73 N. from Perth, on the great road between the two towns, and 50 miles N.E. from Fort William. It is the capital of the once renowned lordship of Badenoch, and previous to the year 1864 was all but inaccessible to the general public. By the opening of the Inverness and Perth Junction, now designated the Highland Railway, the beautiful and mountainous scenery of the district is now within easy reach of the tourist, and from the number who have already visited it—it promises to become a favourite resort. The district in which this village is situated is nearly in the centre of the Highlands of Scotland, where the genuine race of the Gael and their original language at one time existed in its purity. The inhabitants, in the time of war, are fond of military life, and the 42nd and 92nd Highland regiments included many men from this quarter; the late Duke of Gordon was the popular colonel of these corps for many years. The commissioners of roads and bridges, in prosecution of their liberality towards the Highlands of Scotland, opened a beautiful new line of road, from Kingussie to Fort William, by Loch Laggan, through part of the remains of the ancient Caledonian forest, and in sight of the famed parallel roads in Glenroy. A more romantic route for the traveller than this by Loch Laggan is rarely to be seen. The Marquis of Abercorn has erected a costly and beautiful shooting establishment (Ardverykie Lodge), on the banks of the lake, which Her Majesty visited in 1846; it is now occupied by Lord Henry Bentinck. Another improvement in this district was effected by the erection of a substantial wooden bridge over the Spey, which previously was only crossed by a ferry. The village stands on the north bank of the river, not far from the north base of those hills on which Norval's father 'fed his flock,' in sight of Cairn-Gorm, famous for its transparent stones, and Soul-Beiramuchduigh, one of the loftiest mountains in Britain. The village contains a very handsome county building, in which the justices of peace courts for the district of Badenoch are held monthly, and a sheriff's small debt court is held on the first Tuesdays in January and September.

The church, which is of modern erection, commodious and handsome, is on a hill at the east-end of the village, in a situation which is not to be surpassed for beauty. In 1844 a handsome Free Church was erected capable of accommodating a large congregation. There are three burial grounds in the place, two of which are known to be of great antiquity, the walls of the places of worship being still visible: one of the cemeteries is named after St. Columbus, and is said to have been originally dedicated to that holy personage. On the south bank of the river opposite the village stand the ruins of Ruthven Castle, which was a barrack in the reign of George II., and burnt down in 1745. It was a place of great antiquity and note, having been the residence and castle of Walter Cumming, Lord of Badenoch and his ancestors, who, at one period, lorded over almost all the Highlands of Scotland. Walter Cumming's oppression and tyranny became so intolerable to all within his power, which was very extended, that the Clan Chattan (M'Phersons) threw off the yoke, and expelled the tyrant from the country; for which deed of valour they acquired the red hand and dagger, in addition to their coat of arms. Ruthven Castle was the rallying point of those brave but deluded heroes of 1745-6, where they assembled after the battle of Culloden, in considerable strength and high spirits, eager and anxious to be again led against the Duke of Cumberland. Balls and merriment were kept up by the officers and men for several nights, while expresses were despatched in quest of the prince, who was found wandering in the mountains, and making for the Hebrides, sunk in spirits and in deep despair, returning the answer to his faithful adherents 'that all was over with him.' Their loss at Culloden was nothing compared to the depression this caused to their spirits by disappointment. From that moment they dispersed, broken hearted, to meet no more. Three miles east of the village is Belleville House, the seat of Colonel M'Pherson, and built by James M'Pherson, Esq., translater of some of Ossian's poem's, &c. Near to the house and road side is a neat monument, to the memory of the 'bard of Morven;' and half way between it and the village, a little off the road, is to be seen a cave of great antiquity and curiosity, worth the stranger's notice. Eight miles south-west of Kingussie, on the Fort William road, stands Cluny Castle, the seat of Ewen M'Pherson, Esq., the chief of Clan Chattan. Eight miles to the east, close to the Spey, and in a favourite spot, the romantic vale of Kinrara, are interred the remains of the late Duchess of Gordon, and on a rock in the same vale has been erected a beautiful monument of granite, ninety feet high, to the memory of the late Duke: it was raised by subscription amounting to £1,200. About five miles from Kingussie on the Perth road is Invernahavon Moor, celebrated for a hard-fought battle between the clans Macintosh and Cameron, and in which Cluny and the M'Phersons ultimately interfered; the consequence of which, gave occasion, sixteen years afterwards, for the bloody contest between thirty M'Phersons and the same number of Davidsons, on the North Inch of Perth, in presence of King Robert III. of Scotland and his court, from which eleven of the former, and only one of the latter returned alive, and all seriously wounded. Partial notice of this memorable event is to be found in Sir Walter Scott's 'Fair Maid of Perth.' The hills of Badenoch are no where surpassed for the abundance of all sorts of game to be found amongst them, which brings a great number of noblemen and gentlemen to the country during the shooting season. The Earl of Stamford's summer residence is Kinrara House, in the beautiful and romantic valley of Rothiemurcus, ten miles east of Kingussie. John Leslie, the celebrated Bishop of Ross, in Scotland, was a natural son of the parson of Kingussie, in Badenoch, and born there in 1527. He had his education in the university of Aberdeen, and in 1547 was made canon of the cathedral. He was the principal opponent of John Knox. There are several fairs held at Kingussie during the year, but the days of holding are for the most part regulated by the Beauly and Falkirk fairs.

PORTREE.

EIGG, RAASAY, RONA, BARRA, BRACADALE, DURINISH, HARRIS, KILMUIR, LOCHMADDY, NORTH AND SOUTH UIST, SLEAT, SNISORT, STRATH, AND NUMEROUS SMALL ISLES.

PORTREE is a parish in the Isle of Skye. The village of Portree is the principal one in the parish or the adjacent isles, and is a flourishing little seaport; 109 miles W. from Inverness, 108 N.W. from Oban, 74 N. from Tobermory, 21 E. from Dumvegan, and 24 N.W. from Broadford. The village is seated a little above the shore, at the summit of a somewhat steep acclivity, thickly planted with thriving trees. It is of some business, has three banking establishments, a woollen manufactory in the vicinity, and two good inns and posting houses. In the mill, which was erected in 1850, are manufactured tweeds, plaids, yarns, and carpets. The quay, erected in 1819, has not much depth at low water, but the tide rises from twelve to sixteen feet; the bay is safe and spacious, having a depth from five to twelve fathoms, and the anchorage is excellent. On a high rocky promontory, projecting some distance into the bay, at whose base the quay is erected, stands an octagonal tower, built in 1834, by Dr. Alexander M'Leod, from which there is a splendid view of the surrounding scenery. On the west of the village, amidst some thriving plantations, stands Portree House, belonging to Lord Macdonald; and on the south side of the bay, at a distance of nearly two miles, is the residence of the sheriff substitute, Thomas Fraser, Esq., (who holds a court here once a week during session), and the Manse of Portree. The votes of the county electors in Skye, for a member of parliament for Inverness-shire, are taken at Broadford. The chief exports are sheep, black cattle, wool, salt, herrings, salmon (pickled chiefly for London), and cod and ling both salt and dry, principally for Glasgow and Liverpool.

SKYE is an extensive island on the western coast of Scotland, forming no inconsiderable portion of the county of Inverness, being the largest of the Western isles, with the exception of Lewis. It is forty-six miles from north to south, and twenty seven from east to west in a direct line; but the parliamentary road, commencing at Armadale in the south, and running chiefly on the eastern coast to Uig, in the north, is seventy-two miles long; and there is a cross road extending nine miles still further in the latter direction. The general face of the country is mountainous, which, although it may be inviting to the tourist from the sublime scenery it presents, is a great barrier to the successful operations of the husbandman; and the island cannot be called fertile if we except the narrow stripes of land in the valleys, and some parts near the coast. The eastern part of the island is separated from Glenelg, on the main land, by a narrow sound, called the Kyles of Skye. The island belongs to a number of proprietors, and is principally occupied in large grazing farms of six or seven miles in extent, producing great numbers of sheep and black cattle, and some small horses. Formerly great quantities of kelp were made here. Eight miles south of Portree, in the district is known as 'Macleod's country,' may be contemplated some of the finest and beautifully-varied mountain scenery in the Highlands. This part also abounds with game; and lake and river angling may here be successfully pursued by the tourist, and refreshment and accommodation obtained at the Sligichan Inn, situated at the base of the celebrated Cuchallin hills. Dunvegan Castle, once the princely residence of the chief of the Macleod's, is distant twenty one miles from Portree, but is here noticed as one of the most ancient structures of the Highlands; it has been lately repaired and fitted up at a great expense. Not far from the castle is a convenient inn. In proceeding to Portree, from the south, is seen from the deck of the steamer, Armadale Castle, the seat of Lord Macdonald, agreeably situated near the shore, at the south-east corner of the island, amidst thriving plantations and sheltering woods. The fisheries off this coast, especially in the sound between Skye and the main land, are sometimes very productive. The coasts are indented with many fine and secure ports, the principal of which are Portree and Broadford on the east, the Isle of Ornsay on the south, and Dunvegan and Stein on the north. The parish of Portree also comprises the isles of FLADDA, RAASAY and RONA.

The peculiar features of Skye are its romantic views, its mountain and water scenery, the charming seats with which the country is studded, as seen from different points, and some natural curiositics in certain localities. A particular notice of all the places worthy of a stranger's visit would occupy more space than we could devote to the subject; we cannot, however, omit noticing the small lake of Coruishk, about ten miles south-west from Broadford, whose sides rise almost perpendicularly from its deep black waters to a great height; also a spar-cave on the coast of Strathard, and about seven miles north of Broadford and Storr, is exhibited one of the most grand and imposing scenes in Scotland; this is a mountain seven miles north of Portree, whose summit is full two thousand feet above the level of the sea, the eastern side being a grand precipice of bare rugged rock, often rising perpendicularly five hundred feet; but the most remarkable feature about it and which renders it dissimilar to any other mountain, are several detached pyramid, or almost porpendicular columns of rocks varying from three hundred to near five hundred feet in height; some standing at a considerable distance from the mountain, and appearing as though the intermediate parts, being too soft to resist the influence that acted upon them had crumbled away, leaving the harder materials as a monument of their ability to resist the ravages of time and raging of the tempest One of these isolated spiral masses of rock rises one hundred and sixty-five feet from the base, and is two hundred and forty feet in circumference; it seems at a distance to stand upon an apex, from which one might imagine it would be easy to remove it; indeed, the spectator cannot divest himself of the apprehension that it would fall upon him should he approach too near. The scene is altogether grand and imposing, and must be visited to be appreciated. The fairs in Skye are held as follows:—At Portree on the last Tuesday in May and August, and third Tuesday in November, for black cattle, horses, &c.; at Broadford, on the Thursdays after the Portree May, August and November fairs; at Fairybridge, on the second Tuesday in November; and at Sligichan, on on the third Tuesday in September, for horses and black cattle.

EIGG, or Egg, is a small island in the Hebrides, belonging to Inverness-shire, about 12 miles S.W. of the promontory of Sleat, the most southern point of Skye. It is about three miles long from north to south, surmounted on the southern extremity by a perpendicular wall or rampart called the Scuir of Eig, composed of pitchstone phorphory columns, running about a mile in length nearly east and west, from 300 to 400 feet broad, and from 350 to 400 high, the summit being about 1,340 feet above level of the sea. The Scuir is distinctly columnar, the pillars generally about being a foot in diameter; though their is a stratum of columns at the east end, inclining towards the horizon, whose diameters are from two and a half to three feet. The appearance of this singularly grand production of nature from every point is indescribable magnificent, and when viewed from the east end, assumes the form of a stupendous ruined tower. At the base of the rocks, on the north and south sides, several large caves have been formed by the softer part of the rocks crumbling away; the bases of the columns above form the ceiling of these caves, and as in Staffa, present a resemblance to the surface of honeycombs. Two steam-boats pass here on their way to Portree, and return every week in the summer.

RAASAY, or Razay, is an island of the Hebrides, belonging to the parish of Portree, about thirteen miles long and two broad, lying to the east of Skye opposite Portree, separated from it by the sound of Raasay, about four miles wide. It is the property of George Rainey, Esq., of Raasay, who has a fine mansion in a bay near the south-western extremity of the island. There are other islands in the neigbourhood of Skye, as SCALPA to the east, RUM and CANNA to the south-west, &c.

RONA, or Ronay, is an island of the Hebrides, lying at the northern extremity of Raasay, from which it is separated by a strait, just passable for vessels. It is about four miles in length by one in breadth. The little arable ground which occurs in Rona, surrounds the scattered village that lies at the bottom of the bay which contains nearly all the population of the island; there is a very fine lighthouse here.

BARRA is an island parish in the south of the Western islands and includes the isles of BARRA, BERNERAY, FLODDAY, FRIDAY, HELLISAY, MINGALAY, PABBAY, SANDERAY and WATERSAY, in length it is about six miles by a width of three miles.

BRACADALE is a parish in the isle of Skye, about seventeen miles long by a width of about five miles; it also includes the isles of HAVERSAY, ORANSAY, SOAY and VUIAY.

DURINISH, is a parish in the isle of Skye, seventeen miles long by a width of thirteen miles including in its limits the isles of WATERINSH, STEIN and ISSAY.

HARRIS is a parish in the south end of Lewis Island in size about twenty miles long by a width of about eight miles, it includes the isles of ANABICH, BERNERA, ENSAY, FLODDAY, KILLIGRAY, PABBAY, SCALPA, SCARP, SCOTSWAY, ST. KILDA, TARRENSAY, and other small isles—post town STORNAWAY

KILMUIR is a parish in North Skye, sixteen miles long by a width of about eight.

NORTH UIST, is a parish and island situated between Harris and Benbecula—Western isles. It is about seventeen miles long by a width of from three to thirteen miles and includes in its jurisdiction the village of LOCHMADDY, and the isles of BALESHARE, and ILLEBAY, BOVERAY, GRIMISAY, HEISKER, KIRKIBOST, LEVERA, MHORGAY, RONAY and VALLAY.

SOUTH UIST, is a parish and island seven miles south of North Uist, its length is about twenty-one miles by a width of about seven miles, the isles of BENBECULA, ERISKAY, FLADDA, GRIMISAY and WIAY, are in this parish—post town Lochmaddy.

SLEAT is a parish on the south-east side of Skye, in size it is about twenty-one miles long by a width of about three. ORNSAY Island is included in this parish.

SNIZORT is a parish on the North-west side of Skye, its length is about ten miles, in breadth about six miles with a very rocky coast.

STRATH, or Strathswordle, is a parish on the south-east side of Skye, with a length of twenty eight miles by a breadth of about seven miles; it includes PABBAY and SCALPAY islands. There is a branch of the 'Bank of Scotland' at BROADFORD.

KINCARDINESHIRE,

OCCASIONALLY called the MEARNS (and improperly Mearns-shire), is a small county on the eastern coast; bounded on the north and north-west by Aberdeenshire, on the east by the North Sea, and on the south and south-west by Forfarshire. Its form describes nearly that of a triangle, having to the sea its principal or most extensive base, and which reaches along the coast from the bay of Aberdeen to the mouth of the North Esk river, about thirty miles—its greatest breadth, inland, being twenty-four. The contents of the area, according to Mr. Gardiner, who surveyed the county for a map, were 243,444 English acres, of which 74,849 were in actual cultivation, 27,816 improvable by tillage, 17,609 woodland, and 123,170 mountains, &c. The government returns state its area to comprise three hundred and ninety-four square miles, or 252,250 statute acres.

NAME AND EARLY HISTORY.—The shire takes its name from Kincardine, formerly a small town in the parish of Fordoun, and which was the seat of the county courts, &c., until the year 1600, when they were removed to Stonehaven. Kincardine, which has dwindled into a mere hamlet, was formerly connected with an ancient seat of royalty, called Kincardine Castle, of which only the foundations of the walls can now be traced. The phrase Mearns before referred to, after strict investigation, is in all probability, merely of local meaning; but it is generally said to have been affixed to this part of Scotland, from its having become the property of Mernia, a brother of King Kenneth II., another brother, called Angus, conferring his name upon the neighbouring county of Forfar. In former times the Hollow of the Mearns was the only passable access to the north of Scotland, owing to the hills occupying uninterruptedly all the rest of the breadth, inland, except at this point, and it was the common passage for armies going to and fro, since the earliest periods of history; yet, unless the great battle between Galgacus and Agricola took place here, as some historians aver, this county has not been the theatre of any extraordinary events, nor the scene of any great military achievements. The peasantry of the shire have always been considered a very able and industrious race of men; and the men of the Mearns is a proverbial expression of old date—implying trust-worthiness and integrity.

SOIL, SURFACE, PRODUCE, &c.—The county is now almost exclusively of an agricultural character, for although it has the advantage of so extensive a range of sea coast, it possesses no harbour of any commercial importance; neither have manufactures made much progress in the district. The soil of Kincardine is of a very productive kind, and is cultivated in a style nowhere surpassed in Scotland; a sufficient proof of this is the fact that of all the lands in tillage nearly a seventh part is devoted to the culture of the turnip. The county is destitute of both coal and marl, and there is very little limestone—all of which deficiencies bear hard upon agricultural improvement; these drawbacks, however, seem to have excited more strongly the spirit of enterprise amongst the agriculturists, who import lime in great quantities from other districts by means of the Frith of Forth. The limestone of the county obtained near the coast is burnt with coal; in the more inland parts with peat or wood; but, from the scarcity of fuel (no seams of coal being worked from Fife to Sunderland), there is much more lime imported into than is wrought in the shire. In Arbuthnot parish, and near St. Cyrus on the sea shore, beautiful pebbles and jaspers are found. The coast is partly flat and partly rocky, and at the north-eastern corner of the county terminates the chain of the Grampians, where they form what is called the Girdle Ness, which presents to the sea a bold face of rock from sixty to eighty feet high. The chief mountains and eminences are Mount Battoch, 3,465 feet in height; Clacknabane, 2,370; Cairniemount, 2,000; Kerloch, 1,890; the Hill of Fare, from 1,500 to 1,700; Scolty Hill, 1,500; and Strathfenella, a detached Grampian, from 1,200 to 1,500 feet above the level of the sea. The county in its more level parts is highly embellished by the country seats of its numerous resident proprietors, each amid its own thriving woodland.

RIVERS AND RAILWAYS.—The most considerable rivers connected with this county are the Dee, the North Esk, the Cowie, the Bervie, and the Carron. The Dee glides for eight or ten miles through the northern limb of the shire; the North Esk is a boundary river on the south-west, for about ten miles; the Cowie has a course of ten miles through the county, previous to its falling into the sea at Stonehaven, where also the Carron empties itself; and the Bervie, after a progress of sixteen miles, discharges itself into the sea at the town to which it imparts its name. The Luther water can only be mentioned as a tributary stream to the North Esk. The Scottish North Eastern Railway with several branches, pass through Kincardineshire, communicating on the north with the city of Aberdeen, and on the south with Edinburgh and various other places.

DIVISION, REPRESENTATION, &c.—Kincardineshire comprises eighteen parishes and three parts of parishes: it contains within its limits a royal burgh—Bervie and a burgh of barony—Stonehaven, besides several smaller towns and villages. Bervie, in connection with Montrose, Arbroath, Brechin, and Forfar returns one member to the imperial parliament, and the county at large another.

AUCHINBLAE AND FORDOUN.

AUCHINBLAE, the capital of the parish of Fordoun, is a thriving inland market town, pleasantly situated on the banks of the Luther water, 26 miles S. by W. from Aberdeen, 16 N. from Montrose, 11 S.W. from Stonehaven, 6 from Fettercairn, 5 from Laurencekirk, and 2½ from the Fordoun station on the Aberdeen Railway. The principal trade of the place is flax spinning by power, which was established so early as 1795, being the second attempt in Scotland. The weaving of linens by the hand-loom has been entirely given up. Branches of the North of Scotland Banking Company and the City of Glasgow Bank are established here. A Savings' Bank was commenced in 1815—it was converted into a National Security Savings' Bank in 1842; and the the town was lighted by gas in 1840. In consequence of the salubrity and pureness of the air, and the many beautiful and romantic walks in the immediate neighbourhood, it is much frequented during summer by families from the sea coast towns of Arbroath, Montrose, Stonehaven, and Aberdeen. In the western part of the parish, about a mile north-east from Fettercairn, is a small assemblage of tenements, being all that exists of the former county town, Kincardine; and among these buildings, or in their vicinity, stood the Court House. It ceased to be the chief town in the reign of James VI., when Stonehaven, as a more convenient situation for holding the county courts, obtained that distinction. In the vicinity are the remains of the castle or royal palace of Kincardine. There are no records stating the period when this castle was built, or when it was last inhabited, but it appears to have been a royal residence previous to the death of Kenneth III. in 994—for it was occupied by that monarch at the time of his murder by Finella. It stands on the termination of a small ridge, at an elevation of about sixty or eighty feet above the adjoining plain, and has a very commanding view of the most beautiful part of the Howe o' the Mearns. It was in this palace, as Lord Halles writes, that John Baliol resigned his crown to Edward I. of England, July 2nd, 1296; and he quotes the record of this in Rhymer's Fœdera. As this is the last event of importance on record connected with the history of this palace, it is not improbable that it was destroyed in the wars between the Scotch and English which followed that event. Near to Fordoun House are distinct vestiges of a Roman encampment; and on the hill above Newlands there are the remains of a Druidical temple. About a mile west of Drumtochty Castle, in a retired and secluded glen, are the foundations of a small friary; and near to that is a fine spring, considered to be among the most copious flowing in Scotland. The parish extends, from east to west, ten miles, and in breadth about seven. The southern part is level, but the north is mountainous, having a thin soil, and inferior in fertility to the lower part. The present parish church, erected in 1829, and placed on a high rock in one of the most beautiful spots in the parish, is a large handsome edifice, in the Gothic style, with a Gothic tower on the west end, rising to about one hundred feet in height; and in a valley between where it stands and the town of Auchinblae is situated the Free church, a neat well-finished building, but much smaller and of much humbler pretensions than its more aristocratic neighbour perched on the rock. A market for the sale of cattle and grain, is held at Fordoun station on each alternate Monday, from October to the end of May; and annual fairs at Auchinblae for the sale of cattle and the hiring of agricultural labourers, on the third Thursday of April (Paschal); on Wednesday after the second Tuesday of May (old style); the 26th of May (hiring); Paldy fair (sheep) first Wednesday; cattle, first Thursday; horses, first Friday after first Tuesday (old style) in July; on the day after Kincardine O'Neil in September: and on the 22nd November (hiring).

WITH THE VILLAGES OF PORT-LETHEN AND HILLSIDE.

BANCHORY parish lies on both sides the river Dee, near its confluence with the sea, and is partly in the county of Kincardine and partly in that of Aberdeenshire,—the river Dee being here the boundary. The parish, which is for the most part rugged, heathy and stony, extends about six miles along the river, with one extremity bounded by the sea: it contains the two small villages of HILLSIDE and PORT-LETHEN—the latter near the promontory of Girdleness, and now a quoad sacra parish and registration district. The Scottish North-Eastern Railway intersects the parish.

MARYCULTER lies on the south side of the Dee; extending from that river to the Grampians; it is of an oblong form, being six miles in length by two in breadth. The whole parish is rocky, and the surface of the land encumbered with large stones which are a great obstacle to agricultural improvements. The district is well wooded, and here and there are to be seen some thriving plantations.

PORT LETHEN is a Station on the Scottish North-Eastern Line—David Nicoll, station master

BANCHORY-TERNAN, DURRIS, ARDSTRACHAN.

BANCHORY-TERNAN is a parish lying on the banks of the Dee, further up that river than Banchory-Davenick; it is bounded by Strachan on the south, Durris on the east, and Midmar on the north. The village stands on the north side of the Dee, at a distance of 18 miles S.W. from Aberdeen. In the parish are two or three lochs, one of which has been recently drained and brought under cultivation. In the centre of it there was an artificial island, built of oak, bearing the ruins of an old mansion or lake house. The parish church, rather handsome, Free church, and an Episcopal chapel, are the places of worship. The supply of water to the city of Aberdeen is taken from the Dee at the western boundary of this parish, about three and a half miles above the village of Banchory.

DURRIS parish which extends about eight miles in length, by five and a half in breadth, lies on the south side of the Dee, from which the ground rises, and terminates in the ridge of the Grampian mountains. A great part of the parish has been enclosed, and great improvements effected. The parish is bounded by Maryculter and Fetteresso on the east, and Strachan, Glenbervie, and Banchory-Ternan on the west; from the latter Durris is about three miles distant. There are several lofty mountains in this district.

STRACHAN parish is bounded on the east by Durris, Glenbervie, and Fordoun, on the south also by the latter parish and Fettercairn, on the west by Lochlee, and on the north by Banchory-Ternan; it extends eleven miles in length by from five to seven in breadth, and is for the greater portion a mass of hills, some of which belong to the range of the Grampians; Clochnabane, more than two thousand three hundred feet high, rises within the parish, the land of which is low towards the north, on which quarter it is bounded by the Dee and its tributaries, and here it is tolerably well cultivated, and some of it planted.

POST OFFICE, BANCHORY, Betsy Johnston, Post Mistress.—Letters from all parts arrive from Aberdeen at nine morning, and at six evening, and are despatched thereto at twenty minutes past eight morning, and half-past eleven forenoon.

CONVEYANCE BY RAILWAY ON THE DEE SIDE LINE.

Station, BANCHORY,—Robt. Macpherson, station master
There are several trains daily, to & from ABERDEEN

BERVIE,

WITH THE VILLAGES AND PARISHES OF GOURDON, ARBUTHNOTT, AND KINNEFF WITH CATTERLINE.

BERVIE, (or INVERBERVIE as it is frequently written), is a royal burgh, the capital of its parish, and the chief town for many miles; 13 miles N. by E. from Montrose, 10 s. from Stonehaven, and 25 s. from Aberdeen; eligibly situated on the coast road from the last-named city to Dundee, and at the mouth of the Bervie, which river is crossed by a good bridge of a single arch, spanning one hundred and three feet. At the mouth of the river is a small basin which opens into an extensive bay, navigable for any vessel almost at any time. The basin could easily be converted into a very commodious and safe harbour, which would be the means of augmenting the general commerce of the place, and revive the fisheries on the coast. It is said that the city of Aberdeen, aware of the advantages that would arise from a place so admirably adapted by nature for a harbour, but entirely neglected by art, made overtures to the council of this burgh, some considerable time ago, to construct a harbour at their own expense, on certain conditions, but which were not acceded to. The principal trade of the town is the weaving of linen cloth and spinning linen. On the banks of the Bervie there are four mills employed in the latter operation, besides a woollen mill; and as a grain mart Bervie is conspicuous. Bervie is admirably adapted for the purpose of manufacture to any extent; the river is a fine stream, and in the driest season it has always abundance of water; it runs through a large valley, in which the first mill that was ever erected for spinning flax in Scotland stands. The town is well lighted with gas. Bervie was constituted a royal burgh by charter, from King David II., as a return for the kindness and hospitality with which he was received by the poor inhabitants, when he was forced in here by stress of weather; the place at which he landed is still called Craig David. James VI. renewed the charter, confirming all the privileges and immunities granted by David. The burgh is governed by a provost, three bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, and nine councillors. It joins with Montrose, Arbroath, Brechin, and Forfar, in returning one member to parliament. The sheriff's small debt court is held at Bervie on the third Mondays in January, April, July, and October. The places of worship are, a church of the Establishment and a Free church. The first-mentioned is a handsome modern building of Gothic architecture, and is the principal ornament of the town. The commerce of this place and adjoining villages will be greatly augmented by the new railway (Montrose and Bervie line), affording, as it does, direct communication between the two towns. The weekly market, considerable for grain, as before stated, is held on Wednesday, and the fairs on the Thursday before the 19th of May and September. GOURDON fishing village is one mile from Bervie.

ARBUTHNOTT parish is of an irregular triangular form, nearly five miles in length, bounded on the west by Fordoun, or the great hollow of the mearns, the streams of Bervie and Forthy forming this line of division, and on the north-east by Glenbervie and Kinneff. The celebrated Dr. Arbuthnott, the intimate friend of Pope and Swift, was the son of the minister and a native of this parish. Arbuthnott gives the title of Viscount to an ancient family of the same name, which became distinguished in the twelfth century. Sir Robert Arbuthnott, for loyalty to Chares I., was created a Baron and Viscount by that monarch.

KINNEFF, with which is incorporated the abrogated parish of CATTERLINE, lies on the sea coast south from Dunnotar, and bounded by Arbuthnott on the west, and Bervie on the south. It extends from the water of Bervie to the northern point about five miles along the coast, which is exceedingly bold and rocky. Upon the margin of the sea, not above a hundred yards distance from the church, are to be seen the ruins of a castle, from which it is supposed the parish has taken its name; and tradition assigns it as having been the residence of a Scottish monarch named Kenneth. At Catterline there is an Episcopal chapel, in connection with which there is a good school. Kinneff church is remarkable as being the place—in a hole under the pulpit of which—the Regalia of Scotland were deposited, from 1651 to the Revolution. These valuable memorials of Scottish royalty were ingeniously conveyed out of the Castle of Dunnottar, while besieged by General Lambert, by Mrs. Grainger, wife of the incumbent of the parish, and her servant girl.

DRUMLITHIE AND GLENBERVIE.

DRUMLITHIE is a village in the parish of Glenbervie, 18 miles N. from Montrose, 7 N. by W. from Bervie, and about 6½ S. by W. from Stonehaven: situated nearly in the centre of the east side of the county, on the road from the last-named town to Laurencekirk, and is a station on the Scottish North Eastern Railway. The village is an assemblage of ill-built houses, so perplexingly arranged as to constitute a bewildering labyrinth. The parish of Glenbervie extends upwards of six miles in length by a breadth of three in some parts, and five at others; bounded on the W. by the Water of Bervie and Fordoun, on the E. by Dunnottar and Fetteresso, on the S. and S.E. by Arbuthnott, and on the N. by the hills of Strachan and Durris. The soil in the upper part of the district is a blueish clay, in the lower a dry fertile loam. The northern part of the parish lies partly among the Grampian hills. The river Bervie bounds the district partly on the W. and the Carron has its source within it. The hamlet of GLENBERVIE, which stands in the vicinity of the former river, is a barony of the Douglas family. A Free church and an Episcopal chapel are in Drumlithie, and a church of the Establishment at Glenbervie. A fair is held on the first Thursday after the second Tuesday in October.

FETTERCAIRN.

IS a parish and village—the latter 98 miles N. by E. from Edinburgh, 12 from Montrose, 16½ from Stonehaven, and 11 N. from Brechin, situated on a small streamlet, a tributary to the North Esk. The latter river is crossed by a romantic bridge called the 'Bridge of Gannachy,' which springs from a precipitous rock, at either extremity, and is elevated to a great height above the water. The village is lighted with gas, and has the advantage of a branch of the City of Glasgow Bank, and there is a large distillery in the immediate vicinity. In the village square is the old cross of Kincardine, an erection of great antiquity. About one mile west is a ruin called Fenalla's Castle, connected with which is a singular tradition concerning the murder of Kenneth III. by a powerful lady named Fenalla, in revenge for the death of her son, who was slain by that monarch, in rebellion. Besides the handsome parish church, there is a Free church and an Episcopal chapel, and two libraries are maintained within the village. At one end of the village stands a graceful arch, recently erected to commemorate the visit of the Queen and Prince Consort on the 21st September, 1861. The Fettercairn Farmers' Club, of which Mr. Charles Durie is secretary, comprehends several contiguous parishes. The parish of Fettercairn lies at the foot of the lower range of the Grampians, and extends considerably into the Mearns: the ground on the west is light and sharp, with a small mixture of moss; on the east it becomes deeper of a fertile clay loam. The name of the parish is derived from a stupendous cairn of stone in the neighbourhood, a mountain monument to the heroes who died in some unrecorded battle. Fairs for cattle and hiring servants are held the day after old Whit Sunday and day after old Martinmas.

POST OFFICE, FETTERCAIRN, Catherine Duncan, Post Mistress.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Lawrencekirk) at twenty minutes before eight morning, and are despatched for all parts (to Lawrencekirk) at three afternoon, and on Sunday at a quarter before eleven morning.

JOHN'S HAVEN, BENHOLME AND ST. CYRUS.

JOHN'S HAVEN is a thriving seaport village, in the parish of Benholme, 14 miles S. from Stonehaven, and four from Bervie, situated at the bottom of a hill between the coast road and the sea, and a little off the main thoroughfare, between Aberdeen and Montrose; 29 miles S. from the former town, and nine N. from the latter. It contains an extensive manufactory for sail cloths, sackings, &c. which, with the weaving of linen cloths and fishing employ the majority of the inhabitants. There is a good brewery in the village. The parish of Benholme forms a square of nearly three miles, lying on the shore of the German Ocean, bounded the north by Bervie, and on the south by St. Cyrus. The land is level on the coast, and the interior consists of hill and dale: beneath the surface is deposited good freestone and limestone. The tower of Benholme, before the invention of gunpowder, was considered a strong place of defence. The places of worship are the parish kirk, a Free church, and one for United Presbyterians. The Montrose and Bervie Railway (recently opened) passes through the parish and has a station at John's Haven.

ST. CYRUS (sometimes called Ecclesgreig), is a parish and village—the latter situated four miles from John's Haven, between the coast and the road from Montrose, which passes through the district. The parish, which measures seven miles in length, by three in breadth, lies partly on the sea shore, having Benholme on the east, Garvock on the north, Marykirk on the north-west, and the North Esk river washes part of its western boundary. The places of worship are the Parish and Free Churches, there are three schools in the village: the Parochial, the Free Church, and an excellent Industrial school, built and endowed by the late General Straton, of Kirkside. The sea salmon fisheries along the coast of the parish are very valuable, the yearly rental of which amounts to about £2,500, and the river fishings to about £750. The surface of the parish is pretty level, but intersected with several glens and rivulets, and is elevated in some places to little hills. More than three-fourths is arable. The Burn in Den Fenella forms a beautiful cascade, by falling over a rock sixty-three feet in height. The ancient residence of the Barclay family, known by the name of the Kame of Mathers, stands in ruins on a peninsulated rock, the base of which is washed by the sea. The castles of Morphy and Lauriston are also ancient buildings. The parish contains limestone quarries, and plenty of excellent freestone. St. Cyrus is a station on the Montrose and Bervie line.

LAURENCEKIRK,

MARYKIRK, GARVOCK, AND THE VILLAGE OF LUTHERMUIR.

LAURENCEKIRK, the capital of its parish, is a thriving and respectable village, 93 miles N. by E. from Edinburgh, and 10 N. from Montrose, situated on the main road from Perth to Aberdeen, and it is a station on the railway to that city. This village which was formerly a mere hamlet, seated amidst an uncultivated tract of country, is indebted for the consequence it enjoys at the present day to Lord Gardenstone, a judge of the court of session, who, in the year 1772, took it under his fostering care and patronage. In 1779 he procured for the place the privileges of a burgh or barony, with the right of holding a weekly market. The village contains a main street, nearly a mile in length, one parallel to it, and two or three short ones branching from the principal streets, the whole well lighted with gas. It is governed by a bailie and four councillors, who are chosen every three years, and regulate the police, &c. A sheriff's small debts court is held here, three times a year. Branches of the Aberbeen Town and County Bank, and the North of Scotland Bank, are established in the town. The parish, which is sometimes called Conveth, is four miles in length, and three at its greatest breadth. A ridge of hills, stretches through its whole extent, from east to west, sloping gradually to the north and south; the small river Luther passes through the district, and numerous brooks intersect it. The name Laurencekirk is derived from the old parish Kirk dedicated to St. Lawrence. Besides the Established church, there is a Free church, and Episcopal and Independent chapels. A public hall is about to be erected, but the site has not yet (1866), been fixed upon. Fairs are held on the third Wednesday in January (St. Anthony's fair old style); and cattle fairs on the last Thursday in April, and Thursday after the third Tuesday in July, (St. James's fair—old style), and the first Thursday in November — (new style). Horse market on the Monday before the first Friday in March. Cattle, horse, and sheep, Thursday after second Tuesday in August — (old style), and Monday before last Wednesday in September.

The parish of MARYKIRK lies on the north bank of the North Esk, at the extremity of the Howe or Hollow of the Mearns, and is bounded by Garvock, St. Cyrus, and Laurencekirk on the east, Fettercairn and Fordoun on the north, and Fettercairn and the North Esk on the west: it is six miles in length, and five in breadth. The surface is level, and the soil, though various, is chiefly fertile; some fine plantations ornament the district, which is interspersed with a few handsome seats. The parish contains two villages, LUTHERMUIR and MARYKIRK; the latter is situated on the road about half way between Montrose and Laurencekirk.

The parish of GARVOCK lies south east of Laurencekirk, is post town, which is about two and a half miles distant from the centre of the parish. It length south westward is fully seven miles, and its greatest breadth is about four miles. It is bounded on the south by Marykirk, on the west by Laurencekirk and Fordoun, on the north by Arbuthnott, and on the east by Benholme and St. Cyrus. The Parish church, a plain building, situated about the centre of the parish, was erected in 1778. There are two schools in the parish, the Parochial, and a private one. About two-thirds of the parish is under cultivation, and the work of reclaiming and improving is still in progress. A cattle and feeing fair, of four days' in continuance, (called St. James's fair) used to be held on the hill of Garvock, about half a mile from the church, and was for some time the most important in the county, but has fallen greatly off and been transferred to Laurencekirk. On the summit of Garvock hill there are two large Druidical cairns.

POST OFFICE, LAURENCEKIRK, John Watt, Post Master.—Letters from all parts south, arrive at thirty five minutes past two, and at forty six minutes past eleven morning. From all parts north at twenty minutes six past one afternoon, and at twenty six minutes past five evening, (Sundays excepted) and are despatched to all parts north at ten minutes past two, and at fifteen past eleven morning; and to the south at one afternoon, and five evening, (Sundays excepted).

Letters are despatched to Garrock and Mill of Kincardine, at half past six morning.

STONEHAVEN,

WITH THE PARISHES OF COOKNEY, FETTERESSO, AND DUNNOTTAR.

STONEHAVEN (or Stonehive) is a seaport, and the county town of Kincardine, 94 miles N. by E. from Edinburgh, 68 N.E. from Perth, 66 S.S.E. from Banff, 35 N. by E. from Arbroath, 23 W. from Montrose, 15 S. from Aberdeen, and 10 N. of Bervie. It is situated within a mile of a station on the Scottish North Eastern line of railway on the coast of the North Sea, at the mouth of the Carron stream, in the bottom of a bay, and flanked on both sides by lofty hills. The place, which is considerable, though not a royal burgh, is composed of an old and a new town; the former lies on the south bank of the Carron, adjacent to the harbour, in the parish of Dunnottar; the other on a peninsula or angle, formed by the Carron and the Cowie, in the parish of Fetterresso: the two towns are connected by a bridge, forming a continuation of the road from the south to Aberdeen. The new town is laid out on a regular plan, having broad streets, with a square in the centre; in this square, stands a handsome market-house, erected in 1827, surmounted by a handsome spire 130 feet in height, and a news and reading room in the upper story, and shops beneath. The harbour is a natural basin, sheltered on the south-east by a high rock which projects into the sea, and on the north-east by a quay that affords every facility for loading or unloading vessels. The shipping of the port is chiefly employed in the coal and lime trade, and occasionally in exporting grain to Leith. During the season a herring-fishery is carried on, to the great advantage of the place. There are six vessels belonging to the port, of the aggregate burthen of 465 tons. The celebrated Glenury Distillery is in the vicinity, and there is besides an extensive woollen manufactory, a tannery, and a brewery. There are three banking houses, a savings' bank, and several good inns—Lynch's Station Hotel, at the railway station, has superior accomodation both for families and commercial gentlemen. The sheriff's ordinary court is held every Wednesday in time of session, and a sheriff's small debt court on the same day during the sitting of the first-mentioned court. A newspaper, the "Stonehaven Journal," is published here every Thursday. The established churches of Dunnottar and Fetteresso are situated near the town; there is also a Free church, an United Presbyterian, and an Episcopal chapel. There are three cemeteries in the proximity of the town—namely, at FETTERESSO and COWIE, one mile and a half respectively from the town, and at DUNNOTTAR one mile distant; there is also at the latter distance an attractive garden open to the public. The principal object that can awaken interest in the vicinity of Stonehaven is Dunnottar Castle, about a mile and a half south of the town: it is seated on a perpendicular rock, one hundred and fifty feet above the level of the sea, about three acres in extent, and almost separated from the land by a deep chasm. The entrance is by a square tower of great strength, within high-water mark; the skeleton of the structure still occupies one-half of the summit of the rock, and forms one of the most majestic piles of ruins in Scotland. This castle withstood a long siege by Cromwell's army, and its ultimate surrender was upon honourable terms; it was often used as a state prison, and several of the nonconforming presbyterian clergy were compelled to be its inmates. It was built during the contest between Bruce and Baliol, by an ancestor of the Marischal family. It was dismantled shortly after the civil war of 1715, when its proprietor, James, Earl Marischal, was attainted for high treason; since that period (the direct line of succession having failed), the castle became by purchase the property of the nearest heir male, Sir Alexanner Keith, of Dunnottar and Ravelston, Knight Marischal of Scotland, and is now the property of Sir Patrick Keith Murray, Bart. of Auchtertyre and Dunnottar. Though dismantled, the stone work of the fortress is yet pretty entire, there being in general nothing wanting except the roofs and the floors; the battlements, the formidable towers and airy turrets (full of loop-holes for the archer and musketeer), the hall for the banquet and the cell for the captive, are all alike entire, and their respective limits and divisions distinct. It was in this castle, during the Commonwealth, that the regalia of Scotland was placed, which was afterwards conveyed away and secreted under the pulpit in the parish church of Kinneff.

The regular weekly market is held on Thursday, and there is another for cattle and grain on that day from Martinmas to Candletma. Fairs, May 25th for hiring servants; on the third Thursday in June, the second Thursday in August (old style), for cattle; November 21st for hiring servants, and the Thursday before Christmas-day (old style), for cattle.

DUNNOTTAR, anciently spelt Dunoyter, is a parish of an irregular form, the eastern side running from Stonehaven to the south, a distance of five miles; from thence about five miles north, abutting on the parishes of Kinneff and Glenbervie, from thence descending to the Carron Water at the base of that hill, where Dunnottar and Glenbervie are met by the parish of Fetteresso. The principal object of interest in the parish is the castle previously mentioned, within the walls of which formerly stood the parish church; the seaward boundary of the parish is a continuous chain of rocks and cliffs containing many caverns, one of which extends more than 150 yards, which renders Dunnottar one of the most romantic places on the east coast. The old town of Stonehaven is in this parish, near to which is situated the Parish church.

COOKNEY was erected a quoad-sacra parish and registration district in 1859, taken from the northern side of Fetteresso. The Parish church which is about central, is five miles from Stonehaven and about a mile from the village of SKATERO, is bounded on the west by the parish of Durris, on the north by Maryculter and Banchory Davenick (that part known as the quoad-sacra parish of Port Lethen), on the east by the German Ocean, and on the south by Fetteresso; it is about six miles long from east to west, and four miles broad; the soil along the coast is well cultivated and fertile, but there is much barren land to the west, most of this was commonty till about seven years ago, when it was divided amongst the neighbouring heritors, and is now under cultivation and much improved. At MUCHALLS is a coast-guard station, and a station on the Scottish North Eastern Railway; and here fairs are held 1st Tuesday in May for cattle and horses, Tuesday before second Wednesday in June, first Tuesday in August, 1st Tuesday in October, (O.S.) for cattle and horses. There are two fishing villages, SKATERO and STRANATHRO in the parish.

FETTERESSO is a parish about ten miles in length and between five and six in breadth; it is bounded on the south by the parish of Dunnottar, on the west by Glenbervie, Durris, and Maryculter, on the north by Maryculter and Banchory Davenick, and on the east by the German Ocean. The northern part of the parish is Cookney, now created a separate parish for ecclesiastical and registration matters. The principal streams are the Carron and Cowie, which run from west to east: the former divides the parish from Dunnottar for about five miles, entering the sea at Stonehaven; the latter has a similar course and termination. Fetteresso Castle is the seat of R. W. Duff, Esq. M.P., and was once the ancient abode of the Earls Marischal, but since rebuilt and extended. The new town of Stonehaven is in this parish, near to which is the parish church also the village of COWIE, one mile and a distant, which contains a cemetery.

KINROSS-SHIRE.

THIS is a small inland county, situated on the western boundary of Fifeshire, towards its south-western quarter— from which it was severed in the year 1426; Fife also bounds it on the southern side, and Perthshire lies on its northern and on its western limits. At the revolution, Kinross being considered too small a county as it then stood, was enlarged by the addition of Orwell, Cleish, and Tulliebole, which parishes, before that period, formed a portion of Fifeshire. The general figure of the county is somewhat circular, although the line of its boundary is very irregular. It extends from east to west eleven miles, or rather more; and from north to south about nine miles and a half. The total superficies of the county amount to seventy-two square miles of land, and seven of lakes; of cultivated land about 27,700 acres, and of uncultivated about 18,400 acres. This is the smallest of the Scottish counties except Clackmannan, and in population numbers the least except Selkirk. Its name is significant of its local situation, importing the 'head of the peninsula.'

SOIL, SURFACE, PRODUCE, &c.—The boundaries or outskirts of the county are generally hilly; and the shire may be described as an open vale or plain, environed by uplands and hills. The Ochill hills, which separate the district from Strathearn, are the northern boundary; the Lomond hills are the eastern, Benarty hill the south-eastern, and Cleish hills the south and south-western; these eminences are generally adapted for pasture and the rearing of cattle; but they are likewise in several places, suited to cultivation, and exhibit many pleasing and productive arable fields. The original condition of Ross resembled that of the contiguous county of Fife, having been of a moory, mossy nature. Up to a comparatively recent epoch, the lands were bleak and unreclaimed—a circumstance partly attributable to a certain local characteristic, namely: the district has the remarkable peculiarity in its proprietary of being much divided into farms, each owned in feu by its tenant; there are, in consequence, more resident lairds in proportion to its extent, in this part of the country, than are to be found in any other division of Scotland. The farms, it appears, were feued about the commencement of the eighteenth century, from the house of Kinross to the tenants then in possession, whose descendants inherit the properties, paying for them an exceedingly trifling duty or quit-rent. The marches of the various farms not having been accurately defined, and being more confused by the practice of 'run-rig,' it was long before the county manifested any very active signs of improvement. Within the recollection of persons still living, few districts were worse cultivated or less profitable than Kinross-shire; but the prime minister Pitt's institution of rack-rent taxation, in conjunction with other circumstances (among which undoubtedly may be included the good example exhibited by neighbouring agriculturists), ultimately induced a spirited change; and now the progress of agriculture—the mode of draining, enclosing, and planting—can compete with those of Fife, or most other districts: drainage, on an extensive and effectual system, has been carried into operation on the Carse east from Loch Leven, and on its margin; in all directions, in this particular quarter, productive arable fields present themselves, where, only comparatively a few years ago, nothing met the view but desolate moors and sombrous mosses. At this day many good roads intersect the shire, and various parts of it are sheltered by thriving comfort-inspiring plantations. The mineralogy of Kinross-shire is a subject of limited importance; although coal abounds in some localities, no works for raising it have yet been established; whinstone has been found in various parishes, so has sandstone, of the best quality; of limestone there is plenty, and it has been wrought profitably.

RIVERS, LAKES, AND RAILWAYS.—There are no rivers of magnitude in this county; the only ones that can be named are the Gairney, on the south boundary of Kinross parish; the South Quelch, that runs below the town of Kinross, and the North Quelch, on the north boundary of the parish—all which, and a few rivulets beside, discharge themselves into Loch Leven. This beautiful and noble expanse of water (which we shall have to notice particularly under Kinross town), lies at the east end of a wide vale, and nearly in the centre of the county; the small river Leven issues from it, and pursues an easterly course through Fifeshire. Besides Loch Leven, there are a few minor lakes, or (as they are popularly termed) tarns, on the eminences above Cleish. On the Fife and Kinross branch of the North British Railway, there is a station at the town of Kinross; and also one on the Devon Valley branch of the same Railway, open for traffic as far as Rumbling Bridge; this will shortly be extended to Tillicoultry in Clackmannanshire, from whence the same line is already open to Alloa.

KINROSS-SHIRE comprises only four complete parishes, and three parts of parishes; it possesses only one town, Kinross—with a large populous village in its neighbourhood, called Milnathort. The county, which has no parliamentary burgh, joins with Clackmannanshire in returning one member to the imperial parliament.

KINROSS, MILNATHORT, FOSSOWAY, TULLIEBOLE,

AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

KINROSS, the capital of its county and parish, is a town of considerable antiquity, 27 miles N. from Edinburgh, 19 S.W. from Cupar Fife, 17 S. from Perth, and 10 N. from Dumfermline, which last-named town is approached by a branch line of the North British Railway. The town occupies a pleasant site at the foot of the open vale to which it gives name, on the north-western shore of Loch Leven. It formerly consisted of a number of sinuous lanes, composed of buildings of antique appearance, bordering on the lake; in later times it has undergone many extensive improvements in the erection of new houses, particularly in the main street, through which is the road to the north. In this street are the principal inns and shops. The principal trade here consists of the manufacture of woollen goods. Brewing, several corn mills, and the usual domestic trades, comprise the other branches. A newspaper called the 'Kinross-shire Advertiser' has been conducted here since 1847. As the capital of the county, the courts of the sheriffs sit here every Tuesday during session, and justice of peace courts are held as required. Years ago a spacious town hall was erected by subscription, on the site of the old parish church. The places of worship are the Parish church, a handsome erection of modern date; a Free church, and two churches for United Presbyterians.

Originally the vicinity of Kinross was dignified by a castle of great strength, situated on a promontory jutting into the lake, and of which the town was a dependance. This ancient stronghold, long the residence of the Earls of Morton, was removed upwards of a century ago, and the promontory is now occupied by Kinross House, a structure designed and built by Sir William Bruce, the architect of the modern part of Holyrood House, and many other mansions, in the style of the time of Charles II. The environs of the town derive much of their beauty from the pleasure grounds and exuberant plantations around this edifice, which stands near the northern entrance to the town, and opposite to the island and castle of Queen Mary, on Loch Leven. This noble sheet of water is ten miles in circumference, and contains four islands, the largest of which occupies about forty-eight English acres—upon this latter stood the ancient priory of St. Serf (or St. Servanus), of which only a fragment now remains. On another stand the ruins of the Castle of Loch Leven, once the seat of the Douglasses, and in recent times rendered celebrated by Sir Walter Scott, as the scene in his novel of the 'Abbot.' Here the unfortunate Queen Mary was confined; and a bunch of keys, supposed to be those which the Queen threw into the loch when she escaped was found a few years ago, and deposited in the antiquarian museum at Edinburgh. The place where the Queen landed, upon her escape from this island castle, May 2nd, 1568, was on the south side of the lake, and is still pointed out by the inhabitants to the numerous visitors who frequent this place in the summer time. There is a fine walk by the side of the water, which is much resorted to in fine weather. The loch is well stored with trou of a red colour and fine quality, eels, perch, pike, &c A market, principally for corn, is held on Wednesday and fairs on the fourth Monday of March, second Monday of June, fourth Monday of July, and fourth Monday of October. There is a station on the Fife and Kinros section of the North British Railway, at the eastern end of the town.

MILNATHORT, popularly designated Mills o' Forth, is a considerable village, in the parish of ORWELL, one mile north-east from Kinross. It is neatly built, and is one of the most thriving and industrious villages within an extensive circuit. It is a station on the Fife and Kinross branch of the North British Railway. A large linen manufactory has been recently established here, and the manufacture of woollen goods, wool spinning, and dyeing are also in full operation. The greater part of Orwell parish is fine arable land, well enclosed and planted, rising from the low shore of Loch Leven and the vale of Kinross, towards the north, in which direction it is hilly. On the low ground, towards the lake, stands the ancient ruined Castle of Burleigh, formerly the residence of Lords Burleigh. A church of the Establishment, a Free church, and an United Presbyterian church are the places of worship. A corn market is held on the same day as that of Kinross. Fairs, the second Monday in February, the first Monday in May, the first Monday in July, the last Monday in August, the first Monday in November, and the Monday before Christmas, in December.

FOSSOWAY and TULLIEBOLE is a parish 3 miles S.W. of Kinross; its size is about fifteen miles, by a width of three. Tulliebole Castle is the seat of the Rev. Sir Henry Wellwood Moncrieff. An Established and a Free church, together with a Parochial school, are in the parish.

KIRKCUDBRIGHTSHIRE,

COMMONLY called a STEWARTRY, but in reality and to all intents and purposes a sheriffdom or shire, lies on the south of Scotland, and forms the eastern and by far the most extensive portion of the ancient district of Galloway. It is bounded by Dumfries-shire on the east and north-east; on the south by the Solway Frith and the Irish Sea; by the county of Ayr on the north and north-west, and by Wigtonshire (or Western Galloway) and Wigton bay on the west. In extent it measures, from south-east to north-west, about forty-four miles, by a breadth varying from twenty to thirty miles, the narrowest part being on the north and towards its north-western limits: it comprises a superficies of 954 square miles, or 610,343 statute acres: about one half of the whole surface may be said to be brought into cultivation.

EARLY HISTORY.—It appears that the denomination of 'stewartry' originated at the period when, by the forfeiture of the possessions of the Baliols, the Cummins, and their various vassals, this district became the property of the Crown, when it is understood to have been first put under the authority of a royal STEWART; in subsequent times the office of stewart, in the appointment of the king, was one of much honour, and was often the subject of contest. For a considerable lapse of time, however, after the establishment of a separate stewartship, the district was still in some measure esteemed to be politically attached to Dumfries-shire, but this nominal connexion was formally dissolved before the civil wars in the reign of Charles I. From the force of ancient usage, the appellation of steward, instead of that of sheriff, has, down to the present day, been popularly continued, although, by the civil arrangements of modern times, there is not the least difference in the two offices. Events in early times, possessing considerable interest, are more immediately connected with Kirkcudbright, its capital—which was frequently visited by, and occasionally became the abode of royalty. Edward I. spent some time there during the warfare of 1300; and in 1455 it was visited by James II. in the course of his march through Galloway. A few years later, in 1461, Henry VI. with his queen and court, fled thither after his defeat at Towton; and in 1508 James IV. was hospitably entertained in that town.

SOIL, SURFACE, PRODUCE, AND MANUFACTURES.—The soil of the county is principally composed of a thin mould or a brownish loam mixed with sand—and is incumbent sometimes on gravel, and in many places on rock; the whole surface is interspersed with meadows, and mingled with moss. The shire has no statistical sub-divisions, except that four of the most northerly parishes—Carsphairn, Dalry, Kells, and Balmaclellan—are commonly designated the district of 'Glenkins.' The aspect of the country, however, forms a very natural distinction into two divisions: if a line be drawn from the centre of Kirkpatrick-Iron-Gray parish to the Gatehouse of Fleet, all to the north-west, with little exception, is so mountainous, that it may with propriety be termed a Highland district; while the south and east parts exhibit a fine champaign and cultivated country—a contrast strikingly obvious. The principal eminences in the shire, are, Criffill (or Crawfell), 1,800 feet; Cairnsmuir, 1,728; Bencairn, 1,200, and Cairn, 1,000 above the level of the sea. Anciently the greater proportion of the land was covered with a forest, which is now eradicated, or to be traced only in trifling remnants on the banks of the streams. It appears that, so early as the twelfth and thirteenth centuries, this hilly territory was under a productive process of agriculture, originated and improved by the assiduity of the monks of the different abbeys in the district; and it is upon record that in the memorable year 1300, when Edward I. subdued Galloway, he caused considerable quantities of wheat to be exported from the harbour of Kirkcudbright to Cumberland, and even to Dublin, to be manufactured into flour, in which state it was brought back to victual the various stronghold and castles held by that monarch. In these times the staple products were wheat and oats—the culture of barley, pease, and beans being very limited. This age of agricultural prosperity was succeeded by destructive intestine wars, fanaticism, improvidence, and consequent misery, which lasted four hundred years, and reduced the country to a desert. It was not until the beginning of the eighteenth century that any measures were adopted to form a recuscitation of its agricultural capabilities, which for so long a period had lain dormant. The enclosure of the land with fences was the first attempt of a series of improvements; but this judicious preliminary was encountered by a riotous opposition from the rural population, who rose in considerable numbers under the title of 'levellers,' and proceeded to demolish the newly-formed boundaries, under the influence of some extravagantly wild notions as to a natural general right in property; and they were not subdued until the most energetic measures were employed for that purpose: this mischievous result of ignorance having been overcome, however, and the 'levelling' delusion dissipated, the county steadily advanced in an accelerated progress of improvement; and towards the close of the same century the district could compete with Dumfries and other adjacent shires in agricultural prosperity. Planting has been introduced by several noblemen and gentlemen of the stewartry, and much has been accomplished in reclaiming moss lands. The number of horses, cattle, and sheep reared in the county is sufficiently large to evince the possession of much practical knowledge, and consequent success, in this branch of productive economy; and the breed of swine has increased to a prodigious extent, these animals being now a staple commodity both for home consumption and exportation. The district is very nearly destitute of coal, which, as well as the greater part of the lime used, is brought from Cumberland; and there is very little freestone. Marl is found in great plenty, especially in the loch of Carlinwark, which contains an inexhaustible store of the best shell-marl; ironstone, copper, barytes, and lead ore also abound, but the deficiency of coal presents an obstruction to either being made available for the smelting process. Besides the salmon fishings at the mouths of the rivers, the Solway Frith affords every opportunity for the capture of the inhabitants of the deep. The manufacture of linen, woollen, and cotton goods engage a small number of hands in the towns and villages.

RIVERS, &c.—Like other mountainous countries, this is intersected by numerous streams, which, uniting, form four considerable rivers; these are—the Dee, the Ken, the Cree, and the Urr. The Ken is considered the largest, receiving in its course numerous rivulets which drain the neighbouring hills, and even affording an asylum to the waters of the Dee, although the latter assumes the appellative privilege after entering the Ken. All these rivers rise in the north, and empty themselves into the Solway Frith or the Irish Sea. The smaller streams are the Fleet, the Tarf, the Deogh, and the Cluden. The Solway Frith, in a circular form, washes the coast of the stewartry, from the Nith to the Cree, a space of forty-five miles; and along the shore of this beautiful estuary the coast is bold and rocky, the cliffs in some instances rising to a great height.

The principal towns in the county are now connected with the north and south by means of the Glasgow and South-Western Railway to Kirkcudbright, and the Caledonian line from Castle Douglas, on by Parton, Creetown, to Kirkpatrick.

The shire, or stewartry, comprises twenty-eight parishes, and contains two royal burghs—Kirkcudbright and New Galloway; the latter, in conjunction with Wigtown, Stranraer, and Whithorn (in Wigtownshire), sends one member to parliament; and the stewartry, like the other counties in Scotland returns another.

AUCHENCAIRN AND DUNDRENNAN IN RERWICK.

AUCHENCAIRN, the principal village in the parish of Rerwick and Union, and Steward Court of Kirkcudbright, is 8 miles from Castle Douglas, 10 E. from Kirkcudbright, and 21 S.W. from Dumfries: situated on the main road between the two last named towns. It is now rising into a village of some importance, in consequence of its excellent sea-bathing for which purpose it is much frequented during the summer months. There are several mines in this neighbourhood, barytes, copper and iron, which are worked on a small scale. In the village are two hotels, Scott's Hotel and Watson's, both affording excellent accommodation to tourists and to the visitors. In the mouth of Auchencairn bay lies the small island of HESTON, which stands high out of the water, and affords excellent pasture for sheep, and there are rabbits in great numbers. A fair is held on the first Monday after the 16th of August.

DUNDRENNAN is a small village in the same parish as Auchencairn, four miles therefrom, deriving its chief, indeed only importance from having in its vicinity the ruined Abbey of Dundrennan, the greatest attraction in this part of the country. This abbey, the venerable remains of which stand about a mile and a half from the sea, was founded by Fergus, Lord of Galloway, in the year 1142. The church was built, as usual, in the form of a cross, with the spire rising two hundred feet from the centre. The body was one hundred and twenty feet in length, and on the south side of the church were the cloisters, with a grass plot in the centre. From what remains of the edifice, the whole must have been built in a style of great taste and architectural beauty. The buildings are now greatly dilapidated, and are almost entirely covered with a pale grey-coloured moss, which gives a character of peculiar and almost airy lightness to the lofty columns and gothic arches, many of which are entire. This sacred edifice afforded a temporary shelter to Mary Stuart during the last hours she spent in Scotland. Tradition has traced with accuracy her course from Langside to the scene of her embarkation for England. She arrived at this spot in the evening, and spent her last night within the walls of the monastery, then a magnificent and extensive building. The spot where she took boat next morning for the English side of the Solway is at the nearest point of the coast; the road from the religious establishment thither runs through a secluded valley of surpassing beauty and leads directly to the shore, where the rock is still pointed out by the peasantry from which the hapless queen embarked on her death-destined voyage: it is situated in a little creek, surrounded by vast and precipitous rocks, and called 'Port Mary,' in commemoration of the event. The scene is analogously wild and sublime; and besides being inspiritive of melancholy associations in the mind of the poet or romantic tourist, the coast here and in the neighbourhood merits the attention of the painter and the investigation of the mineralogist.

CASTLE DOUGLAS IN KELTON,

WITH THE VILLAGES OF BRIDGE OF DEE, KELTON HILL, GILSTON, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

CASTLE DOUGLAS is a modern, neat and thriving town and burgh of barony, in the parish of Kelton, Parochial Union and Steward and Commissary Court of Kirkcudbright, 90 miles S. S. W. from Edinburgh, 18 W. by S. from Dumfries, 15 N. E. from Gatehouse, and 10 N.N.E. from Kirkcudbright; situated on the road between Gatehouse and Dumfries, in a pleasant fertile district on the banks of the Carlinwark water, from which lake the original name of the place was derived. It is a station on the Castle Douglas and Dumfries line of Railway. In 1792 it was erected by the proprietor into a burgh of barony by its present appellation, and its government vested in a provost, two bailies, and seven councillors. Eighty years ago it was composed of but a few detached houses; it has now upwards of four hundred and fifty respectable dwellings, laid out in regular streets, the principal one lining the public road. Altogether Castle Douglas may be considered one of the most respectable and prosperous market towns, although not of remote origin, in the south of Scotland. The new Town Hall is a handsome structure, situated in St. Andrew street, it is built of red sandstone, at a cost of £1,300. In connection with it is a market hall and reading room, and a court is also held in it on the first Monday of each month for the recovery of small debts. In the town are branches of the Bank of Scotland.

the British Linen Company, the Union Bank of Scotland, and the National Bank; these branches facilitate its monetary transactions. A new building has just been erected for the use of the National Bank, it is a handsome structure of granite. A National Securies Savings' Bank was established in 1840, it is a flourishing institution, and has been the means of doing much good. The number of depositors was in 1865, 766, and the amount of deposits £11,324 14s. 10d. On the south-west side of the town are the ruins of the ancient castle of Threave; and on its south-eastern quarter stands the modern and elegant mansion of Gilston Castle, (formerly called Douglas Castle), now the residence of Mrs. Maitland Kirwan. Carlinwark lake, before mentioned, is upwards of a mile in length, and occupies one hundred and eighteen acres; before it was partially drained, however, by the canal cut from it to the river Dee, its area was much greater. It contains a number of small islands, one of which, in the middle of the lake, has been bound round its base with huge frames of oak; but whether the island has been artificially formed upon them, as some think, or they have been placed there with intent to support some vast superstructure, cannot now be decided. The lake is plentifully stored with pike and perch. Two miles S. W. from Castle Douglas, is the Established church; it is a plain structure, but lately ornamented with a handsome belfry and a fine-toned bell, at a cost of £70, the gift of gentlemen in Glasgow. The church is capable of accommodating 1,000 persons, all the seats being either allocated to the proprietors, or let to the parishioners, of Kelton. The Rev. Samuel Cowan is the present minister. The Free Church, situated in Castle Douglas, is a new building, with a red sandstone steeple. The United Presbyterian and Reformed Presbyterian Churches have no pretentions to architectural display, the latter has a membership of 260, and is seated for 500 persons. The Roman Catholics have also a small chapel. The Episcopal Church, which is dedicated to 'St. Ninians,' is a handsome granite structure, in the early English style of architecture. A Parochial school, and one connected with the Free church, are in Castle Douglas. Castle Douglas and its vicinity appears to have been the arena of much contest during the feudal system, when the ancient Douglasses dwelt in the castle of Threave, and were lords of this district; for on the west side of the town are still visible encampments and breastworks, evidently thrown up against the castle; and on the south-west bank of the lake is a spot still termed the 'gallows lot' or 'plot,' said to have been the place of execution in former time. Near the head of the lake before noticed lived, it is said, three brothers, by trade smiths; they made the large cannon called 'Mons Meg,' shown at Edinburgh Castle: it was forged in staves, and hooped round like a cask. The market, a large one, for grain in winter, and cattle in summer, is held on Mondays; the grain is sold by sample, and exported, some to England, and some to the north of Scotland. Fairs, February 11th, or the following Monday, for horses; the last Monday in March, for hiring servants; September 23rd, or the following Monday, for hiring and for horses, and November 13th, or the following Monday, for horses.

KELTON HILL (or Rhone House) is a small village, in the same parish, and about two miles and a half from Castle Douglas. Of the extensive horse fairs formerly held here only one is now maintained—the others being transferred to its more fortunate neighbour, Castle Douglas. The fair still retained is held June 17th (old style), or the following Tuesday, and is a considerable one for horses and hiring harvest servants.

Nearly two miles from Carlinwark lake, in Kelton parish, is the small village of GILSTON or GELSTON, and its castle, formerly called Douglas Castle, but now Gilston Castle, and then the seat of the proprietor Sir William Douglas, the founder of Castle Douglas. The present building, modern and elegant, is the residence of Mrs. Maitland Kirwan. About two miles on the road towards Kirkcudbright is a small village called the BRIDGE OF DEE, a station on the Kirkcudbright branch of the Castle Douglas and Dumfries Line.

POST OFFICE, CASTLE DOUGLAS, Margaret Green, Post Mistress.—Letters from all parts arrive (by Carlisle and Dumfries) at nine minutes past nine morning, and are despatched thereto at twenty-five minutes past four afternoon.

CREETOWN IN KIRKMABRECK.

IS a small town and burgh of barony, in the parish of KIRKMABRECK, and Union of Kirkcudbright, 117 miles S. W. from Edinburgh, twelve W. from Gatehouse, about six S.E. from Newton Stuart, and three from Wigton, across the ferry. It was formerly called Ferry-Town of Cree, and derived that appellation, doubtless, from its situation—the town being seated on the east side of the creek of the river Cree, at the head of Wigton bay, and opposite the peninsula, on which stands the town of Wigton. It is a place of but little consequence as connected with commerce, the only trade it possesses being almost confined to the importation of coal and lime, and the exportation of grain and granite. There are two granite quarries, the granite being of a very fine quality; that worked by Messrs. Forrest & Co. is used extensively for monumental purposes, the other quarry is worked by the Mersey Dock and Harbour Board; lead and copper is also found in the hills above the village, and is worked by a company called the South of Scotland Mining Company. The old mail road from Portpatrick to Dumfries passes through the town, and there is a station on the Portpatrick Railway, within a mile distant. This place is the property of Captain George Grant, whose mansion is a great ornament to it; and there some few other handsome residences in the neighbourhood. The church, erected in 1834, is a neat building; connected with it is a public school.

POST OFFICE, CREETOWN, Thomas M'Michael, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Castle Douglas) at twenty minutes past ten morning, and fron Newton Stewart at twenty minutes past four afternoon, and are despatched to Newton Stuart at twenty minutes before ten morning, and to all parts at twenty-three minutes past three afternoon.

CROSSMICHAEL, PARTON, AND CORSOCK.

CROSSMICHAEL is a parish and village in the Parochial Union of Kirkcudbright. The village is a small one, 91 miles S.S.W. from Edinburgh, 19 S.W. from Dumfries, and 9 S.S.E. from New Galloway, pleasantly situated on the banks of the Dee, which river is crossed, about a mile and a half from the village, by an elegant stone bridge, over which passes the high road leading to Lawrieston and Castle Douglas, Crossmichael being distant five miles from the former town and three and a half from the latter. In the village is the parish church, the patron saint of which, prior to the Reformation, was St. Michael, and hence the name, though of the cross there are neither remains or traditions preserved. The parish lies nearly in the centre of the stewartry, having the Urr water on the east, and the Dee or Loch Ken on the west. Two small lakes, which have an outlet to the Dee water, furnish good perch and pike fishing. A fair is held on the 29th of October if it falls on a Thursday, if not, then on the Thursday after.

PARTON parish lies along the banks of the Dee, that water and the Urr being its western boundary; it extends from six to seven miles in length, its breadth varying from four to six. A large portion of the parish is hilly, heathy, and pastoral, especially in the northern quarter; towards the Dee the land is flat and arable, and under cultivation. What may be called the village, which contains but a few houses, the church (a neat building erected in 1834), and the manse, is about three miles from Crossmichael. The manse occupies a very pleasant situation fronting the river, and is surrounded by hills and wood. There are several handsome residences in this parish, among which may be mentioned Parton-place, the residence of B. Rigby Murray, Esq., of Manchester.

CORSOCK, formerly in Parton parish, is now a parish (quoad sacra) of itself, for ecclesiastical purposes only.

POST OFFICE, CROSSMICHAEL, John Kirkpatrick, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive by messenger (from Castle Douglas) at eleven forenoon, and are despatched thereto at ten minutes past three afternoon.

Station, at PARTON, James Mirrie, col-

DALBEATTIE-IN-URR AND PALNACKIE IN BUITTLE.

DALBEATTIE, is a burgh in the parish of URR, Union and Steward Court of Kirkcudbright, 87 miles S.S.W. from Edinburgh, 13½ N. by E. from Kirkcudbright, the like distance S.W. from Dumfries, and 6 from Castle Douglas, most eligibly situated on the Dalbeattie burn, a rivulet which falls into the water of Urr, which latter is here navigable for vessels of seventy or eighty tons. This harbour which is called Dub-o-Hass, is about five miles from the Solway Frith, and is greatly improved. A line of railway from Dumfries to Portpatrick, Castle Douglas, and Kirkcudbright passes through this place, and possesses a station here. The burgh has great advantages in respect to situation for a maritime trade, having a communication by sea with the western ports, and, by means of the before mentioned railway, with many large inland towns; and it possesses some large falls of water, capable of turning any kind of machinery. The mills now in operation are, a paper, a bobbin, a corn, and a small woollen mill, and two for sawing timber—the whole propelled by water; there is also an extensive scrap iron forge, the hammers of which are also worked by the same power. Large granite quarries are in this neighbourhood; that worked by the Dalbeattie and Kirkconnel Granite Company being the largest; this company are at present supplying the granite for the formation of the Thames embankment, the Messrs. Newall have also extensive granite polishing works. In the village are places of worship for Presbyterians, Evangelical Unionists, and Roman Catholics; there is also a mechanics' institute and reading room, two comfortable inns, and a fine bowling green. About four miles north-east from Dalbeattie is Corra Castle, formerly the residence of Lord Herries, but now the property of the Maxwells of Terregles. It is a fine old ruin, and mentioned as the place where Mary, Queen of Scots passed a night, on her way for embarkation at the Solway Frith to England, after the battle of Langside Moor: the remains of the bed in which she slept is still in Terregles House. Within the parish, on the banks of the river, about a mile below Urr Church, is the Mote of Urr, an artificial mount rising from the centre of elevated circles, and used in primitive times as a court of judicature by the petty chiefs of this district of Galloway. The government of the burgh is vested in nine commissioners, who are elected by the ratepayers of the three wards, into which the burgh is divided. The town is lighted with gas.

PALNACKIE or GARDEN, is the principal village in the parish of Buittle, Parochial Union and Steward court of Kirkcudbright, 18 miles S.W. from Dumfries, 14 N. from Kirkcudbright, and 6 S. of Castle Douglas; agreeably situated on the water of Urr, where there is a good harbour, having, at ordinary spring tides, a depth of thirty feet water, and capable of receiving vessels of two hundred tons burthen. Since the extension of the railway system in the stewartry, the shipping trade here has greatly fallen away. It used to be chief port for supplying the surrounding neighbourhood with coal and various other sea borne necessaries. The parish is bounded on the east by the Urr, on the south by the Solway Frith, and on the west by Kelton. It is a fertile and agricultural district, eight miles in length, three in breadth.

GATEHOUSE-OF-FLEET AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

GATEHOUSE is a neat modern town partly in the parish of ANWOTH, but chiefly in that of Girthon, and Union of Kirkcudbright, 105 miles S.S.W. from Edinburgh, 50 miles east of Portpatrick, 33 S.W. from Dumfries, and 8 W. from Kirkcudbright; charmingly seated in a romantic and fertile vale, embosomed within hills and lofty eminences, which form a spacious and delightful amphitheatre. Some of the hills have their sides clothed, and their summits crowned with woods, interspersed with rich pasturage; while the higher and more distant mountains penetrate the clouds. The town is well built, regular, and clean, the houses being generally of the same height, the streets running in straight lines, and crossing each other at right angles. A good stone bridge crosses the Fleet, connecting the principal part of the town with that in Anwoth parish. At the foot of the town flows the small river Fleet, which here meets the tide, and becomes navigable for vessels of sixty tons burthen; and the navigation of the river has been considerably improved by the late Mr. Murray, who, at a cost of £3,000 cut a canal in a straight line, which, besides deepening the river, reclaimed many acres of land, since which a commodious quay has been constructed by Mr M'Adam, at an expense of £600, and he has received the thanks of the ship owners of Kirkcudbright, for his spirited enterprise, by which their shipping has been so greatly benefitted. The exports of Gatehouse are principally grain; and its imports lime and coal. There are some saw mills propelled by water power. Mines of lead and copper have been discovered in the neighbourhood, which have been wrought to some advantage; specimens of copper from the Enrick mine, shewn at the exhibition of 1851, were pronounced to be the richest in Europe. Gatehouse was erected into a burgh of barony in 1795, through the interest of the late Mr. Murray; its municipal government is vested in a provost, two bailies and four councillors. A burgh court, for the recovery of small debts, not exceeding £5, is held every fortnight, and a justice of the peace court sits every month, for the parishes of Girthon and Anwoth. The Parish church, which is a commodious building, was erected in 1817, and its site well chosen. The Free church, at the other end of the town, is also a spacious and handsome building, and contiguous to it is a church for the United Presbyterians. The Parochial school is well attended; a masonic lodge, a library containing upwards of 1,000 volumes, and a reading room well supplied with newspapers and periodicals, have their respective members and supporters. In this neighbourhood, in the parish of ANWOTH, are the ancient castles of Rusko and Cardoness; a mile south of the town, stands Cally, the noble residence of the proprietor, H. G. Murray Stewart, Esq; and at the distance of about two miles, are the neat villas of Ardwall and Cardoness. The market is held on Saturday; and the fairs on the first Monday after the 17th June (old style), and a cattle market, or fair, the third Saturday in September.

CARRIERS

To KIRKCUDBRIGHT, Margaret Beattie, from her house, Cross street, on the arrival of the Countess of Galloway steam packet, day uncertain

KIRKCUDBRIGHT,

TONGLAND, RINGFORD, AND TWYNHOLM.

KIRKCUDBRIGHT is a royal burgh, the seat of a presbytery, capital of the stewartry, a parish, and in parochial union of the same name, 100 miles S.S.W. from Edinburgh, 55 E. from Port Patrick, and 28 S.S.W. from Dumfries. It occupies a peninsular situation on the east of the Dee, about six miles from the confluence of that river with the Solway Frith, is a town of considerable antiquity, but of its origin there is no authentic or even traditionary record; but that Saint Cuthbert's Church was erected so long ago as the eight century is unquestionable. The establishment of this church was followed by the construction of a small fort by the lords of Galloway, which in after-times was superseded by a castle in the proprietary of the Crown, by whose authority the place was put under the government of a constable. During the domination of the Douglasses in Galloway, Kirkcudbright became a burgh of regality under their influence: on their forfeiture, James II. erected the town into a royal burgh, by charter dated at Perth, 20th October, 1455: this grant was renewed and confirmed by Charles I., on the 20th July, 1633: and the burgh has since been under the government of a provost, two bailies, and thirteen councillors, with a treasurer and chamberlain; it joins with Dumfries, Annan, Sanquhar and Lochmaben in returning a member to parliament. The revenue of the corporation is considerably increased by the salmon fishings in the Dee; and the town derives a certain degree of consequence and advantage from being the seat of the Steward and Commissary Courts.

Kirkcudbright which has been materially improved, at the present day presents an aspect remarkably pleasing: within, it is regular, clean and neat, and externally it appears embosomed in the bountiful foliage of a fine sylvan country. It is composed of six or seven distinct streets, built at right angles with each other; the houses, which are for the most part two stories high, have a respectable and comfortable appearance, and at once bespeak the taste and easy circumstances of the inhabitants. The stewartry buildings and old gaol erected in 1810, exhibit a highly imposing appearance; and from one of the lofty towers which surmount the latter, an extensive view may be obtained of the beautiful environs of the town, including the ruins of the ancient castle of Kircudbright, built in 1582, by M'Clellan, ancestor of the Lords Kirkcudbright. The former gaol and court-house is a very curious old edifice (with the market cross stuck up against it), supposed to have been erected about the middle of the sixteenth century. The new prison erected for the Stewartry in 1835, is a plain oblong building, containing twenty-six cells. The burgh has a little shipping trade, and a productive fishery, and the intercourse with Liverpool, by steam navigation, gives animation to the town, and a stimulus to its trade. The manufacture of hosiery exists here to a limited extent, and the shops and inns are very respectable—of the latter, the 'Royal' Hotel and the 'Commercial' are the principal. The harbour is the best in the stewartry, at ordinary spring tides the depth of water is thirty feet, and at the lowest neap-tides eighteen feet. The river is navigable for two miles above the town, to the bridge of Tongland, which is constructed of one arch of one hundred and ten feet span, and picturesquely blends with the surrounding landscape. As yet there is no bridge across the Dee at Kirkcudbright, and passengers and carriages have to be ferried over in a flat-bottomed boat, or sort of floating bridge of peculiar formation: in stormy weather, however, or when there is an excessive current, this mode of conveyance is not without danger. A handsome bridge, however, is about to be erected at this point. There is a regular communication kept up between this place and Liverpool, by means of a steam-vessel, at least once a week.

The Established Church is of recent erection, with nave and transepts, and a fine tower surmounted by a spire; it is a very tasteful structure, built wholly of stone, and stands in the centre of a beautiful plantation through which are public walks. The Free Church is a handsome building adjoining the Johnstone Academy. In High-street is a neat chapel in which the United Presbyterian congregation worship. The ancient church has been pulled down, with the exception of a fragment, enclosing a venerable monument in memory of a former Lord Kirkcudbright; a recumbent figure of whom is in fine preservation. This portion of the ancient church is now appropriated to the Countess of Selkirk's school. The academy, or grammar school, is a handsome edifice, comprising a spacious room for a public subscription library. The Johnstone's Free School is a chaste stone building, with centre wings, and a handsome tower, it is for the tuition of both sexes, and was opened September 12th, 1848. There are in the town, news and billiard rooms, a masonic lodge, and a mechanics' institute. The environs of Kirkcudbright are truly delightful; the rising grounds on each side of the river from Tongland to the sea, are embellished with thriving plantations; and the general prospect, both marine and inland, is really lovely. St. Mary's Isle, a beautiful spot, the seat of the Earl of Selkirk, is about a mile from the town. The burgh is amply supplied with all domestic necessaries, and provisions are comparitively cheap. The market day is Friday, and there are two fairs, namely, on the 12th of August or following Friday, and the 29th of September or Friday after.

TONGLAND or TONGUELAND is a parish in the Union and Stewart Court of Kirkcudbright. A Parish Church, a Free Church, and a Parochial School are here.

TARFF is a station in this parish, on the Kirkcudbright branch of the Glasgow and South-Western Railway; passengers for Gatehouse, seven miles distant, make use of this station.

RINGFORD or RED LION is a small village in Tongland, situated on the road between Twynholm and Castle Douglas.

TWYNHOLM is a parish and village; the latter, a small one, is situated three miles from Kirkcudbright, on the main road from Gatehouse to Castle Douglas. The soil is fertile, and the surface of the district rises into many small hills, partly arable. Of the extensive woods with which this part of Galloway was formerly covered, the only remains now existing are around the old castle of Campstone, a building pleasantly situated on an eminence nigh to the junction of the rivers Dee and Tarf. The village contains a small neat Church of the Establishment, and a Parochial School.

KIRKPATRICK-DURHAM,

OLD BRIDGE OF URR, AND SPRINGHOLM.

KIRKPATRICK DURHAM, is a parish and village—the latter a small one, 85 S.S.W. from Edinburgh, 14 S.E. from New Galloway, 13 W. from Dumfries, 7 E. from Parton, and 6 N. from Castle Douglas. The parish which is skirted by the Urr water on its western side, derives its name from the old church dedicated to St. Patrick, and Durham, a hamlet where it stood—the latter appellation signifying the 'hamlet on the water.' The church is in the Gothic style, with a handsome tower, erected on the site of the old church, built two centuries ago; the is also a Free church. Formerly a woollen mill furnished employment to many inhabitants of the village, but it is now undistinguished by manufactures of any kind, and is a place of no trade but that which belongs to a few shops for the accomodation of the inhabitants. The parish, which is between nine and ten miles in length, and about four miles in breath, is partly pastoral and partly arable; the former character prevailing in the north, the latter in the south of the district. A fair is held on the first Thursday after the 17th of March, (old style.)

OLD BRIDGE OF URR is a small village in the parish of, and two miles from Kirkpatrick-Durham; seated on the banks of Urr Water and contains but a few houses and no business worthy of notice.

SPRINGHOLM is a small village one mile from Kirkpatrick, on the road to Dumfries. It contains a small Independent chapel, in which no worship is at present (1866) performed, built about the year 1806: a monument in front of the chapel, was erected by public subscription to commemorate the memories of those brave convenanters, who lost their lives in defence of their principles.

NEW GALLOWAY,

WITH THE PARISHES OF BALMACLELLAN, DALRY, AND CARSPHAIRN.

NEW GALLOWAY is a small town and royal burgh, in the parish of Kells Union, and Steward Court of Kirkcudbright, 84 miles S.S.W. from Edinburgh, 25 W. from Dumfries, 18 N.E. from Newton-Stewart, 14 N.W. from Castle Douglas, and 8 N.W. from Parton, pleasantly situated on the west bank of the river Ken, over which was thrown in 1822, an elegant stone bridge of 5 arches; this structure lying in the valley below the town, has a very pleasing effect; at its completion, a dinner was given by the late Lord Viscount Kenmure, to fourteen of the oldest inhabitants of the town, whose united ages amounted to 1,264 years. The houses of the town stretch along the public road, and form a tolerably well-built street. The business of the place is confined to the local domestic retail and handicraft branches. Galloway's burghal charter was conferred by Charles I. and the municipal government is vested in a provost, two bailies and fifteen councillors. A justice of peace court is held on the first Monday in every month, for the recovery of debts under £5; attached to the court is a criminal and debtors' gaol, with a steeple and town clock. The burgh unites with Wigtown, Stranraer and Whithorn in returning one member to parliament. On the north side of the town, within the distance of half a mile, is the parish church, a neat stone edifice, with a square tower in the centre, built in 1822; in the same year a Sunday school was established, in which upwards of one hundred children are gratuitously taught by the inhabitants. At a short distance south of the town stands the ancient castle of Kenmure once a place of considerable strength; Mary Queen of Scots lodged in it one night, on her way from this country to England. Loch Ken, which joins the town, is four miles and a half long, and in many places more than a mile broad; it abounds with pike and perch, and some of the former have been caught of the weight of fifty pounds. There is a commodious hotel in the town, the Kenmure Arms. The nearest railway station is five miles distant. Fairs are held on the first Wednesday after the 12th of April, the first Wednesday after the 12th of July, the first Wednesday after the 12th of August, and the first Wednesday after the 12th of November.

DALRY (or St. John's) is rather a populous village, in the parish of its name, lying on the east bank of the river Ken; the southern portion of the district lies in a beautiful valley, composed of rich arable land; the high grounds are pastoral and graze considerable numbers of cattle and sheep. The village of Dalry (the name of which signifies 'the dale of the king,') is surrounded with delightful scenery; and there is a good hotel (the Plough) at the command of the visitor. In 1858 the Town Hall or (St. John's Hall) was erected; it is used for the purpose of holding public meetings, lectures, &c. it was built by subscription at a cost of nearly £400, and is a neat ornament to the place. There are several lakes in the parish; the largest, called Loch Invar, covers an area of fifty acres: in the lake stands the remains of an ancient castle, formerly belonging to the Gordons, Knights of Lochinvar, and latterly Viscounts of Kenmure.

CARSPHAIRN, a parish and village is situated near the river Deogh; the village contains a parish kirk, the manse, a Parochial school, and a few scattered houses. The parish is somewhat extensive, but thinly populated; it is the most northerly and mountainous district in the stewartry, and is chiefly devoted to grazing. This parish, with those of Dalry, Kells and Balmaclellan, are designated the district of Glenkens—named for the true breed of black-faced sheep and black cattle, as also for good horses of the Galloway breed.

The small village of BALMACLELLAN, in the parish of its name, stands on the opposite side of the Ken to New Galloway, not far from the confluence of the stream with the head of Loch Ken, twelve miles south west of Moniaive. The parish is of a moory character, interspersed with some inconsiderable lakes.

LAWRIESTON IN BALMAGHIE, AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

LAWRIESTON is a small village in the parish of BALMAGHIE, 23 miles W. from Dumfries, 10 N. from Kirkcudbright, the like distance S.S.E. from New Galloway, and 7 N.W. from Castle Douglas. On the north-west the village is skirted by a mountainous district, which abounds with various kinds of game: on the east the land is more fertile. The parish has several small lakes and a number of mineral springs; among the latter Lochenbreck Well is a place of some resort in the summer. About a mile west of the village is the mansion of William Kennedy Lawrie, Esq., J.P., the principal proprietor of it; and three miles to the east stands the Parish church, with which a school is connected. A Free church is in the village, also a school belonging to that denomination.

POST OFFICE, LAWRIESTON, William M'Vitae, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Castle Douglas) at twelve noon, and are despatched thereto at two afternoon.

NEW ABBEY,

BEESWING, KIRKBEAN, WEST PRESTON, MAINSRIDDLE, SALTURNESS, KIRKGUNZEON, COLVEND, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

NEW ABBEY is a parish and village in the Union of Kircudbright, and Steward Court of the shire. The village, a small one, is 80 miles S. from Edinburgh, 12 E. from Dalbeattie, and 7 S. by W. from Dumfries, situated at the eastern extremity of the county, near to the mouth of the Nith. The parish, which was originally called Kirkinder, takes its present name from the once celebrated religious establishment of New Abbey, a monastery founded in the 13th century, for the Cistercian order of monks, by Dovergilla, daughter of Alan, Lord of Galloway. The ruins, which occupy an area of two hundred and forty by one hundred and fifty feet, are supported on arches and Gothic pillars, and the area itself is used as a burial ground for Roman Catholics. The extreme outer walls, or precincts, are traced to an extent of fourteen acres. To the north-east are seen the ruins of the Abbot's house, and the footpath between the two buildings, a mile long, is still the kirk road. On the north and south lie the woods of Shambellie, and on the south Loch Kindar, and the dark braes of Criffle, the lofty hill of which rises to the height of two thousand feet above the sea, from which it is a mile distant. Besides that of Kindar, there are two other lakes in the parish, namely, Lochend and Craigend. Near the former is the spot where one of the early covenanters of this district met an untimely end. The school of Kessock stands on the edge of the lake; and the parish kirk, which was built with part of the ruinous materials of the abbey, is situated on the south side of the ruins. On the Glen Hill, a continuation of the Criffle range, sands a monument, erected in commemoration of the battle of Waterloo. It is of spiral form, ninety feet high, with a winding stair within. The base bears an inscription laudatory of the British troops and their allies.

KIRKBEAN is a parish and village—the latter very inconsiderable, is situated in the northern part of the parish, about a mile from the sea, on the road to Dumfries. This little place possesses some notoriety, if not distinction, from having been the birth-place of John Paul, otherwise Paul Jones, a 'sea adventurer,' who was born in 1745, and was the son of an honest gardener in the place. The walk between Kirkbean and Southwick, a distance of three miles, is considered the prettiest in the stewartry. On a fine clear day the Isle of Man and the Cumberland coast may be plainly seen. There are several handsome residences in the parish, among which may be mentioned the residence of Mark Stewart, Esq., of Southwick. The conspicuous mountain, called Criffle, stands partly within this parish, and within that of New Abbey; and there are within the former, traceable ruins of the castles of Cavens and Weaths, both of which were the property and occasional residence of the Regent Morton. There are several other small villages in the parish; MAINSRIDDLE, containing a Free and an United Presbyterian Church; WEST PRESTON, and SALTURNESS, the latter village being situated at the extreme point of the coast, which runs out to the Solway Frith. On the point is a lighthouse.

COLVEND is a parish adjoining that of Kirkbean; it is entirely agricultural, and is only remarkable for the beauty of its scenery.

KIRKGUNZEON is a parish lying west from New Abbey, and is a station on the Castle Douglas and Dumfries Railway.
